ALLIES ADVANCE IN NORTH FRANCE

SUBMARINE SINKS SHIP

Predreadnaught Formidable, According to Paris Despatch, Was Sunk Near Portsmouth—141 Men Saved Including 14 Officers.

Paris, Jan. 2.—Numerous small gains, and artillery firing all along the line in northern France are the only things reported in the French war office statement issued at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Three more rows of houses have been taken at Steinbach, making the most important military move of yesterday. The statement says:

"During the days of December 31 and January 1, the enemy made different attacks upon several points of the front, which were easily repulsed. In the region to the north of the Lys during the day of January first there was a very violent artillery combat, which took place upon the sand at Nieuport and Zonnebeke.

"At St. Georges the enemy has not been able to continue his counter attacks, and we have maintained all our gains. In the region of Arras, Albert and Royce some artillery duels have taken place. The enemy has blown up two of our artillery wagons between Beaumetz and Achiourt. We have blown up two pieces of the German trenches at Parviller and at La-Boisselle and silenced the fire of the Minnenwerfer (German mine thrower), which the Germans had established before Fricourt.

"Our artillery has also obtained very good success in the region of the Aisne, where it has silenced the enemy's artillery and dispersed the German troops who attempted several concentrations.

"The region of Rheims has been very violently bombarded by the enemy.

"In the region of Perthes we have captured and retained a forest located two kilometres northeast of Mesnil le Murlus. The enemy has not made any counter attacks.

"In the Argonne, in the forest of La Grugie the small German advances that were made yesterday have not developed further. We have regained some of the ground, and we maintain our positions strongly.

THREE NEW APPLICANTS FOR WHOLESALE LICENSES

The applications for retail and wholesale liquor licenses were received at the organization meeting of the Common Council, last night. All of the regulars, nine in number, applied, and in addition, there were three new applicants for wholesale licenses. Henry Haurand, at 15-17 Somerset street; Henry P. Vosseller, at 122 North avenue, and George R. Wescott, at 133-135 North avenue.

Those who renewed their applications for places now licensed include Peter Floersch, for the Queen City Hotel; Henry Windham, for the Hotel Waldorf; William J. Kitchen, for Hotel Kensington; Ellsworth C. Wescott, Godfrey J. Weinman, Michael Watson, Eastern Bottling Company and Frank Linke. The last two named are for wholesale places.

Michael Devine, to whom a license was granted for the Clark saloon, on Liberty street, made an application for a renewal of that license and it will undoubtedly be granted.

FIRST RECEPTION IN GRACE CHURCH RECTORY

Rev. and Mrs. E. Vicars Stevenson gave a New Year's Day reception yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6, it being the first affair of the kind held in the new rectory on West Eighth street. The affair was attended by between 200 and 300 members and friends of Grace church parish.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson were assisted in receiving by Mrs. F. W. Iredell, Mrs. Osborn Halsted, Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mrs. T. Logan Murphy, Mrs. George M. Holstein, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. E. N. Erickson and Mrs. Jabez Gilbert.

JAIL TERM FOR LACEY.

John Lacey, of 96 Grandview avenue, aged nineteen years, was arraigned before Recorder Fred Hand, in the North Plainfield police court, this morning, having been arrested on the charge of threatening his parents. He has a police record on both sides of Green brook, and was sentenced to serve twenty-seven days at Somerville.

STAHL PRESIDENT OF BORO COUNCIL

Reorganization Meeting Held in North Plainfield Chambers Yesterday.

MOBUS TAKES SEAT

Julius J. Stahl was unanimously elected president of the Borough Council at its meeting held at noon yesterday for the purpose of reorganizing for 1915. In his appointments for the year Mayor Clark named Walter Chandler to succeed William McCullough as chief of the fire department and renamed the other borough officers. All of the appointments were unanimously endorsed by the counsel with the exception of those for borough counsel, which was opposed by Councilman Milne; fire chief, which was opposed by Councilman Mobus, and bulking the salaries, the latter resolution being opposed by Councilmen Milne and Mobus.

Councilman-elect Frank Mobus, succeeding Edmund Rushmore, took his place yesterday. He is the only Democrat in the body.

Borough clerk, C. M. Dolliver; borough recorder, Fred W. Hand; borough physician, Dr. J. H. Buchanan; overseer of the poor, Fred Becker; members of the Board of Health for term of four years, Cormack McDonough, James L. Love; borough engineer, H. C. VanEmburgh; street commissioner, William Uhrhahn; borough counsel, Isaac P. Runyon.

Fire department—Chief, Walter Chandler; captain, James Walker; lieutenant and driver, Albert Fritz; tillerman, Raymond Schmidt; engineer, Harry Schuck. Call men—Clinton Conover, Albert DeCamp, L. F. Barrett, Jr., Claude Hann, William Hogan, Charles F. Stahl, Frank Haulenback, Fred Krausse, Winfield Conover, L. B. Bodine, Garret Shepard, Fred Ehrhardt, William Daly and Arthur Fritz.

Klinsman, Walter Dennis, George Cooper, George Giddes, George B. Stewart, G. W. Giddes, W. W. Rowley, John Johnson.

These committees were also named by the Mayor:

Streets and public health—Alexander Milne, Julius Stahl; fire and water—Julius J. Stahl, Allan Comperthwaite; audit and finance, Ulysses G. Tingley, Alexander Milne, Allan Cowperthwaite; licenses and marshals—Allan Cowperthwaite, Ulysses G. Tingley; laws, ordinances and taxation, Edwin S. Boyer, Allan Cowperthwaite; public affairs and light—Frank Mobus, Alexander Milne.

BORO SEWER BODY MAKES ITS REPORT

The Borough Sewerage Commission's report for the year, submitted at a meeting of the Borough Council, Thursday night, indicates that very substantial progress has been made during 1914, a resume showing that the municipality has acquired the tract of land designated by the State Board of Health and details preliminary to the constructed work have already been started.

To meet its share of the expense of the joint undertaking and to provide a fund towards the cost of its own collecting system, the borough has sold at fair premiums, $30,000, 4½% Joint Sewerage bonds; $50,000, 5% Joint Sewerage bonds, and $100,000, 5% Collecting System bonds.

The Commission turned the entire matter over to the Mayor and Council at Thursday night's meeting and the responsibility of the work will hereafter be borne by that body.

FIREMEN TOASTED THE PASSING GONG

OFFICIALS AS GUESTS

Headquarters' Men Give Turkey Dinner as Full Paid Department is Ushered in With the Birth of a New Year.

After serving the city for nearly twenty-four years in the capacity of announcing to the populace that truant flames were raging, the big chime whistle attached to the local fire alarm system, sounded its final lusty tone at midnight Thursday. For more than five minutes it continued to blow, seemingly loathe to stop, until a lack of steam produced a last lingering wail, and the whistle was no more.

The passing of the whistle was not without its official recognition, for while Peter Dooley, superintendent of the fire alarm system, was holding down the valve on the roof of the Spicer plant at Madison avenue and West Third street, Chief T. G. Doane, members of the councilmanic fire committee and a large part of the city fire fighting force gave a silent toast to its memory as they were gathered about a festive board in Fire Headquarters on East Second street. The men of the house had arranged a turkey supper as an appropriate affair, and beside the Chief and members of the Council, a number of men identified with the department in past years were invited guests. Chief Doane spoke a few words relative to what had happened in the city's fire fighting history from the time the gong was installed and all joined with him in expressing the wish that continued success follows the installation of the new full paid force, which went into effect yesterday. Councilman Charles C. Graves, who was a volunteer in the department for nearly twenty-five years; Councilman Theodore A. Martin and Councilman J. H. Cose were also present and made brief addresses in a similar vein. It was at Chief Doane's suggestion and with Councilman Edgar's sanction as chairman of the fire committee that Mr. Dooley sounded the whistle valedictory.

The dinner was a great success. Two fine, big turkeys were prepared for the committee, composed of James McDonough, Harry Wierenga and Daniel Keiderling, through the kindness of Mrs. Keiderling, wife of Chief Doane's chauffauer. The birds were closely seconded by all the good things that make up a complete holiday menu.

Reminiscent stories were a feature during the entire evening and the big gong came in for a major share.

REV. DR. AND MRS. J. S. ZELIE GIVE A RECEPTION

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Zelie gave a New Year's Day reception at their home on Park avenue, yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, during which time more than two hundred friends, including many members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Zelie is pastor, called and exchanged greetings.

The affair was an informal one and thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended. Those in the receiving party with Dr. and Mrs. Zelie were Mrs. F. G. Mead, Mrs. E. R. Ackerman, Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, Mrs. A. V Heely, Mrs. J. W. Sandford and Mrs. W. A. Garrigues. The young women who assisted in the dining-room were Mrs. Birney B. Petigrue, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Zelie, and the Misses Eleanor Hatch, Janet VanVliet, Dorothy Leal, Dorothy Parvin, Leila Hedges and Dorothy Lyon.

ORGANIZATION OF THE CITY COUNCIL

G. S. Clay and J. T. MacMurray Re-elected President and Clerk.

COMMITTEES NAMED

Salaries of Officials Are Fixed—Allowances Are Made to Departments Pending Regular Appropriations—Other Routine Matters.

The Common Council for 1915 held its organization meeting, last night, when the business, which was chiefly of a routine nature, was transacted expeditiously and with apparent harmony. The first business was that of re-electing George S. Clay as president. He thanked the members for the honor and expressed the hope that the relations with the Council would be as pleasant this year as last.

After adopting the resolution fixing the salaries for the year, City Clerk James T. MacMurray was re-elected for a term of three years, Mr. Blatz making the nomination. This action set at rest all rumors of a change in this office.

George B. Wean was re-elected city stenographer, and W. A. Kline was re-appointed janitor. The rules of order for 1914 were adopted for 1915 and notice was given by Mr. Claybrook, who was subsequently made chairman of the finance committee, that at the next meeting he would move the adoption of the rules as the bylaws of the Council.

WILL AIM TO GIVE CITY BEST SERVICE

Leighton Calkins Succeeds Percy H. Stewart as Mayor.

Leighton Calkins assumed the reins of the city government as Mayor at noon, yesterday, succeeding Percy H. Stewart. The latter turned the keys of the city over to the new official promptly at 12 o'clock in the presence of about seventy-five citizens, including Republicans and Democrats, and a majority of the City Council. Mr. Stewart in retiring from office extended his best wishes to the incoming Mayor and the hope that his administration would be a successful one. Mayor Calkins in replying to the kind words of Mr. Stewart said in part:

"For myself, may I assure you that it will be my aim to serve the city well; and by this I mean the city as a whole, as a community of friends and neighbors. In so far as I represent the people, I represent them all. I am sure that the citizens who did not vote for me while a candidate, stand today with those who did, in hoping sincerely that as Mayor, I shall be of the greatest possible service—and may I add—credit to the city. It seems to me that, as Mayor, I am quite as much the servant and agent, in the management of our city affairs, of those who are of other political faiths in State and National affairs. By voting against me they did not waive their rights as citizens, to disinterested public service. On the contrary they but exercised their rights as citizens. I now expect their support and help; and shall try to deserve it.

"I am aware that the Mayor is not the government. Rather is the Council the governing body. But the charter makes it the duty of the Mayor to advise the Council whenever and wherever he thinks the service can be improved. It will be my aim to perform this duty to the best of my ability, not to impose my will on the Council, but rather to work in harmony with them, as one of them, not for our personal credit but for the welfare of the community: for the success of Plainfield as a business and social center."

Mayor Calkins held a reception from 2 until 6 o'clock in the afternoon, during which a large number of citizens dropped in to wish the new city executive a Happy New Year. There were many beautiful floral gifts, including a basket of roses from the 1913 Council, roses from former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman and City Judge W. G. DeMeza.

The first act of the new Mayor after his induction into office was the receiving of about $150 in license money from local amusement places.

NEED OF BETTER BUSINESS METHODS IN CITY DEPARTMENTS IS TOLD IN MAYOR CALKINS' ANNUAL MESSAGE RECOMMENDS THOROUGH SURVEY AND CHANGES IN CONDUCT OF SCHOOL AFFAIRS, WITH GREATER FINANCE PUBLICITY.

ALLEN E. BEALS ON PLAYGROUND COMMISSION

Elliott T. Barrows and Dr. Harold D. Corbusier Reappointed on Health Board and Dr. Norman W. Currie Given Another Three-Year Term as City Physician—A. J. Gavett and Miles Roberts Continued on Shade Tree Commission—Names Policemen and Firemen.

Presenting a thorough survey of the needs of the city administration to bring it up-to-date and in line with modern business methods, Mayor Leighton Calkins in his annual message to the City Council last night made the following recommendations:

AN ADMINISTRATIVE SURVEY BY EXPERTS with the idea of doing away with old fashioned methods and the introduction of efficiency and economy in all departments by standardization of methods of operation. In connection with this he stated that a group of public spirited citizens had agreed to finance to a large extent the carrying out of a program of the kind.

Securing of a law which will eventually make it possible to appoint a city manager, after the experimental stage in that form of government has been passed.

Radical change in the method of conducting school affairs, including the early completion of the budget, and more careful work by the Board of School Estimate as a whole, it being recommended that the City Council and School Board members meet together frequently, instead of in one joint meeting.

PUBLICITY IN THE PLANNING OF CITY AND SCHOOL BUDGETS, including advance publication of proposed appropriations, which would give citizens an opportunity to be heard. Recommends that Board of Education advertise meetings in advance and invite the public to attend them.

Improved business methods by City Council Committees, including the keeping of written records of all meetings in a uniform system of books.

Abolition of the fee system.

ACQUIRING OF A CITY BUILDING, which will house all departments under one roof.

Appointment of an unsalaried City Planning Commission, and a permanent organization to study conditions and needed improvements.

The entire message will be found on Page 7.

Several appointments were sent by the Mayor to the Common Council, all of which were promptly confirmed. Allen E. Beals, now commissioner of the local Boy Scouts, was made a member of the Playground Commission for a term of five years, and A. J. Gavett and Miles Roberts were re-appointed members of the Shade Tree Commission, the former for one year and the latter for three years.

Police Chief P. S. Kiely, Tobias Nolan, succeeding Arthur McGinley; William F. Arnold and DeWitt C. Ivins, were appointed as members of the police pension commission for four years. Elliot T. Barrows and Dr. Harold D. Corbusier were re-appointed members of the Board of Health for two years. The third member to succeed Hugh Reilly will be named later.

Dr. Norman W. Currie was re-appointed city physician for a term of three years. The usual provision was made as to furnishing badges to special policemen, each being obliged to pay $5 on receiving the badge and when it is returned, $2.50 will be retained by the city for the pension fund and the other half goes to the officer.

Patrolmen John Fritts and John Neylon were made regular members of the department after the usual probationary period. George D. Leland was also made a regular member of the fire department, he having completed his probationary period.

Frank M. Dunham was continued as the assistant in the office of Tax Collector W. R. Townsend. The Daily Press and Courier-News were again named as the official newspapers of the city.

Floyd Carroll, T. R. Randolph, Matthias Hefti, Roy McDonough and Harold Gloak were made firemen upon recommendation of the fire committee. They are put on a six months' probationary period and if found satisfactory will be made regulars.

STATE TRUST ASSETS PASS MILLION MARK

Deposits Alone Reach $854,000 and Business Continues to Grow.

The attention of readers is called to the very excellent showing made by The State Trust Company in their statement of December 31st, printed on the last page of this paper.

This company, in a little over four years, in the face of adverse general business conditions, has built up a line of deposits of eight hundred and fifty-four thousand dollars, and total assets of more than one million dollars.

On September 16th, 1910, The State Trust Company opened its doors for business, taking over as a nucleus the business of The Borough National Bank, deposits $129,000. This bank had been located on Somerset street, North Plainfield. The new company met with success from its inception. On December 31st, 1910, two and a half months after beginning business, deposits had increased from $129,000 to $206,000; on December 31st, 1911, they were $417,116.20; on December 31st, 1912, $572,851.14; on December 31st, 1913, $606,551.79; on December 31st, 1914, $854,509.89. The officers and directors certainly have just cause for pride in the achievements of their institution.

MOVING PICTURES TO AID UNEMPLOYED

Receipts at Astor Theatre January 7 Will Go To Special Fund.

Joseph M. Coven, proprietor of the Astor Theatre, on West Front street, has made an offer to the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed. Next Thursday the theatre will present a specially selected program of moving picture features, and the entire receipts will be given to the Commission, toward aiding those in Plainfield who are in distress this winter through lack of employment. The entire running expense for the day will be borne by Mr. Coven, so that every cent taken in will go for relief work.

Up to and including December 30, the total contribution to the Commission's finance committee was $2,220. Nearly $1,000 has been added since the last report. It is, however, only about half the amount set by the Commission as its probable requirement.

The subscribers whose names have not been published previously are: Clara Louise Crane, "M. C. E.," Mrs. Dexter Tiffany, George S. Clay, William C. Sandford, Mr. and Mrs. E. V Cox, Mrs. Margaret Blair, Sidney Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Wells, O. E. Mogenson, Mr. Aarff, Alexander Gilbert, O. T. Waring, James Ellis, three contributions from friends, George H. WALK CLEANING SUGGESTION BY STREET COMMISSIONER

In the business section of the city, where the streets are paved with brick and on the adjacent streets where the sidewalks are improved for their full width, Street Commissioner Gavett has requested that the snow shall only be removed for sufficient width to accommodate the travel, say about eight feet; the rest, along the curb, to be taken away by the street force after the roadway is cleared.

In this way the streets will be open to travel much sooner than when all the snow from wide sidewalks is shoveled into the streets at once.

"SPIRITUAL ISSUES OF WAR."

Prof. William Walker Rockwell, who holds the chair of Church History in Union Theological Seminary, and is editor of "The Papers of the American Society of Church History," will speak at the German Reformed church, Craig place and Duer street, tomorrow evening on "Spiritual Issues of the War." Prof. Rockwell is widely known and as his topic is an interesting one, no doubt he will be heard by a large number of people. The public is cordially invited.

T. A. B. GIVE SUCCESSFUL NEW YEAR'S EVE DANCE

The T. A. B. Society gave a successful dance in their hall on West Fourth street, Thursday night, which was attended by about seventy-five couples. Music was furnished by Manchester's orchestra and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. Refreshments were served about midnight and New Year's greetings exchanged.

During the evening several musical selections were rendered by a quartet composed of Patrick Powers, William Mahoney, John L. O'Keefe and Thomas M. O'Keefe. Messrs. Mahoney and John O' Keefe also sang vocal solos. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Frank Donnelly, chairman; Harry Dunn, Jack Force, William Mahoney, Joseph McCue and Thomas O'Keefe.

WILL MEET MONDAY.

The Borough Council will hold its January meeting Monday night. This is in accordance with the new bylaws adopted at the first meeting of the year yesterday.

BOROUGH COUNCIL MEETS TO ORGANIZE

The Mayor and Common Council with the two new councilmen, Robert S. Craig and H. D. Williams, met and organized for the year at noon yesterday. The Mayor re-appointed William P. Deering, borough clerk; Rene P. F. von Minden, borough attorney; David S. Campbell, borough recorder; Isaac V. Smalley, street commissioner; Lewis T. Churchill borough engineer; Owen Mohan chief marshal; Patrick J. Tarpey, regular marshal, and W. H. Snyder, Harry S. Shugars and I. V. Smalley as special marshals. The new appointees were Weimer Snyder and Ernest Kepler as special marshals.

The committees as named by the Mayor are as follows: Street committee, William A. Castner, Richard M. Ryan, Forman G. Neighbour; sidewalks, Forman G. Neighbour, Erle M. Jones, H. D. Williams; finance, Erle M. Jones, Richard M. Ryan, Robert S. Craig; law and ordinances, Richard M. Ryan, H. D. Williams, W. A. Castner; joint sewerage, Robert S. Craig, E. M. Jones, W. A. Castner; buildings and parks, Harold D. Williams, W. A. Castner, F. G. Neighbour; fire and water, Robert S. Craig, F. G. Neighbor, E. M. Jones; lighting committee, Richard M. Ryan, F. G. Neighbour and R. S. Craig. Richard M. Ryan was reappointed as president of the Council by the Mayor.

The Mayor has not been feeling at all well the past few days, being indisposed with a severe cold which has settled on his chest, and the report of the year's proceedings which he had hoped to present at the meeting was not ready. The report will be published in the newspapers as soon as completed.

In a brief talk the Mayor spoke of the support given him by the Council during the year. In mentioning the progress being made with the sewerage matter he said that he and Borough Clerk Deering had delivered the $55,000 of collecting sewerage bonds to Harris, Forbes & Company, the New York bankers, on Thursday, and that they had returned with a check for them. In commenting further upon the sewerage matter the Mayor said that everything is now in readiness for the contractors, the H. K. Corbin Company, to go ahead with the work, which must be completed by the first of the year. The Mayor, however, as stated in this paper recently, didn't think that anything would be done until spring, as there is at present 10 inches of frost in the ground.

MRS. FRED S. VAIL IS TENDERED A SURPRISE

Mrs. Fred S. Vail, of North avenue, was tendered a very pleasant surprise at the home of Mrs. W. J. Smith, of Dunellen avenue, on New Year's Eve in honor of her birthday.

The affair was cleverly arranged by Mrs. Smith. Mrs. Smith invited Mrs. Vail to attend a suposed surprise to be given to Mrs. Frank Bowlby and had told her to be at her home by 9 o'clock in order to march to the Bowlby home in a body with the rest of the party. Suffice it to say that the surprise was a complete one.

The Smith home was prettily decorated with red crepe paper. Up to within a few minutes of the hour of midnight when the members of the party went out onto the porch of the home to welcome the New Year in with the tooting of horns a most enjoyable time had been had in playing cards, dancing and listening to music as rendered by a Victrola. After the cessation of the celebration incident to the arrival of the new year refreshments were served and the party then broke up.

Mrs. Vail received a very nice China set from Mrs. Smith in honor of the occasion.

Charles Dayton, of Flemington, who has been spending the holidays in the borough as the guest of his uncle, Mahlon R. Dayton, of Center street, has returned home.

FEDDERMAN WINS IN DISTRICT COURT

In a case tried Thursday afternoon before Judge Woodbridge, in the District Court, at New Brunswick, in which John Fedderman, the local real estate agent, was suing the Watchung Investment Company for his commission of $130 on account of the house on Penfield place that was purchased from the company on August 31 by Mrs. John Rinehart, on the ground that he was responsible for the sale being made, Mr. Fedderman was awarded a verdict for the full amount by a jury which deliberated for a mere five minutes.

The attorney for the plaintiff was Assemblyman George L. Burton, of New Brunswick, while the defense was represented by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of Plainfield. Those who were called upon to testify in the case were W. H. Snyder, Miss Katherine Rinehart, Mrs. Annie Rinehart, John Rinehart, John P. Fenner, John Rinehart, Jr., and A. J. Hamley. Those who were subpoenaed but not called on were J. Newton Apgar and Lewis T. Churchill. The case will be appealed.

ARRESTED ON SERIOUS CHARGE.

Clarence Waldron, of North avenue, is today confined in the county jail awaiting the action of the Grand Jury on a very serious charge of assault made by Miss Carrie Francis, of North avenue. The assault, it is alleged, occurred on North avenue opposite Lincoln avenue, five minutes after the new year had made its advent. Waldron was arrested after a chase by Marshal Patrick Tarpey, who had responded to the screaming of the alleged assaulted.

Miss Ella Boice, of Dunellen avenue, has returned from Brooklyn, where she spent a week with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dineen, of Washington avenue, entertained their son, John Dineen, of Brooklyn, yesterday.

Owing to the absence of the Mayor and several members, the Borough Council was unable to do anything at the meeting yesterday, outside of electing a president. Thomas Norton, president during the last year, was re-elected again, after which the meeting adjourned to meet on Wednesday evening. At that time the Mayor will appoint his committees for the year.

The meetings of the Borough Board of Health have been changed to the first Monday in the month and therefore a meeting is scheduled to be held in the Fanwood firehouse on the coming Monday.

At the All Saints' Episcopal church tomorrow the Holy Communion will be celebrated at the 11 o'clock service, to which all are cordially invited. The rector, the Rev. Oscar S. Michaels, will preach on the theme, "What Is Salvation?" treating it from the positive standpoint. It is thus a continuation of the sermon of last Sunday, in which endeavor was made to show what salvation was not. Sunday-school will meet at 10 o'clock.

Both the morning and evening services at the Methodist church tomorrow will be in charge of Dr. H. K. Carroll. Sunday-school meets in the afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Adult Bible Class and the Sunday-school meet in Willow Grove chapel at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Walter Demerest, a former resident, has returned to his home in Brooklyn, after spending the holiday in this place renewing old acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Amasa Storr, of the borough, are the parents of a young daughter, born Thursday.

Miss Helen Hoar, who has been spending some time in New York, will be able to return home on Monday.

John Ford has started running another taxicab to meet all trains at the local station.

WIFE MADE LAVISH GIFTS TO HUSBAND

Arthur Murphy Says He Gave up His Position When She Guaranteed Him Income.

Jersey City, Jan. 2.—How Mrs. Lydia Ackerman Murphy, of Plainfield, gave her husband a monthly allowance of $100, bought him a $10,000 house, an automobile, paid for trips to Europe and tours of this country, and maintained a fine home in Plainfield, was told by the husband, Arthur P. Murphy, a lawyer, with offices in Manhattan and Plainfield, before Vice-Chancellor Lewis Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Murphy is the defendant in an action brought by her husband to obtain the custody of their six-year-old daughter Lydia, at least two months in a year. Murphy and his wife separated September 24, 1913.

Murphy made no charge that his wife is unfit to give the girl proper care. He said she was affectionate and always treated him generously. The trouble between them, he explained, was due to the way Miss Bessie Grodey, a nurse, treated little Lydia. When he objected to her manner toward the child Mrs. Murphy would side with the nurse aganist him, he said. He severely criticized the nurse, who sat about ten feet from him, knitting socks for suffering soldiers, she said.

The lawyer was cross-questioned by Halsey M. Barrett, of Newark, counsel for Mrs. Murphy, as to his financial status and his ability to give the little girl proper support.

At the time of his marriage in 1901, said Murphy, he was employed as check clerk in a New York bank, at a salary of $900 a year.

"I held the position for about a year after our marriage," related the witness, "and then resigned when my wife signed an agreement to give me a monthly allowance of $100 so that I might be able to travel about the country with her. I was twenty-one years old at the time, and she was about my age. After I resigned we traveled for a short time and then I began to study law. For nearly four years I studied and was admitted to the bar of this State in June, 1906.

"My wife and I took an extended trip to Europe and on our return in 1907 we traveled about the United States, stopping at such places as Palm Beach, Saratoga, St. Louis and other big places."

"During these years who supported the home and who paid all the expenses of these trips?" Mr. Barrett asked.

"Mrs. Murphy, of course," said the witness. "We had a big home with five or six servants and she maintained everything."

Murphy then testified his wife gave him $10,000 to buy a house in Plainfield, bought a touring car for him and another for herself, increased his allowance to $115 a month for pin money and $20 a month for the maintenance of his car. Other gifts and another trip to Europe at his wife's expense also were related by the witness.

"Did you ever contribute anything to the support of the home?" Mr. Barrett asked.

"No, except that I would occasionally buy a little gift for them out of my pin money," said the witness.

Since the separation Mrs. Murphy has been living with her sister, Mrs. Robert Rushmore, 732 Eighth street, Plainfield. She makes no charge against her husband. Both are emphatic in saying that they have no idea of suing for a separation or divorce.

LECTURE ON CAPONIZING.

Another demonstration of caponizing will feature the last night of the Poultry Show that has been going on in Columbus Club Auditorium for the past week.

HELPFUL WORDS.

From a Plainfield Citizen.

Is your back lame and painful?

Does it ache especially after exertion?

Is there a soreness in the kidney region?

These symptoms suggest weak kidneys.

If so there is danger in delay.

Weak kidneys get fast weaker.

Give your trouble prompt attention.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Your neighbors use and recommend them.

Read this Plainfield testimony.

Mrs. S. Driscoll, 1009 South Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I had a dull pain across the small of my back and in my sides that clung to me constantly and any hard work made me worse. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells, especially when stooping or lifting and I felt weak and run down. I tried plasters and other remedies, but nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's drug store. They made me a lasting cure. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills just as highly today as I did some years ago when they cured me."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remdy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Driscoll had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

ARRESTED FOR NON-SUPPORT AND SENT TO SOMERVILLE

Thomas Rowe, claiming 141 East 48th street, New York, as his residence, but who has a wife and several children in the borough, was placed under arrest yesterday by Chief Weiss, charged with non-support, preferred by Overseer-of-the-Poor Fred Becker. Rowe is a machinist by trade, and some time ago promised Mr. Becker to contribute a weekly sum to the support of his wife and family, but is alleged to have failed to keep his promise.

Rowe came to the borough for a visit over the holiday, and was taken into custody. Arraigned before Recorder Hand, this morning, he pleaded guilty and was committed to the county jail at Somerville on his failure to give a necessary bond.

"THROUGH THE YEAR WITH BARDS AND BIBLE"

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, will tomorrow evening commence a series of unusual sermons, to continue the first Sunday evening of each month throughout the year, under the general heading, "Through the Year with Bards and Bible." These sermons will be interpretations of nature in the light of poetry and Scripture, and each discourse will contain from three to six recitations, mostly from the greater poets, bearing on the theme suggested by the current month. Dr. Strong, himself a writer of verse, has for many years made a special study of poetry, also giving constant attention to the Bible as literature, and he believes this series of sermons will be alike interesting and helpful.

Tomorrow evening he will introduce a new feature in his Scripture lesson. In the midst of that lesson he will recite a beautiful poem illustrating one of its verses, and then return to the desk and complete the recitation of the Psalm. During the discourse itself there will be recitations from the well-known American poets Bryant, Whittier and Trowbridge, and from the English poet William Canton, with briefer extracts from other singers.

ALTRUISTIC BIBLE CLASS WELCOMES NEW YEAR

The New Year's Eve party at the Netherwood Reformed church, given by the Altruistic Bible Class of Young Women, of which O. P. Wahlig is teacher, was a successful affair. The hours were filled with new and entertaining "stunts" which brought from the audience continued laughter and applause. Refreshments, oyster stew, sandwiches and coffee, were served during the evening.

At midnight the New Year was greeted with prayer by the pastor, Mr. Ralston, after which the months escorted in by candle light "Father Time" and the little New Yeark, who wished all a Happy New Year.

UNITY LODGE ELECTS.

Unity Lodge, No. 162, K. of P., met Thursday evening, in regular session and elected the following officers: Chancellor commander, Leon Livingston; vice chancellor, George Pickle; prelate, M. A. Drew; inner guard, Nelson Wiley; outer guard, George Dean; keeper of records and seals, Frank Putnam; master of gnance, Charles McGraw; master of the exchequer, E. Victor Lorton; auditor, M. A. Nichols; trustee, Jeremiah VanWinkle; grand lodge representative, M. A. Nichols; alternate representative, Jeremiah VanWinkle. The installation will take place Thursday evening, January 7.

DR. DAVIS TO SPEAK.

Katharine Bement Davis, Ph. D., commissioner of correction in New York city, will lecture before the Monday Afternoon Club, in the parish house of the Congregational church Monday afternoon. The work of Dr. Davis has been a source of much gratification to those who have been interested in her efforts to right wrongs and administer justice in correctional matters. The club extends a cordial invitation to men as well as women to hear Dr. Davis. The lecture will be given at 3:45 o'clock.

"THE PRODIGAL SON."

"The Prodigal Son" will be the subject of an illustrated service at the Netherwood Reformed church tomorrow evening at 7:45 o'clock. Appropriate hymns as well as the story will be illustrated with lantern slides. The subject of the morning sermon at 11 o'clock will be, "A New Year; a New World and a New Life." A hearty invitation is given to all to begin the year well by going to church.

REUNION AND ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wyman, of East Front street, according to their annual custom, held a family reunion at their home yesterday, the occasion also marking their thirteenth wedding anniversary. There was a fine New Year's dinner, after which the afternoon was spent in playing games. Music was also a feature of the gathering. There were about thirty-five members of the family present to enjoy the festivities.

MISS GUNTON ENTERTAINS FRIENDS AT A DANCE

Miss Ruth Gunton, of East Front street, was the hostess of a New Year's party given at her home last night. There were guests from this city, Westfield, Elizabeth, Newark and Asbury Park.

Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour and regreshments were served shortly before midnight. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Gunton, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley, Steven Britton, and the Misses Ruth Gunton, Jessie Billing, Ruth Ralston, Elizabeth Ralston, Maude and Hester Van Arsdale, of Newark; Mrs. Shafer, Lulu Atwater and John Britton, Harry Van Arsdale, of Newark; William MacMichaels, of Asbury Park, Clarence Herrich, of Elizabeth; Arthur Dunning, James Conlin and Mr. Allen, of Westfield.

ALLIED TRADES' DANCE IS LARGELY ATTENDED

Dancing the old year out, and the new one in, a large number of people attended the first annual ball of the Plainfield Allied Trades' Committee held at Sebring's Auditorium Thursday night. The hall was decorated, with the national colors predominating. Halbfoerstetr's Orchestra furnished music for the old time dances and the modern steps.

Demonstrations of the more modern dances by professional talent was enjoyed by those present. A good sum was realized by the committee in charge, the proceeds to be used as a basis for a fund with which to conduct a labor parade in September. The committee was composed of Richard D. Scott, Thomas Dunphy and Ernest A. Rhodes.

FIRST MUNICIPAL DANCE WAS GREAT SUCCESS

The municipal dance held at the High School Auditorium last evening under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee was largely attended. During the evening musical selections, both vocal and instrumental, were given by the members of the Italian Club. Mrs. Grace Robinson gave a number of selections, accompanied by Mrs. Carolyne Schuyler.

There were demonstrations of modern dances by the Misses Stella Butler, Jane VanZandt, Margaret Beck, Hazel Hamelle, Estelle Freedman, Brownlee and Lamson, Morris Lavere and Leo Berse. Henry C. White, a member of the Recreation Committee, gave an address, outlining the work of the organization, and made an earnest appeal for a larger community spirit.

GERMANS CELEBRATE

The new year of 1915 was ushered in yesterday morning by the members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein Society and their friends at Saengerbund Hall. Music composed the major portion of the program preceeding the arrival of the year, while refreshments were served following the midnight hour. As is usual at all of the social gatherings of this society, the singing section sang a number of the old time songs dear to the hearts of the German people.

EVENING SCHOOL TO OPEN.

The sessions of the evening school will be resumed at the Plainfield High School Monday evening.

ONCE A MIGHTY CITY.

Ypres, In Belgium, Was Famous When Berlin Was a Hamlet.

The little Belgian town of Ypres, in Belgium, in the heyday of its greatness and prosperity ranked as large in the civilized world as Philadelphia, Chicago, Berlin and other big cities do today. Indeed, it was a splendid city when Berlin was a mere hamlet of half civilized Slavs.

It was in the days of the commercial greatness of Venice that Ypres attained the summit of its prosperity. It was an important distributing center for the traffic which came up through the Adriatic by boat, was carried overland and then scattered from Belgium to England, France, Holland, Germany and other countries. It also had great manufactures, and in the fourteenth century its population exceeded 200,000, making it one of the largest cities in Europe. Ghent and Bruges, its near neighbors, were no less prosperous. With the changing of the trade routes of Europe the wealth and population of Ypres disappeared until it has now less than 20,000 people.

When one reads of the rise and decline of these communities which flourished long before America was discovered it is interesting to speculate whether the same fate will overtake our own cities. Who can tell? To us their foundation seems substantial, but doubtless the worthy burghers of Ypres thought the same of their beloved city 600 years ago.—Philadelphia Record.

Make the Days Count.

The course of life is a thousand trifles then some crisis; nothing but green leaves under common sun and shadow and then a storm or a rare June day. And far more than the storm or the perfect day the common sun and common shadow do to make the autumn rich. It is the "every days" that count. They must be made to tell or the years have failed.—William C. Gannett.

He Liked the Name.

"I suppose you would never be willing to live anywhere except in your beloved Boston?"

"Well, there is a town in Wisconsin which has a name that attracts me."

"What town is that?"

"Superior."—Pittsburgh Post.

The World of White

As you step off any of the many elevators in the Old Building onto the Third Floor, it is as if you had been suddenly transported into a dreamland of Summer snow. For everywhere you look—in the French Shops, in the Children's Store, in the Corset Salons, along the aisles—is a world of white fluffy, lovely, wonderful things that women and children wear.

This, the fifty-fifth

WANAMAKER SALE OF WHITE

is too difficult to describe in words.

As each of these Sales of White comes along it really seems as though "this one" were the biggest and most successful ever.

And it isn't that it just seems to be, but it really is. It is, because it ought to be. At the end of each Sale we take stock, as it were, of our experience through the Sale, and from the last day of the Sale we begin planning for the next, profiting by all that we have learned.

This, 55th Sale of White is the biggest white sale yet. It is big in many ways. Big in its number of garments. Big in its variety of styles. Big in its new ideas. Big in the fact that it takes care of people who want to spend $1, and of people who want to spend $100.

We doubt whether you could think of anything belonging in a White Sale that isn't in this.

The Children's Sale of White

The prices?

When the John Wanamaker Store announces a Sale of White, there isn't a woman but knows that the prices are the lowest that can possibly be put on garments that come up to the Wanamaker standard.

All that we ask is that you come and judge for yourself.

In the majority of cases the Wanamaker prices of these curtains barely cover the cost of the laces alone. In a great many instances the laces originally cost double (and more). Monday's prices of the curtains completely made.

Included in this great purchase is the maker's entire sample collection; all "few-of-a-kind" curtains that he does not want to inventory; and all curtains trimmed with imported laces which he will not be able to duplicate. Every curtain is made the regulation size—two and a half yards long.

215 Pairs at 75c

869 Pairs at $1

Lace-edge scrim curtains, trimmed with all kinds of laces, including linen-cluny and hand-made Renaissance; variety of patterns; white and arabe.
Subway Entrance and Third Gallery, New Building.

2,488 Pairs at $1.50 and $1.75

The $1.50 curtains—Subway Entrance and Third Gallery, New Building and Main Aisle, Old Building; the $1.75 curtains—Main Aisle, Old Building and Third Gallery, New Building.

Marquisette and scrim and net curtains; some trimmed with hand-made cluny; large variety of patterns; white and arabe.
Third Gallery, New Building.

This sale will have a special appeal to furnishers of hotels and large houses and for those who will want to replace their present curtains and draperies in the spring with less expensive ones.

NOTE—45 "odd" pairs of scrim and net curtains, trimmed with all kinds of laces—remarkably low-priced, $1.50 to $3.50.
Third Gallery, New Building.

GOOD WORK DONE BY LOCAL PLAYGROUND COMMISSION

Statistics submitted by the Board of Playground Commissioners of the work carried on during the past year indicate that the attendance, supervision and activities at the various rendezvous conducted by the Commissioners have been above par during 1914. Treasurer Harry W. Marshall reports a balance on hand of $24.13, the receipts during the past year having amounted to $1,021.56 and the disbursements totalled $997.43.

Secretary Herbert E. Parker's fifth annual report of the work accomplished is a most encouraging one. The attendance figures at the four local playgrounds totalled 38,022 and the activities were greatly increased.

The year of our Lord nineteen hundred and fifteen stretches out before us; there's a great crowd at the starting line; we have just heard the word go and the race is on. We have never been over this particular course before and we can't see very far ahead. The race is a handicap, with this peculiarity, each runner is his own handicapper.

The starters are a motley crowd, and it is evident that some have handicapped themselves so badly that for them winning is out of the question; we have seen such as they fail in other races. Some insist on carrying unnecessary burdens, though urged by friends to lay them aside; over yonder are some men and women sadly hampered by their passions and appetites; here and there you see one who is thinking more of her personal appearance than of winning the race; and all along the line are young men and women who seem to think the whole thing is a huge joke. A few of these will improve as they run, but for most of them the race is lost before they start.

A noisy group of starters, who are attracting more attention than they deserve, are those who with long faces are saying to each other, it's going to be the hardest race we ever ran, the course, we hear, is positively the worst that could have been selected, the obstacles we shall meet are simply insurmountable, enemies are ahead making them worse. These cannot win, for the man who starts expecting to lose hasn't much chance.

Here is another set of runners who look strangely unprepared for a race: Any one can see that they are not in training. No matter what the condition of the course may be the running will be very hard for them; long before the course is half finished they will wish that during 1915 they had left undone some of the things they have done and had done some of the things they have left undone so that there might be more health in them.

But here is the most interesting group of all. Their faces shine. They are striped for a race. They know it's going to be hard so they have laid aside every weight; they are glad obstacles have been suggested for they like a good fight. But they rather think that these stories about the roughness of the road have been exaggerated; they confidently expect to find the course rather better than some of their fellow runners think it is. At least they are not going to be disappointed at meeting obstacles; they will be pleasantly surprised if they do not meet them.

Isn't this about the way we come up to the beginning of this splendid new year? Some with bad habits and evil practices which hamper their progress like the meshes of an entangling net; some who cannot see what a serious thing life is; others with unfulfilled obligations draging like a dead weight; a lot of pessimists who are sure everything is going to the dogs; and the optimists who look hopefully into the future. It will not be hard to guess what sort of a year 1915 will be for these different kinds of people, for the attitude of mind with which we come to it will have a great deal to do in determining what it shall be.

Why not begin the year expecting the best? As we look back over 1914 we realize that it hasn't been as bad as we thought it was going to be; it might have been very much worse.

Let us start the new year as optimists and run our course expecting to win.

God's in His Heaven—
All's right with the world.

Someone has made this comforting statement: "Today is the tomorrow that we worried about, yesterday—and it didn't happen." How much more we should be enjoying today if we were not worrying about tomorrow. And so it will be with every day. Forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth into those things which are before let us press towards the mark.

Run with hopeful heart. We are living in a great day. Let it be our ambition to make nineteen hundred and fifteen the greatest year yet.

"Let the past be past; let be
Their cancell'd Babels; tho' the rough kex break
The starr'd mosaic, and the beard-blown goat
Hang on the shaft, and the wild fig-tree split
Their monstrous idols, care not while we hear
A trumpet in the distance pealing news
Of better, and Hope, a poising eagle, burns

Facts About Our Club Plan

There are those who, while not possessing much in the way of tangible assets, like to have well furnished homes and who take as much pride in them as the wealthier people. Situated as they are it is somewhat difficult for such people to secure a credit account, and if they could they would not be able to pay in thirty days as charge customers are expected to pay. It is to these people that our Household Club Plan appeals most strongly, because it enables them to buy at the lowest cash price and to arrange for the payment according to their ability to pay.

THIS IS NOT AN INSTALLMENT PLAN as installment plans are generally known, and "anybody's" credit is NOT GOOD. Only worthy persons are entitled to club membership, and they are not taxed exorbitant prices to cover the losses occasioned by selling indiscriminately as installment houses do.

It is not a plan to make more profits on goods, but to make buying EASIER for you, and thus broaden our field of operations.

ON THE CLUB PLAN you can buy Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Lace Curtains, Blankets, Sewing Machines, Kitchen Cabinets and General Housefurnishings at our REGULAR CASH PRICES, which are all plainly marked. Pay a certain amount down and after that you pay by the week or month whatever amounts are agreed upon.

There are no embarrassing features connected with the Club Plan—no publicity, no unexpected demands. We have hundreds of satisfied customers enrolled on our books and the scheme is working out to the entire satisfaction of both our patrons and ourselves—every courtesy being extended to the Club members that is extended to customers running the biggest regular accounts.

We invite steady-going people to take advantage of the Club Plan.

CADY RE-ELECTED DIRECTOR OF BOARD

W. R. Codington is Also Chosen County Attorney Without Opposition.

Elizabeth, Jan. 2.—John N. Cady, of Summit, was unanimously re-elected director of the Board of Freeholders at the organization meeting of the Board, yesterday noon. Dr. J. Edward Rowe, of Summit, was again chosen clerk. William R. Codington, of Plainfield, had no opposition for county attorney, and Dr. Frank W. Westcott, of Fanwood, had no opposition to succeed himself as county physician. Last year's salaries were fixed as the salaries this year. The Board adopted the 1915 budget, which is slightly less than last year's, but will be subject to revision later.

William Bourdon, Democrat, moved that Mr. Cady's election be made unanimous and this was done. Charles A. Smith, of Westfield, in naming him, praised the director for his work in the past.

The old appropriation committee, consisting of Freeholders Smith, Hall, John Woodruff, Jones and Teller, was renamed, and a resolution was adopted providing for the naming of a new committee to co-operate with the Mosquito Exetermination Commission.

Annual reports of the work of committees and officials for the year 1914 and unstinted praise for the latter featured the final meeting of the Board of Freeholders, Thursday afternoon.

County Attorney Coddingon's adverse report on engaging a teacher for jail prisoners was presented to the Board by a special committee and the Board voted to receive it. The committee pledged itself to seek legislation permitting the sheriff to engage such teaching help as desired.

County Collector Leavitt's report was voluminous and was published before the meeting. He reported receipts for the year of $2,805,072.04, and disbursements of $2,246,510.87. Isaac Seeley, county sealer, reported 9,023 weights and measures investigations during the year.

The committee on lunacy reported that $44,151.34 had been expended for care of inmates at Morris Plains' Asylum and at the State Village for Epileptics at Skillman. County Engineer Bauer reported $188,909 expended for road improvements and $26,312 spent for the erection of two large bridges in Rahway and Cranford.

County Physician Frank W. Westcott reported that he had investigated 374 fatalities during the year. The Board took no action on the recommendation for a generating plant at the Bonnie Burn Sanatorium powerhouse. The committee on the sanatorium praised the management of the institution.

WARREN TOWNSHIP BODY ELECTS 1915 OFFICIALS

The Warren Township Committee organized yesterday, with the following officers: President, John Guton; treasurer, George Freiday; recorder, John C. Cooper. Constables were sworn in and bonds fixed.

Following the meeting Mr. Cooper, the retiring member of the committee, tendered a dinner to the rest of the members. He is succeeded by Frank W. Ralph.

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS ORGANIZE FOR THE YEAR

Members of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders met in Somerville, yesterday, for the purpose of organizing for the coming year. The officers elected were: Director, Lewis E. Opie; clerk, William Kershaw; collector, E. B. Allen; counsel, Clarence E. Case, and county physician, Dr. W. H. Long.

It was expected that some contest would be made for the office of county physician and clerk, but the former holders were reappointed.

YEA BO CLUB TENDERS AN HONORARY RECEPTION

The members of the Yea Bo Social Club, with the assistance of a number of young women friends, tendered a reception in a Front street hall last night, in honor of Harry J. Forristel and Miss May Marl, who recently became engaged. The attendants numbered fifty in all and they spent a most enjoyable evening with music and dancing. Refreshments from The Ritz were served at a late hour. The hall was appropriately decorated under the supervision of "Doc" Doyle.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of James P. Lynch, James Cullen, William Sullivan and "Doc" Doyle, assisted by Miss Annabelle McAfee, Mary Murray and

YALE DRAMATICS ARE PLEASING

STANLEY BURKE A STAR

Local Young Man Excells in Difficult Part in "The Ghost of Jerry Bundler"—Satire on Problem Play Well Received.

Stanley W. Burke, of this city, received an enthusiastic reception from a large number of friends in the audience which witnessed the performance given by the Yale Dramatic Club in the Plainfield Theatre on Thursday night. Mr. Burke appeared in two of the four one-act plays given, in one taking the leading part, and in the other appearing as a French maid. In both roles he was remarkably easy and natural, and especially in "The Ghost of Jerry Bundler," did he prove that he possesses skill and stage presence far above that of the average amateur.

No college dramatic organization which has appeared in this city in the past has presented such a diversified and interesting program as that which the Yale boys brought here. Four one-act plays, all mounted with special scenery, and showing a range from the sublime to the ridiculous, held the attention of the large and fashionable audience from start to finish. While two of the plays told gruesome stories, they were so excellently presented that the unpleasant features were all but forgotten in the splendid acting which marked the work of every participant.

"Behind the Beyond," a farce adapted from Stephen Leacock by Jack Randall Crawford, proved to be a humorous satire on the modern problem play, not a little of the amusement being provided by four of the collegians who took the part of supposed occupants of boxes witnessing the show. The Tired Business Man and his wife, a Sweet Young Thing, a debutante, and Arbuthnot Gay, an exponent of the drama, by their asides on the acting created frequent laughter on the part of the audience. In this play Mr. Burke appeared as the French maid, and he was well made up for the woman's character.

In "The Ghost of Jerry Bundler," a group of traveling men are disclosed in an old English Inn, telling ghost stories. An old residenter tells them of a ghost that is supposed to haunt the house, and Hirst (Mr. Burke), one of the travelers, makes a wager with another of the group that he can make up as a ghost in such a way as to frighten all present. In the enactment of the play the would-be ghost is shot and killed by another character.

An episode supposed to have occurred in the Louvre on the night of August 23, 1574, when the Hugenots were being butchered in France, provides the plot for "St. Bartholomew's Eve," and "The Stranger" develops a tragic situation in which a starving man kills his young son whom he does not recognize, in order to get possession of a bag of money which the younger man was bringing home to the parents. The cast of the various productions was as follows:

the stage boxes)—The Tired Business Man, C. A. Merz, '15; His Wife, C. F. Downey, '18; The Sweet Young Thing, a debutante, L. G. Tighe, '16; Arbuthnot Gay, an exponent of the drama, A. C. Crunden, '18; (on the stage)—Sir John Trevor, M. P., F. W. Tuttle; Lady Cicely Trevor, D. O. Hamilton, '16; Mr. Harding, Sir John's private secretary, H. J. Crocker, '16; Mrs. Harding, his mother, R Wilson, '16; Butler at the Trevor's disguised later as a postman and as Mrs. Harding's butler, F. T. Tweddell, '17; French maid, with correspondence school accent, S. W. Burke, '17.

"The Ghost of Jerry Bundler," by W. W. Jacobs and Charles Rock—Hirst, S. W. Burke, '17; Penfold, H. P. Faulkner, '16; Malcolm, G. F. Downey, '18; Somers, A. C. Crunden, '18; Beldon, L. G. Tighe, '16; Dr. Teele, T. Smith, '15; George, a waiter, F. T. Tweddell, '17.

"St. Bartholomew's Eve," by Frank Wright Tuttle, 1915—Charles IX., King of France, F. T. Tweddell, '17; Henri, duc d'Anjou, his brother, H. P. Foulkner, '16; Sir Philip Sidney, F. W. Tuttle, '15; A Lady of the Court, D. O. Hamilton, '16; A Gentleman-in-waiting, H. J. Crocker, '16; Men-at-Arms, A. Fletcher, Jr., '16, S. S. Low, II., '16.

"The Strangers," by Almet Francis Jenks, Jr., 1914—The Man, T. Smith, '15; The Woman, R. Wilson, '16; The Stranger, F. W. Tuttle, '15.

The local manager was Lewis A. Williams, Jr., and he was assisted by an advisory committee as follows: John Leal, '74; Thomas M. Day, '86; Louis K. Hyde, '87; Edward A. Stevenson, '88; Frederick W. Wallace, '89; Percy H. Stewart, '90; Henry L. DeForest, '97; Murray Rushmore, '13.

THE MISSES STEWART GIVE NEW YEAR'S EVE PARTY

The Misses Stewart, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Stewart, of South avenue, were the hostesses at a New Year's party on Thursday night. The evening was spent in dancing and playing games and a musical program was also enjoyed. Vocal solos were rendered by the Misses Jessie Stewart, Annette McGinley, Julia Clarke and Winifred Stewart. Miss Julia Clarke and Waldorf Ulrich also entertained with exhibition dances.

During the evening refreshments were served and at midnight the New Year was given a hearty welcome. Those who were present were the Misses Julia Clarke, Molly Clarke, Annette McGinley, Madeline Roy, Ruth Douglas, Ruth Stanley, Polly Stewart, Jessie Stewart, Winifred Stewart, Pauline Stewart, and Mrs. F. Root, of Holyoke, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Wernig, Mr. and Mrs. John Borman, Mr. Eggie and Sewell Ulrich, Waldorf Ulrich, Raymond Barker, Ivin Barker, Gordon Moy, Theodore Champlain, James Lindzey, Frank Clarke, Gardner Bristol, Theodore Hamilton, Russell Phillips, Kenneth Phillips and Foster Bowlby.

IMPRESSIVE WATCH NIGHT SERVICE LARGELY ATTENDED

Watch night service was held at the Park Avenue Baptist church, the program being started with a service of song by an orchestra including: Violins, Mrs. Charles Hellyer and Mrs. Willard Maxim; bass, Mrs. Evans, and piano, Miss Mary Clark. Dr. W. W. Pratt followed with a talk in which he carried his audience back to the years of their childhood and reviewed the familiar experiences of father, mother and home.

A social hour followed, during which a musical program was rendered including: Solo, "With Verdure Clad," by Mrs. Grace Robinson; solo, "I Will Extol Thee,' by Karl Wilson; duet, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought,' by Miss Marion Hudson and Raymond Manley; duet, "The Homeland," Joel Ollear and Walter Weber; solo, "Thy Sentinel am I," Raymond Manley, and violin solo, "Dormi Pure," James Tanham. Following this program, refreshments were served by the Agoga Bible class.

At 11:30, the pastor, Rev. Birney S. Hudson, led the audience into a prayer service, during which he spoke with marked feeling and power on the passing of the old year and the entering of the new.

CHANGE IN MORGUE-KEEPER?

Although no official action has been taken on the appointment of a Union county morgue-keeper by Judge James C. Connolly, of Elizabeth, the firm of J. J. Higgins & Brother, of West Fourth street, it is believed, will get the appointment. George Cole, the present keeper of the morgue, stated to a Daily Press reporter this morning that he was not seeking the appointment and further declared that he did not know what disposition had been made of the matter by Judge Connolly.

The Great January Clearance

The Year's Most Impressive Merchandise Event
In Which Prices In All Stocks Are Radically Lowered
In Preparation for Inventory

"To Keep the New Store NEW"

Clearance Is a Storekeeping Necessity, Not an Advertising Fiction

It is the opening of the gateway that lowers the level of stocks before the arrival of that grim occasion called stock-taking. At this time every yard, every dozen, every pair, every article, in an inconceivable variety of goods, is measured and counted and appraised as to its actual, present value—not on the basis of what it originally cost.

Hence the cry of the merchandise man to his buyers—"Get your stocks down. They lock up money, take up room, use up rent—and keep new goods from coming in to take their places. Out with them!"

This warning is issued far ahead.

CLEARANCE is the answer—a store-wide event, reaching into the farthest nook and cranny of every stock. January is devoted to it—the last month of the store business year; and brings the year's best savings.

Clearance is now in full progress—the Store is turned into a vast bazaar of bargains. Just a few notes follow of what it will offer—come for what you may need with the assurance that you will probably find it at a saving.

EXPLAINING HIS VOTE BACK HOME

THE DANSANTE GIVEN AT THE PARK CLUB

The New Year's Day reception at the Park Club, yesterday afternoon and evening, which was in the nature of a The Dansante, was enjoyed by more than 300 members and friends of the club. During the afternoon tea was served, Mrs. Wilbur H. Rogers and Mrs. William Barlow, presiding, assisted by Mrs. Edward Daniel, 2d, Mrs. Harry Robinson and Mrs. J. S. Schoonmaker. There was a happy exchange of greetings among all present.

The dancing, music for which was furnished by VanEpps Brothers, proved to be one of the delightful features of the function. The affair was in charge of the entertainment committee of the club, comprising Mrs. Hugh Jarvis, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Milne, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Laing and George English. The elaborate decorations, the work of Henry Johnson, of the club, were greatly admired.

A "500" party was given at the home of Miss Gwendolyn Stanton, last evening, in honor of her friend, Miss Beatrice Baxter. The first prize for the women was won by Miss Edith Ogden, and the first prize for men was won by John Heron.

Those who were present at the party were the Misses Beatrice Baxter, Katharine Bingaman, Jennie Wheelan, Edith Ogden, Gwendolyn Stanton, and James Buckle, John Heron, William Peacock, Edward Bingaman, James Herrman and John Lockard.

ENTERTAINED FRIENDS AT NEW YEAR'S PARTY

Harold Tomlinson was the host for a party of friends at his home Thursday evening, to see the New Year in.

Those present were the Misses Marion Hamilton, of Westfield; Marion Lockwood, Dorothy Stelle, Dorothy Simns, Hazel Carter, Ruth Ralston, Marion Blanchard, Elsie Stevens, Celia Cottrell, Elizabeth Martin, and Harold Tomlinson, David Fitch, Charles Phelps, John Cottrell, Harold Davis, William Peacock, Carter Goodrich, Carl Evans, Edward Ryder and Edward Crone. Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Suffern, the host's parents, assisted him in receiving.

JACK BRITTON HOST AT NEW YEAR'S EVE AFFAIR

Jack Britton, of East Front street, entertained about twenty-five of his friends from this city, Newark, Westfield and Fanwood, at a New Year's party at his home Thursday night, and the New Year was ushered in with the beating of tin pans and blowing of tin horns. Dancing was the feature of the evening and a musical program was also enjoyed.

Those present were the Misses Jessie Billing, Claire Britton, Dorothy Britton, Lorraine Dunn, Jennie Peacock, Nancy Bent, of Westfield; Ruth Gunton, Irene Doane, Ernestine Wilson, Grace Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley, Steven Britton, Harold Britton, Jack Britton, James Peacock, Herbert Peacock, Robert Eggee, of Fanwood; Charles Bent, of Westfield; Harry VanArsdale, of Newark; Arthur Dunning, Jack Eggee, Mr. Ayers and Howard Hastings.

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE MAKES APPOINTMENTS

The North Plainfield Township Committee elected William de La R. Anderson to serve as chairman during the coming year at a re-organization meeting held at noon yesterday. Reports submitted at the meeting showed that all 1914 bills had been paid and the 1914 tax money is clear, so that it will not be necessary to borrow funds to meet expenses.

The appointments follow: Treasurer, Albert Brokaw; clerk, George Mobus; chief of police, Edward T. Canning; police officers, Seymour L. Smith, P. J. Hickey, Harry L. Allen, John Sharkey and Herbert VanFleet; health officer, Thomas Levison, and township counsel, Hiram O. Hance. Dr. Richard Moldenke was sworn in as a committeeman. Following the business the Committee was the guest of Hiram Hance at a dinner in Hotel Washington, after which New Year's calls were made.

THE DAILY PRESS IN DUNELLEN will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon by Edward Pennock, druggist and newsdealer.

CHILDREN ALLEGE UNDUE INFLUENCE

File Exceptions to Will in Which Local Brothers Are Beneficiaries.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Alleging, among other things, that the instrument now on file for probate which is looked upon as the last will and testament of Heman Thomas Clark, brother of Walter and Charles Clark, of Plainfield, disposing of an estate of about $100,000 in personal and about $3,000 in real property, was procured by fraud and undue influence practiced upon decedent by Rose Noethiger, friend, of No. 828 Eastern Parkway, here; Nettie A. Kert and Margaret C. Lavin, both of Portchester, N. Y.; Walter and Charles Clark, both of Plainfield, and John S. Clark, of Patchogue, L. I., two sisters and three brothers, "or some one or more of them or some other person or persons acting in concert or privity with them or with some of them whose name or names are at present unknown to these contestants or to either of them," Marguerite D. and George Wesley Clark, daughter and son of the testator, both of Carmel, N. Y., have started an action in the Surrogate's Court here to have the instrument denied probate.

A trial by jury is demanded and the case will probably be called for trial during the early part of February.

Mr. Clark died August 30 last. A large portion of the estate is divided between three brothers, Walter and Charles Clark, both of Plainfield, and John S. Clark, of Patchogue, L. I.

NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION.

Rev. and Mrs. Edward S. Ralston were "at home" to their friends yesterday afternoon, at the parsonage of the Netherwood Reformed church, on Leland avenue. A large number took advantage of the opportunity to call and bring the greetings of the season to the host and hostess, and a very delightful afternoon was spent by all.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

MANAGER BIRMINGHAM, VICTIM OF HARD TIMES, TO TAKE SMALL SQUAD SOUTH

For various reasons, among which may be the two wars, European and Federal, the high cost of living and the failure of the hens to lay, Manager Birmingham will take south with him March 1 one of the smallest Cleveland squads that ever went down south to prepare for the championship season. It may not be quite as small as that which Bill Armour took to Atlanta in 1905, for that one numbered only about 22 players, but it will come close, at that.

Outside of his battery material, Birmingham will try out two or possibly three first basemen, one second sacker, a couple of shortstops and perhaps only two third basemen, in addition to five outfielders.

A rough estimate is that the aggregation will consist of four catchers, ten pitchers, seven infielders and five outfielders — 26 players all told.

Joe Birmingham.

MEDALS AND RIBBONS FOR Y. M. MEET ON EXHIBITION

The medals and ribbons that have been offered for the first annual indoor handicap meet to be held under the auspices of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. in the association gym, on Tuesday night, January 19, are now on exhibition at the office and entry blanks may be secured. There are five events and the most inexperienced athletes will have a fine chance at the prizes, as good handicaps will be given. Four of the events are handicap and one open.

Blue, red and yellow ribbons will be awarded to the entrants coming in first, second and third respectively, in every event and the three high point scorers will be given medals, gold for first, silver for second and bronze for third.

S. H. PATTERSON LOST OUT IN FINAL ROUND MATCH

S. H. Patterson, of this city, played two matches in the holiday golf tournament held at Pinehurst, N. C., yesterday, and was defeated in the final round of the beaten eight of the second division for which he qualified Wednesday. Both of the local man's matches were close, the first one going to 19 holes when he defeated W. T. Barr, of Brooklyn, 1 up.

Mr. Patterson in the final round played against C. H. Hanna, of Cleveland. The Plainfield player finally was beaten 1 up.

OLD TIME PLAYERS IN ACTION TONIGHT

Another Plainfield High School Alumni basketball team will play the High School five tonight on the P. H. S. court, five of the "oldtimers" who played for the red and blue as far back as five and six years ago, will don uniforms and try the "comeback" stunt. The teams will lineup as follows:

Plainfield	Alumni
Rosenson	Morris
McNamee	Snyder
forwards
Chamberlain	Gavett
centre
Wheelan	Lidgate
Peacock	Doane
guards

BASKETBALL AT Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will meet the Y. M. A. aggregation, of Bound Brook, on the local court, tonight.

HOPE CHAPEL TEAM.

The Hope Chapel basketball team will go to Bloomfield tonight and meet the M. E. team, of that place.

N. Y. U. BEATEN BY Y. M. C. A. PLAYERS

Swift Contest Results in One Point Victory for Local Aggregation.

In a contest replete with thrills the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basketball team took a one-point decision from the New York University Law School five on the home court, last night, by the score of 38 to 37. The visitors were as speedy a set of basketeers as have appeared here this year and gave a wonderful exhibition of versatality, going from intercollegiate to A. A. U. rules with the same speed.

The Plainfielders, playing under college regulations, with which they are unacquainted, wound up the first half on the shorter end of a 17 to 16 count. In the second half, playing their own game, the locals passed the New Yorkers by the slightest margin.

The victors outscored the rival clan by the margin of sixteen field goals to fourteen, the invaders being luckier in the foul shooting department. Albert Brynairski's foul goal scored after time had been called, won the game for the Queen Cityites.

The score:

N. Y. U. TEAM DEFEATED ON FAIR AND SQUARE BASIS

Poor sportsmanship on the part of the New York University Law School basketball representatives left many spectators in a quandry concerning the outcome of the encounter with the Y. M. C. A. five on the latter's court last night.

Exception was taken to the levying of a double foul by the referee and the University team refused to take the floor until the infraction charged up to them was blotted out, but at the same time they would not play unless they were given an opportunity to make a point on their half of the double foul. The fact that Umpire Helfant blew his whistle first when the fouls in question were made, makes no difference. Helfant failed to see a single foul made by the N. Y. U. boys during the whole game and it was only natural that he should single out the Plainfield's offense in the double foul, letting the one made against the locals go unnoticed.

Inasmuch as no time out had been allowed the visitors to wrangle with their manager on the sidelines the timekeeper kept account of the minutes as he would in a game and when the limit had expired he announced "time up." After the game had been finished the score stood at a 37 to 37 tie and the visitors decided that they would take advantage of their right to shoot their part of the double foul, levied during the latter part of the actual contest. This penalty, if turned into a point would have won the game for the New Yorkers, inasmuch as it was a penalty set during the contest and the visitors had the right to try for a goal even in the extra period.

The New York man failed to make the point and with the score still tied the referee levied a foul on the visitors for "delaying the game" another offense committed during the game. The Plainfielders were entitled to the same rights as the New Yorkers were in their shot, the point winning the game if it was made and making an extra period necessary if it was not made. The Plainfield man made the foul goal and the score at the end of the actual playing time, twenty minutes, stood 38 to 37 in favor of the locals, no extra period being necessary.

Pets Were No Match for the Speedy North Plainfield Players.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team started off the new year in fine shape yesterday afternoon when they defeated the Pets quintet in Saengerbund Hall by a 33 to 14 score.

Miss Douglas played a fine game for the winners and in the first period she made a spectacular field goal from the center of the floor. Miss Burtis and Miss Spencer also played stellar games. For the Pets, Miss Bryniarski and Miss Crane were the stars. The score:

FOUL SHOOTING WON PRELIMINARY CONTEST

The Y. M. C. A. seconds lost the preliminary at the association, last night, when the strong Plainfield Five, composed largely of Plainfield High School players, took the decision by the score of 33 to 18.

"Dan" McNamee starred from the fifteen-foot mark, chalking up ten points out of thirteen chances, while Ryder and Dunham played well at guard. For the association team, Karlberg and Brandt were the best scorers.

ELIZABETH CREEPING UP TO PATERSONIANS

Union County Seaters Kept Off the Top Rung by Locals Big Tally.

Statistics for the week in the Elks' Senior Bowling League, show that but one series has been played, but this setto brought out some decided shifts. By copping two out of three from Plainfield the Elizabeth aggregation came within one game of landing on the top rung with the Patersonians and in staving off defeat in the odd game the Queen City pinners narrowly missed the high team score record, setting up a 1,057, which placed them second in these ratings. Although in the cellar berth the Plainfielders cherish the honor of being runners-up in the high team record and boosted their average from 883.16 to 892.8.

Captain Blythe, of the Elizabeth Junior Elks' team, competed in his sixth Senior League series Wednesday night, bu towing to the fact that a trio of these contests were rolled before November 16 he does not disqualify himself from further competition on the minor circuit. Harry Taylor, of Paterson, maintained the first place supremacy in the individual ratings, with Mahlenbock, of the Skeertown quintet, a runner-up.

GUN CLUB SHOOT.

The Independent Gun Club held a tourney on the Maple avenue grounds yesterday. About twenty took part in seven events. The DuPont handicapping system was used.

WAR NEWS

have maintained the positions captured by our troops on December 30, and the enemy has not attempted any counter attacks. In the forest of La Pretre we have made slight progress.

"In the Vosges we have repulsed a German attack at Brenenil, three miles northeast of Badonvilier and inflicted severe losses on the enemy. The Germans also have experienced very heavy losses at Steinbach, where our infantry captured yesterday three new rows of houses."

The British battleship Formidable, which sank in the English Channel, Friday morning, with the greater part of her crew, was torpedoed off Portsmouth by a German submarine, according to a report current in Paris.

London, Jan. 2.—Only 141 of the 750 men aboard the Formidable, sunk yesterday by a German mine or submarine, have been saved. Seventy-one men were rescued by a British cruiser and seventy by a trawler. Eight officers and six midshipmen were among the rescued.

The official announcement from the press bureau reads:

"The battleship Formidable was sunk in the Channel, but whether by a mine or a submarine is not yet certain. Seventy-one survivors have been picked up by a British light cruiser, and it is possible that others may have been rescued by other vessels."

This hope was fulfilled later when the trawler Providence made port in Tor Bay, bringing with her seventy additional members of the Formidable's crew of 750.

The "Chronicle's" Brixham correspondent says the captain of the trawler Providence, which rescued seventy survivors, states other fishing boats were close at hand. The captain expresses the belief that other survivors have been rescued and taken to Dartmouth.

The correspondent of the "Express" in Athens reports that panic exists in Constantinople and that the Turks have abandoned all idea of taking the offensive.

"The holy relics," the dispatch continues, "have been removed to Brusa, Asia Minor, whither the sultan and the Porte are preparing to follow. All available forces, about 150,000 men, are concentrated in the city.

"Adrianople has been practically evacuated and the heavy guns there removed to Tobatalja, which is near the Turkish capital. Frenzied intrenching is in progress along the shores of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorous, and heavy preparations are being made to resist the passage of a hostile fleet.

"The attack on Egypt has been definitely abandoned, and the troops have been recalled to defend the Asiatic side of the Straits and Brusa.

"Everything points to Constantinople being the first enemy's capital to fall."

The Warsaw correspondent of the "Times" sends the report that six German army corps have withdrawn from that front, supposedly to guard against the rumored plan of the Russians to make an attack across the Vistula on the German line of communications between Lewicz and Thorn.

The "Daily Mail's" Rome correspondent says the Russians are invading Hungary from four points. "Refugees are flocking into Budapest," the dispatch adds. "There is a panic throughout Hungary as a result of the rapid retreat of the Austrian army before this new Russian advance. All public meetings have been prohibited in Budapest."

CITY COUNCIL'S ORGANIZATION

the joint sewage commission, requested the Council to meet between January 6 and 15 to arrange for a payment on the sewage contract account. The Council will meet again on Monday and also on Monday, January 11.

A communication from George H. Goddard and others complaining about a driveway leading to the property of G. M. Bowlby on East Ninth street, was referred, as was also a communication from C. Berry Egan, of Norwood avenue, complaining about his inability to get police headquarters one night about a week ago, when a number of negroes were fighting near his home.

Upon application licenses were granted to Robert Murray and George W. Hansen to maintain employment agencies. The notice from Plainfield Lodge, No. 85, B. P. O. E., that it would apply to the county court on January 5 for a license to sell liquor at its clubhouse, was filed.

A number of resolutions offered by Mr. Claybrook, which were adopted, authorized the purchasing of books and stationery, as well as committee cards and roll call slips, referred the Mayor's message and other reports to the finance committee to have the same printed in pamphlet form; appropriated $7,500 to the street committee and $2,000 to the committee on sewers until the regular appropriations are made; also $1,500 to the Board of Health, $300 to the Shade Tree Commission and $250 for the finance committee until they receive their regular appropriations.

It was also authorized by resolution that A. D. Jennings, assistant chief of the fire department, should continue to do the clerical work of the office, his pay to come out of the general fund. Councilmen R. A. Claybrook and Thomas F. Hylan were appointed members of the Board of School Estimate.

Finance—Richard A. Claybrook, chairman; Juan A. Babcock, Francis J. Blatz, Abiel D. Edgar, John H. Cose; streets—Francis J. Blatz, chairman; Thomas F. Hylan, Christie P. Hamilton, Robert H. Mayor Calkins' Message Teems With Splendid Suggestions for Bettering the City's Welfare

To the Honorable the Members of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

In addressing you at this time it hardly seems necessary to report generally with respect to the activities of the several departments during the year which has just come to an end. Not only would the presentation of an annual report by an incoming official be incongruous, but its subject matter is already within your knowledge. The details are amply supplied by the reports which are annually compiled and returned by heads of departments, boards and commissions, which reports it is to be assumed will be read alike by officials and by the citizens whose affairs are entrusted to their management. It is probable, too, that the citizens, in so far as a message to your honorable body may be regarded as one also for them, will be more interested in a program than in a review.

Efficiency and economy in the administration of their public business is attracting the attention of the people as never before, and the most superficial study of our methods of transacting business as a community reveals a problem which lies at the bottom of all others, only to vex and disturb us in the consideration of nearly every plan for the improvement of the municipal service. I refer to the question of organization. Accordingly I invite your attention, first to a discussion of home rule, which fundamentally concerns the machinery of local government; then to a recommendation for an expert survey for the purpose of ascertaining the exact facts with reference to our systems for the transaction of business; and finally to a few specific suggestions for interim efficiency and economy. These will be taken up under headings discussing schools, publicity and budgets, council committees, the fee system, city headquarters and city planning. There are operating matters which might be discussed with profit; but these, with your permission, I will reserve for future consideration as opportunity may present itself and as the public welfare may demand. They will receive better attention if taken up separately, when our thoughts are not engaged with this more important question of structural organization.

Home Rule.

The day will come when there will be struck from the municipality the chains which bind it to the State, because we are rapidly learning that there is a very clear line of distinction between their essentially different spheres of activity. What is needed is a broad general grant of power, reversing the presumption that a municipality has no powers except those expressly conferred and defined and such as may be incidental, so that in the conduct of their internal affairs cities may be presumed to have all necessary powers not expressly retained or denied by the State Constitution and by laws validly enacted thereunder. The State should have power to legislate on matters of State concern within the municipality—such as the debt-contracting power, public safety, public health, honest elections, and a free public school system which will guarantee at public expense a minimum standard of education, generously adequate for good citizenship and the ordinary pursuits of life, the intelligent recognition of opportunity for higher pursuits, and for the cultivation of ambition. But beyond a certain point the community as a business and social center should be free to decide for itself how much it can afford and wishes to spend on its schools, as on everything else. Each city should be free to adopt the precise form of government it believes best suited to its needs, and should be secure against legislative interference with its internal affairs; while at the same time the right and power of the State to legislate for its own welfare as a whole should remain unimpaired. The laws regulating cities are now far too numerous, and are cumbersome and conflicting. It is often impossible even after a careful examination of the statutes to affirm positively just what a city may or may not do, in matters which concern the State as a whole in not the slightest degree and it seems to me that the time has come for co-operation and organized effort on the part of our cities for the purpose of advancing the cause of genuine home rule by the enactment of an optional city charter law through constitutional amendment and by whatever means may be necessary. If it is true that the laws themselves are largely responsible for the inefficiency which everywhere permeates municipal government, the sooner we organize for their change the better. I do not know how much time you will be able to set apart for the consideration of a reform which, though of vital importance, is incapable of immediate attainment. But the matter is basic, and a well organized campaign for home rule should be instituted and vigorously and continuously maintained by the municipalities of the State until it shall be an accomplished fact.

Administrative Survey.

In the meantime and until we are permitted to manage our own affairs as we please, we should not be complaisant because we have been a fairly well-governed city as cities go, but should take thought seriously whether, in the management of the affairs which we have in common, we are as efficient as we might be; as efficient as we all try to be in matters which concern us separately and privately. The people of our city are rightly concerned over what may be called the high cost of living as applied to their public affairs. It is a fact which may not be denied that this cost is constantly going up and shows not the slightest indication of going down or even of remaining level. We may have integrity and ability in the public service but we cannot have efficiency and economy unless we are organized for it; and it has been my observation as a member of your honorable body that in many respects we really are organized for inefficiency—not through intention, but rather because we have been following naturally enough the lines of least resistance. We have simply gotten into the habit of transacting our public business by old fashioned methods, and because these have worked on the whole fairly well we have taken them for granted and have been looking elsewhere for reasons to explain the increasing cost of community living.

There are, of course, some reasons apart from methods and systems. There has always been and we note to an unusual degree in our own times, the inevitable advance of governmental function. We may believe that there is a danger that this expansion of the activities of government, unless restricted, will tend to weaken individual initiative. But we recognize it as a fact; and we know, besides, that there is much in it which is good and that we do not want to practise municipal economy merely by refusing to expend money for some of the things which heretofore were not a part of municipal endeavor or included in our annual budgets. One reason why the people are spending more is that they are wanting more. But this increase in the volume of their business only emphasizes the importance of organization; and it is because of my conviction that the first move in a program for efficiency and economy should be to test the machinery with which we are equipped for business, that I now urge upon you to make this matter your chief and immediate concern.

Sound accounting, for example, is as necessary to efficiency in municipal as in private business, because all business problems require decisions, and correct information is indispensible to the exercise of judgment. The real function of accounting is to make such information immediately available. It records transactions accurately and furnishes facts for comparison and use in the determination of plans. It makes it possible for citizens at any time to know the precise condition of the public business and to form intelligent opinions. We ought to satisfy ourselves whether, with the growth of the city, there has been a corresponding progress in business methods and whether we have kept pace with the development of recent years in municipal accounting; as for example in the matter of uniform classification of revenue and expense according to governmental functions, and in the distinction between revenue and non-revenue or capital transactions, and in stating municipal accounts on a true revenue rather than on a cash basis. Approved accounting facilitates inter-city comparisons, which are valuable as tests of efficiency. City officials who wish the public to be kept informed at all times as to existing conditions are seriously hindered if the accounting is inadequate, and we owe it to them as much as to the people to assure ourselves that we are squarely up-to-date in so important a matter.

There are some defects in our methods of doing business which will at once occur to all who are familiar with city affairs. Our budget making is crude, without standard estimate forms or means to compare requirements functionally, or year by year, and without provision for a tentative budget or public hearings thereon. We use an antiquated form of voucher-warrant requiring a veritable display of signatures by the Mayor, the president and two members of the Council, the department head, and by the city clerk as auditor; whose duties in that respect, however, are nominal as he relies on the heads of departments for prices, quantity and quality, for which there is no auditing system worthy of the name; nor for checking and proving departmental items continuously throughout the year and in the ordinary course of business. More than three signatures on a voucher are of doubtful value because they are generally made perfunctorily on the assumption that other officials have examined the claim. Each signature should be a real certificate to some fact within definite knowledge or it is of no value. Salary rates should be standardized so that each employe will be paid on the basis of work done. We have no system at all with respect to supplies and purchases. To buy economically, everything susceptible of description should be included in specifications and these should be standardized and department needs should be anticipated so that contracts can be let for quantities sufficient for a considerable period. Centralized purchasing is an accepted requirement of business efficiency. In the police department we are poorly equipped for efficiency maintenance by our lack of records and comparisons to show whether crime and juvenile delinquency are increasing or decreasing, or whether members of the force are making accuate and intelligent reports as to conditions on their posts. When we consider our available resources for community welfare through a body of men like the uniformed police, who day and night patrol the city and acquire or should acquire a knowledge of conditions which if systematically placed at the disposal of our several agencies would be of enormous value to them in their work, we must see the need of conserving and utilizing these resources more effectively than we have heretofore. There should be examinations on ordinances and rules and complete efficiency records should be maintained currently of every man in the fire and police departments as a basis for promotion. It is as important that good work shall be encouraged and rewarded as that neglect of duty shall be punished. Our heads of departments are handicapped by lack of facilities and equipment, and so are the Mayor and Council committees who have not even a stenographer to assist them in their work.

These are a few instances. But the vital thaing after all is that there must be many defects of organization about which we know little or nothing for the simple reason that the Council and Mayor are not experts in municipal affairs nor likely to become such under American conditions, at least not until we have at our disposal trained municipal administrators who spend their lives in the profession.

If, then, an administrative survey of our various departments is necessary to get at the basic defects and to point out approved methods of organization, it is apparent that the work should be put in charge of experts just as it would be by a practical man of affairs in his private business. In many of our large cities there are bureaus of municipal research which are maintained to pursue a vigilant study of civic administration and development. I recommend the employment of some such agency and I believe that the cost to the city of a survey would be more than made good by the economies and the increase in efficiency which would come with better organization.

While there may be ample authority in law for us to undertake this work ourselves and to incur the necessary expense, which at most would be inconsiderable, I am happy to advise you that a number of public-spirited citizens have recently organized for the express purpose of providing, at least in part, the means with which to proceed. Their suggestion may be for the city to pay for the survey of the departments over which it exercises direct control while they undertake to have a survey made of others, such as the departments of health and education. Or they may propose to undertake themselves the entire survey which would throw upon the city only the later expense of installation, after the system to be installed has been shown. Whatever the plan, I bespeak in advance the fullest co-operation of council and boards in placing the various departments at their disposal in such a way, consistent with the public service, that the work may be facilitated and not hindered. We may assume that our officials and boards have the public interest at heart and will welcome an analysis of systems undertaken solely for the purpose of getting at the facts so that they may be studied with reference to the experience of other cities and so that suggestions based upon the accepted standards of successful business, public and private, may be presented for our consideration. To resent a survey proposed in this spirit would really argue its necessity.

Manager Government.

A commission form of government under the Walsh Act would not make it any less desirable for us as a community to adopt the program above outlined, as it is inconceivable that any five elective officials giving the greater part, if not all, of their time to the city for the small salaries permitted by the act, would be as competent as experts to reorganize our systems or any more competent than city officials under the present form of government have been to operate under existing methods with a minimum of waste. We would do better to work for an option city-charter law and await the outcome of recent experiments with the commission-manager plan. In fact the new program of the National Municipal League deals largely with this plan, which contemplates a city manager and a small council elected at large in small cities, and from large districts in metropolitan centers. Personally I believe that in this new plan we shall find at last the form of government for which we have so long been groping. In any event we should hesitate to adopt merely a commission form of government when commission governed cities themselves are reaching out for the manager modification. However it may be as to an optional charter law, it should not be very difficult to get a law permitting manager government.

Schools.

The increasing cost of maintaining our public schools is perhaps the largest single item of general public interest, but I do not purpose to elaborate the problem at this time. I have already referred to it in discussing the relative functions of State and municipality and there can be no question that in this matter as in others affecting municipal expense, the laws are themselves the obstacles which stand in the way of many economies which cities should have the right to practise if they wish. On the other hand there is considerable leeway under the law, or at least within its contemplation, of which we have not hitherto taken full advantage—perhaps because the way to do so has not been made easy by the legislature. Here again it is a question of organization. The law provides in effect that the amount to be expended on schools shall be fixed by the Board of School Estimate, which consists of the Mayor, two members of the Council, and two members of the Board of Education—thus vesting the control in the city government. This Board of Estimate meets on a day between the fifteenth of May and the first of June, to consider estimates previously prepared by the Board of Education and to fix the school appropriation. But the law fails to specify that the preliminary estimates shall be prepared by the Board of Education in joint session with the Board of Estimate, and the result is that the city officials have no practical means of acquiring more than a superficial knowledge of the subject, and cannot act intelligently in discussing the proposed budget and voting upon it. The annual meeting of the Board of Estimate absolutely fails to furnish a business opportunity for the city to decide, as the law contemplates that it shall, how much it can afford to spend on school maintenance. The same applies with respect to meetings of the Board of School Estimate when a new building is contemplated. I do not think it is an exaggeration to say that these proceedings under our present practise are a good deal of a farce. I recommend to your honorable body as the most practical immediate way of curing this defect of organization the adoption of a resolution requesting the Board of Education to begin the preparation of estimates early in the year and to give the city members of the Board of Estimate an opportunity to be present at all meetings held for the purpose. An earlier preparation than heretofore of the tentative estimates is absolutely necessary in order that the Finance Committee of the Council may not be delayed as it has been in the preparation of its own budget. I do not think the School Board should object to this, or to any other plan whereby its proposed budget may receive intelligent consideration.

I also recommend that full opportunity be given the Board of Education to attend meetings of the Finance Committee of the Council when the city budget is being considered. One of our difficulties is due to this separation of the department of education so completely from the operation of other city departments. I recognize the desirability of some separation, enough to secure school management against purely political interference. But it is unbusiness like that the department which costs us the most to operate should be turned loose on expense without any adequate knowledge of the needs of other departments or much responsibility with regard to revenue. In these circumstances it is inevitable that the inducement is merely to make a good showing. The check on expense is lacking, because there is no responsibility for the showing of other departments. Hence there must be more co-operation by departments if there is to be true efficiency and economy in the administration of the city as a whole.

Publicity.

There should be public hearings on a tentaive school budget as well as on a tentative budget covering the other municipal departments. Budget making is public business but the public knows nothing at all about what is going on until it is all over! We have a large number of citizens who are well informed on matters affecting community welfare and sincerely desirous of helping to better conditions, and some of them are experts in their respective lines. Yet the public business is transacted with so little effective publicity that no use is made of much available information which they could supply. This is not applying the test of efficiency to the conduct of our affairs. I suggest that the departmental estimates be printed and distributed to the press and to civic organizations, also the tentative budgets of the Finance Committee and of the Board of Education; and that definite dates be set apart and advertised for public hearings thereon. It is the people's business and every reasonable effort should be made to find out how they want their money appropriated, and to give the greatest possible degree of publicity to every phase of municipal activity. Government must be in the open in order to be just and efficient, and this applies to the department of education as much as to any other municipal activity. The public should not only be permitted but should be encouraged to attend the business sessions of the Board of Education which should be advertised and held where the public can be accommodated.

Council Committees and Records.

In one respect the Council could improve immediately upon its business methods. As you know a large part of the routine business is done in committee, where matters are investigated and discussed and policies formulated for recommendation to the Council. But the personnel of these committees is constantly changing and it often happens that the chairman and all the members of an important committee are new. It has not been customary for committees to keep a record of their meetings, perhaps because clerical help has been lacking, and it follows that the discussions and decisions of one year are not available for the next and succeeding years unless because of exceptional importance they become a part of the experience of the heads of departments. In this there is involved not only a waste of valuable sources of information but a waste of time, making it necessary in many cases that routine work which has already been done once shall be done all over again. I suggest that the Council rules be so amended as to require the chairman of each committee to keep a typewritten record of the proceedings of all meetings, standard minute books to be supplied for the purpose.

I also recommend that the rules of the Council be amended so as to provide that the chairmen of the Committees on Streets and Sewers, Fire and Buildings, Police, and in addition either the Alms or Street Lighting Committee, shall be members of the Finance Committee. These are the committees which have the spending of money, and if the chairmen are also members of the Finance Committee there will result a centralizing of responsibility and authority which will make for the prompt and intelligent despatch of business.

There is need of more system in respect to legislation at Trenton affecting the interests of the city. While we have copies of pending bills it is not made the duty of anyone in particular to examine and report upon them. I suggest that the responsibility might be placed with the Laws and Ordinances Committee, which has been relieved by our able Coroporation Counsel of most if not all of its former duties and stands in some need of resuscitation.

Fee System.

I recommend the abolition of the fee system to the fullest extent possible under the law; and I direct your attention to Chapter 89, Laws 1914, regulating the payment of city officials, and authorizing the Council by resolution to provide that, where any official receives compensation for services in whole or in part by fees and whether such fees are paid by the city or otherwise, he shall be paid a stated salary to be specified in the resolution and no other compensation whatever. Thereafter all fees received by him for any service in connection with his office or employment are paid into the city treasury.

City Headquarters.

I recommend that steps be taken at once to provide the city with a building of its own with suitable accommodations for as many departments as can be brought under one roof. This is not a new project but there may be an added reason for giving it consideration at this time if we are really serious about this matter of efficiency and ecenomy. Speaking solely from a business standpoint our offices make for inefficiency and are not a credit to the city. For example there is only one room for the meetings of six or seven active Council committees; for commissioners to assess benefits and damages, and for the tax assessors, who have no office or headquarters of any sort for their maps, books and records. The city clerk's office is a narrow runway which originates in the collector's cage and dead-ends in the department of streets and sewers; offices wholly inadequate for the comfort of employes or for the proper care of valuable documents. Some of our departments, and officials, are entirely without stenographic or other clerical help because not needed all the time. If they could be located conveniently with reference to each other, a single well-organized office force might be made to serve the requirements of a number of them. Our offices are not arranged for the maintaining of standard business methods. Even if there were a building in the city where suitable quarters could be had, the rentals would probably equal if not exceed the interest on the investment by the city in a building of its own. We do not require a costly structure for display but we do need space, and tools with which to work. A city building is really necessary to good organization. I have thought that possibly the building used by the police department could be enlarged so as to accommodate also the Council and all city officials, the District Court, assessors, board of health, commissioners, and committees of citizens working in the interest of the community. But if not, a satisfactory site could undoubtedly be found, perhaps in that vicinity so as to form, together with the proposed Y. M. C. A. building, the nucleus of a new and attractive civic centre.

City Planning.

It is a serious defect of organization that we have no department for the formulation of a definite policy with regard to the future development of the city. The Public Affairs Committee of the Common Council is hardly a planning committee. It is perhaps a receiver of plans and propositions, as it is also of complaints; but as it never has an appropriation, and as the other committees have their own troubles making both ends meet, the real function of the so-called Public Affairs Committee seems to be to explain as plausibly as possible that new improvements cannot be undertaken "at the presen time" owing to lack of funds. The next year there is a new committee which again gravely considers the city hall proposition, garbage and ash disposal, street widening, additional city parks, the improvement of Green brook, and other plans for bettering the service and for beautifying the city, again reporting progress and lack of funds. Some of these questions, such as municipal collection of ashes and garbage, may be put off from year to year without serious detriment, but others may be deferred indefinitely only at great ultimate cost to the city. The widening of Park avenue from Second to Front street is an example; and Central avenue could be widened now at comparatively little expense.

We should have some permanent organization with facilities for keeping records, for studying the development of the city, and for formulating plans to care for its growth. The city officials have about all they can do to look out for the present. There is need of a committee or commission closely related to the government whose main business it shall be to keep an eye out for the future. In this connection I direct your attention to Chapter 170, Laws 1913, being an act authorizing the appointment of a city plan commission to prepare a plan for the systematic development of the city, and authorizing the appropriation of funds to defray necessary expenses, the commissioners however to serve without pay. The expense would be trifling compared with the benefits obtained and would at all times be within the control of the Council. I suppose the Public Affairs Committee, if it had a small appropriation for necessary expenses, might undertake city planning; but the advantage of a commission would lie in its possible permanency for the continuous study of city development, while its activities conceivably might attract voluntary contributions by interested citizens. The only disadvantage of a commission would be in the possibility of further meddling by the State with its authority, which might become burdensome to the community. But there would seem to be no greater danger here than with a Playground or Shade Tree Commission. In any event, comprehensive city planning is the modern way because it is businesslike. Improvements as to parks, the laying out and widening of streets, public hygiene in the disposal of waste, city store-yards, public comfort stations, billboards and the regulation of advertising signs—all these and many other improvements, to be made wisely, must have reference to a well defined policy which takes into consideration the future as well as the present. I suggest that this subject be referred to the Public Affairs Committee for study, and for a report and recommendation.

I have tried to outline in a general way a program for greater efficiency and economy in the administration of our public affairs, discussing chiefly the fundamental defects of organization and suggesting remedial methods which to me seem the most thorough and direct. We must go to the bottom of things if our trouble is at the bottom. You may have suggestions of your own with respect to these matters, and others, which will add materially to the value of the within recommendations.

It has been my privilege to work with most of you in the Council during the past year and I am sure that you will feel that you may rely upon me to co-operate with you to the fullest extent in everything which concerns the welfare of the city. It will be our joint concern to administer the affairs of the community to the very best of our ability and with an eye solely to the public interest. I extend to you most cordially the greetings of a New Year, with best wishes that it may be one upon which we shall all be glad to look back for its record of achievement.

NOTES FROM LABOR FIELD

The year 1915 promises big things for American workers.

In Ohio the cities are compelled to supply clothing to poor children, says the attorney general.

Massachusetts has raised the workmen's compensation benefit from 50 to 66 2-3 per cent. of actual wages.

The New Haven's retrenchment, to make up the depletion of frenzied finance, hits the shop workers at the wrong time.

More men were killed or injured in United States mines in a year than England has lost in the European war.

Steel workers' wages will not be cut, and 90 per cent. of the employes are satisfied with the present scale agreement.

Seattle unions will operate their own laundry, as a model institution for other cities to follow.

The Stockton labor fight resulted in victory for the workmen, and its settlement prevented a spread of the trouble.

Vigorous renewal of the fight for an eight-hour law will be made in Ohio when the Legislature convenes.

The Georgia child labor law goes into effect with the new year. Children under fourteen are to be taken out of the mills.

Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi and Virginia will also put new codes into force, tending to raise the age limit and educational requirements.

President Brock, of the Laundry Workers Union, recently exhibited $1,000 in bills which he charged had been handed him as a bribe to cease organizing.

Thirty-one per cent. of organized German workmen are in the war. The German Federation has contributed nearly $4,000,000 to the relief of the needy.

The threatened strike on the Cotton Belt road may be mediated. The unions resent the discharge of a conductor for intoxication, claiming he was ill and not drunk.

"Prayer for success in war is the most shameless hypocrisy, the bitterest mockery, the vilest prostitution of things sacred, the most revolting blasphemy the human brain can conceive. Hell echoes with raucuous mirth at the mouthings to heaven of these butchers who masquerade as followers of Him at whose birth the angels sang of peace on earth and good will among men."—Painter and Decorator.

PLAINFIELD NEWS.

There is no better way to keep out-of-town friends informed as to Plainfield news than to mail to them from time to time a copy of The Press after you have finished with it, sometimes marking an article of special interest.

Better yet, you might send some one out-of-town a subscription to receive The Daily Press every day at the rate of 10 cents a week or $5.00 a year.

WE do not take this space to tell you how cheaply we print. We do not want that kind of printing.

The kind of printing we do, however, cannot be bought for less, anywhere.

John Hull Dressed Himself In a Plum Colored Coat.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — Worth Her Weight In Gold.

"I'LL tell you a story tonight, kiddies, about a young lady whose daddy thought she was worth a good deal."

"All daddies think that!" cried Evelyn happily as she snuggled down beside daddy for the evening story.

"That is so," replied daddy, "but not many of us can show it, as did Captain John Hull, who was mint master of Massachusetts in early colonial days.

"When the captain had grown very rich a young man came courting his only daughter, Betsy.

"Now, Betsy was by no means so slender as are some of the damsels of our own time. She had been fed on pies and doughnuts and Indian puddings until she was as round and plump as a pudding herself.

"So with this round, rosy Miss Betsy did Samuel Sewell fall in love, and when he proposed for her hand the father rather roughly told him that he would find her rather a heavy burden, but to take her. But he never said he would give her anything for a wedding dowry.

"On the wedding day honest John Hull dressed himself in a plum colored coat, all the buttons of which were made of pine tree shillings, the buttons of his waistcoat sixpences, and the knees of his short breeches were buttoned with silver threepences.

"Thus attired, he sat very dignifiedly in his great chair, and, being a portly old gentleman, he completely filled it from elbow to elbow.

"On the opposite side of the room sat Miss Betsy between her bridesmaids and blushing like a full blown peony.

"The bridegroom came in and the minister, and when the ceremony had been performed Captain Hull shook his son-in-law by the hand and wished him much joy of his penniless bride.

"'I married my wife for love,' spoke up Mr. Samuel Sewell proudly, 'and I can make a living for her just as good as she has ever had.'

"Mr. Hull was secretly much pleased with this independent son-in-law, but what he said was:

"'Well, I think my daughter Betsy is worth her weight in gold. Bring me the scales, men.'

"Two men came lugging in a pair of scales and some big bags.

"'Get into the scales, Betsy,' commanded her father.

"So Betsy got on one side of the scales. Then into the other side the men poured gold pieces from the bags until the scales exactly balanced.

"'There,' said her father; 'that is Betsy's dowry, and I hope she makes you as good a wife as she has been a daughter to me.'"

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

The clock struck eleven on New Year's eve and each stroke was like a blow falling on the heart of the little woman sitting in her pleasant living room alone. Yes, alone on the second anniversary of her marriage. She had tried to read, to sew, to play the piano. She could do nothing. Was all the short happiness of her married life to end like this? She bowed her head on her arm and listened for the step that did not come.

"Oh, how could I be so blind, so stupid," she reflected bitterly; "as if our happiness were not worth more than all the money in the world!" Like a knell her husband's parting words kept sounding in her ears, "I see there is no use of our trying to agree or even to get along peaceably together." He had left her then in anger. What if he never came back?

It was so futile, so needless, this quarrel, and she admitted that she was the one who had been the first to lose self-control, as she kept going over the conversation.

Everything had been so pleasant at the supper table, decorated for the anniversary celebration, until her husband had said: "I have decided to refurnish my office, as it is not at all up to date." She had replied: "Oh, don't spend money on office furniture now, Ray. We have hardly got baby's doctor bill paid, and we have almost nothing in the bank."

"It's a business investment. I must not drop behind in the procession, if I don't want to lose practice," he had persisted.

"If I had only dropped the subject there," she reflected, "everything would have been all right. Instead I got angry and said we would never get anything ahead because of his extravagant ideas and added, 'I am sick of trying to save all alone and let you do the spending.'"

"Look here," he had answered, and she remembered how his eyes blazed, "have I ever objected to your spending? I'm no tight-wad." And she had retorted with equal warmth: "The reason I do not spend more is because there is nothing left to spend when you get through."

That had made him white with anger.

"The pocketbook with all I earn is in the drawer. You are free to take what you want," and then those parting words. "And I am here alone," she told herself, "going over the throes of this lost game of life, learning by my sorrow."

So intent had she been on her thoughts that she had not heard the door open noiselessly, and not until a hand was laid on her bowed head did she look up.

With a cry of joy she sprang into her husband's arms.

He sank into the big easy chair with her in his arms and said softly: "Little wife, this must never happen again. We can't afford this sort of thing. I have decided to divide the earnings with you, so that you may feel independent. Don't you think that plan will work better?"

"Yes, Ray," she whispered, slipping an arm around his neck.

"Happy New Year!" he cried as the clock began striking twelve.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

The suffrage majorities in Nevada and Montana amounted to about 7,000. The anti-suffrage majorities in Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Missouri and Ohio aggregated more than 360,000.

There is not one suffrage State that has such good laws for child-labor regulation or for the protection of women in industry as the State of Ohio, where suffrage has just been defeated by a majority of 182,000.

Miss Lucy Price has been making a canvas among factory girls in New York State to get their views on suffrage. 85 per cent. of them declare themselves unwilling to undertake political duties.

Miss Emmeline Pitt, a Philadelphia wage-earner, says:

"The pink teas, the Newport conferences at $5 admission, the auto tours and the bequest of millions to the 'cause' are all evidences to the women who earns her own living that the 'suffrage trust' is interested in nothing but a selfish proposition to grant political authority to a clique of hysterical social leaders who have become surfeited with the exercise of every power in woman's sphere and wish to usurp the position of men, merely because it is the only thing they have not done.

"The professional suffrage agitator, like the professional Socialist, is not the woman who works, but the semi-educated amateur who believes that one or two quick changes in law making would bring about high wages, reduce the cost of living and act as a panacea for the ills of all mankind.

"Working women have no such illusions. It is the woman of leisure who seeks political leadership for her own amusement, who prattles of the 8,000,000 working women who demand the ballot—and doesn't take the trouble to learn that there are only 645,000 Suffragists in America, according to their own admission.

"Working women do not want a vote, but a square deal, and none of the professional reformers by way of the ballot ever come down to earth and propose anything definite to make the lot of the woman who works easier. It is rather nonsensical to tell the working woman in store, factory or shop that all she needs is a vote to increase her income and be happy, when she already knows that women themselves are her hardest taskmakers.

"The marked preference women show for the dullest and most unremunerative factory work rather than engage as domestics is all the evidence anyone needs to prove that women have not shown themselves as considerate of their employes as men. Why don't these arch reformers who seek the ballot, as they pretend, to benefit the working girl outside the home use whatever administration ability they think they have to first solve the 'servant girl problem?'"

In the introduction to her autobiography, Mrs. Pankhurst tells us of the "noble," "generous," and "patriotic" conduct of the Militants in laying down arms when war broke out with Germany, and she wonders that the government, "unmindful of their unselfish devotion" has failed to come forward with the proper reward. The Nation remarks that to take her seriously on this point would be an insult to her understanding. When Englishmen were being killed and maimed by the thousands on the field of battle, the fate of a few women who chose wilfully to starve themselves to death would pass unnoticed, and hundreds of policemen would not have been supplied to protect them from the mob every time they committed their crimes. When war broke out, the Militant game was over.

Woman suffrage presupposes a state of society in which force is no longer necessary. This is something for Suffragists to remember. Mrs. Pankhurst to the contrary, women can accomplish nothing by force. All that the Militant "warriors" have done has been to take advantage of masculine notions of chivalry.—The Nation, December 10.

Mrs. Pankhurst, in her autobiography, says: "Now our task was to show the government that it was expedient to yield to the women's just demands. In order to do that we had to make England and every department of English life insecure and unsafe. We had to make English law a failure, and the courts farce comedy theatres; we had to discredit the government and parliament in the eyes of the world; we had to spoil English sports, hurt business, destroy valuable property, demoralize the world of society, shame the churches, upset the whole orderly conduct of life." In this bland statement Mrs. Pankhurst shows a moral obtuseness equaled only by the many Suffragists who uphold her.

At the recent suffrage convention at Chattanooga, the two guests of honor were the two leading Militants of Great Britain and the United States, Christabel Pankhurst and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, and no women ever received greater ovations. Miss Pankhurst's speech aroused the delegates to frantic fervor, and they marched around the hall singing strains of Dixie, with cheers of "Hurrah for Virginia," "Hurrah for Louisiana" and so on.—Chattanooga Times.

Miss Pankhurst hopes to lecture in every large city in this country. Although she was, next to her mother, the prime mover in the Militant movement, she is being enthusiastically welcomed by Suffragists all over the country. In Minneapolis the Grade Teachers' Association has secured her to speak to them.

A large reception was held on Sunday for the Suffragists at Nashville during the convention. A dispatch from Nashville to the Jacksonville Metropolis says: "A delegation of ministers asked Mrs. Dudley, chairman of the committee on arrangements, to call off the reception, declaring it a desecration of the Sabbath. Mrs. Dudley retorted that Dr. Anna Shaw was a minister and would not be likely to countenance any Sabbath desecration, and that Dr. Shaw approved of the reception. She virtually told the ministers to 'mind their own business' and the discussion ended."

A feature of the suffrage convention at Nashville was that it was the first time the newspaper men present had seen such a thing as a purely political meeting on Sunday afternoon. The Socialists of Nashville turned out in force, with banners saying: "Every Socialist is a Suffragist" and "two million Socialists will vote for suffrage in 1916." Sunday political meetings came in with woman suffrage in Chicago, also.

California has elected a woman Socialist to its legislature. The New York Call, a Socialist paper, says: "The election of a Socialist woman to a legislature certainly seems to mark a new era in the political life of the nation. It seems the indisputable sign that the cruel winter of capitalism is nearly over and that the warm spring of Socialism is not far behind."

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority, is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.—Adv.

Household Hints

LEFTOVER FOWL RECIPES

Escalaped Turkey—Butter a dish, then put in layer of cracker crumbs, seasoned with salt, pepper and butter, then a layer of leftover turkey chopped fine, adding stuffing and gravy of turkey. When the dish is full, beat two eggs, add three tablespoons of milk, with butter, pepper and salt and some rolled cracker crumbs. Spread this over the top and bake half an hour.

Escaloped Turkey — Into small ramequin dishes sprinkle dried bread crumbs browned in butter. Over this put a layer 1½ inches deep of chopped cold turkey moistened by spoonful of giblet gravy. Cover with browned crumbs, and bake till chestnut brown.

Chicken and Ham Mold—Two cups cold chopped chicken, one cup chopped ham, one cup cold boiled macaroni, two eggs, one tablespoon butter, one cup gravy, pepper and salt. Mix chicken, ham and macaroni, moisten with eggs, melted butter and gravy, season highly. Butter a mold, pour mixture in, put on cover tightly and boil two hours. Dip mold into cold water for few minutes, turn out on hot dish, serve with tomato sauce.

Economical Cake—One cup brown sugar, one cup water, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, one tablespoon lard, one teaspoon salt. Cook three minutes, let cool, then add one teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon baking powder, two cups flour, one cup raisins.

Stuffing Croquettes—To Use Leftover Fowl Dressing: Strip all meat from carcass of fowl, put all the dressing with it, add a little celery and chop all together fine; form into cakes such as meat balls, dip in beaten egg, fry in deep fat until brown.

For holiday gatherings and Christmas parties for children especially, take paper napkins, with Santa Claus or holly, sew together like tablecloth, spread on table, at each place; use glass wit hone napkin and poinsettia flower in, then Christmas cards for place cards; makes a pretty table for holiday. Napkins sell at 12 for 5 cents. You can make sheets for Christmas tree to stand on also.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

Excellent Tooth Powder—Suds of castile soap and spirits of camphor, of each an equal quantity. Thicken with charcoal to a thick paste. Apply with finger or brush. To keep the front teeth perfectly white wipe them off with a clean linen cloth or handkerchief, then wind a corner of the cloth around the finger and rub the teeth hard and thoroughly twice a day. Results will be excellent.

Shampoo—One cup of soft soap, two-thirds cup pure alcohol, one-third teaspoon oil of lavender. Make soft soap by boiling bits of good soap that are left, shaving them and cooking in hot water to make one cup of soft soap.

To Remove Discoloration From Bruises—Apply cloth wrung out of very hot water, and renew frequently until the pain ceases. Or, apply raw beefsteak. For a burn use sweet oil or olive oil and lime water, equal parts mixed, and keep the burn well covered with it.

THE TABLE

Spaghetti With Tomato Sauce—When serving anything with tomato sauce it is much cheaper and easier to use a can of tomato soup. Take half box spaghetti; cook about 20 minutes in boiling water, then let cold water run over it. Now take two slices bacon cut in small pieces, fry brown in deep pan with a little onion. Mix spaghetti with a can of tomato soup and put all together in pan with bacon and onion. Let it simmer about 15 minutes. This tastes like the canned spaghetti, but is much cheaper. You can have plenty for six persons for about 20 cents.

Escaloped Cabbage—Boil cabbage until tender. Place in casserole or baking dish a layer of cabbage, a layer of white sauce and a layer of buttered bread crumbs. Place uncovered in oven for 15 minutes. White Sauce: Melt together one tablespoon butter and one tablespoon flour. Add one cup milk and cook until it begins to thicken. For buttered crumbs take cup of bread crumbs and lump of butter. Mix in frying pan until crumbs begin to brown.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIFLD

The year of 1914 has passed out of existence, and Plainfield stands out among the few cities which has made a most favorable showing in the construction world, notwithstanding the industrial and financial conditions which have hit the city from all sides. To be sure, the records show a falling off of building in this city, but when compared with other towns of the same size, and still others with a larger population, the "Queen City of the East" has made a record which is most favorable.

Figures compiled from the permits issued from the office of Inspector T. O. Doane shows that 159 new buildings of all sorts and descriptions are called for, including one school building, one church, five business buildings, one apartment, six combination business and apartment buildings, thirty-nine garages, and seventy-five dwellings. In addition to the above, forty-three permits called for the alteration of buildings.

The new buildings called for in these permits represent an aggregate expenditure of $468,533, while it is estimated that approximately $12,865 was expended for the work of altering and generally improving buildings covered by permits, bringing the total for construction operations in this city up to $571,398 for the year of 1914.

The First ward, as may be noted below in the table, led the city in the number of new dwellings to be erected, while the Second ward led in the number of garages. The latter ward also leads in the amount of money to be expended. New business buildings were few and far between this year, owing to financial conditions. Work on the $80,000 school which the Board of Education is to erect on Evergreen avenue, for which a permit was issued during October, has not been started, as yet, owing to the Board rejecting the first bids for the contracts. The contracts for this building have not as yet been let. Work on this building will no doubt be started early in the spring.

Taking everything into consideration, local contractors are well satisfied with the operations of the past year, and look for a far better season during the current year. The fact that permits for seventy-five dwellings were issued this year appears to indicate that the city has a strong hold on and strongly appeals to the prospective home seeker coming to within our gates.

The table appearing below shows the distribution and values of buildings for which permits have been issued during 1914:

HOPE CHAPEL IS 27 YEARS OLD

West End Religious Body Has Had a Very Remarkable Growth.

INSTITUTED JAN., 1888

Institutional Work Carried On in Various Departments Has Necessitated Twelve Additions to the Building.

A frame structure with twelve additions, and the thirteenth a possibility during the course of the coming year, is the unique record by the aggregation of buildings in the West End known as Hope chapel Instituted January 1, 1888, as a branch Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. Hope chapel yesterday completed the twenty-seventh year of its organization, making it one of the best known landmarks west of Plainfield avenue.

The original building, a cut of which appears on this page, stood for several years at East Fifth and Washington streets, and served as a gathering place for Bethel Mission, where it was followed by the brick edifice known as Bethel chapel, another branch of the Crescent Avenue church. The first session of Sunday-school was attended by twenty-seven who enrolled as members. The school steadily grew, and for several years had the largest membership in the county.

For three years but two Sunday services were held at the chapel, until Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, now pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church, of Chicago, took charge. Mr. Newell was succeeded in 1901 by Rev. Lawrence R. Howard, also now of Illinois, who was the predecessor of the present pastor, Rev. Frederic L. Greene. The late Henry C. Squires was the first superintendent of the Sunday school, and served as such up to the time of his death. H. R. Munger, of the borough, succeeded Mr. Squires, and served but a short time. G. Herbert Condict is the present head of the school.

HOPE CHAPEL AS IT APPEARED IN 1888.

Laying great emphasis on institutional church work, Hope chapel, during the fall, winter and spring seasons, is open seven nights a week, with its gymnasium classes and teams one of the features of the life to care for the younger people. The attendance at these classes often tax the capacity of the gymnasium, and it is highly probable that the coming year will witness improvements to overcome the present limited accommodations.

The church auditorium, known as Hope Memorial chapel, was made possible through a legacy left the chapel, this portion of the building having been erected in 1898. This is used exclusively for services of worship, while the various social events held under the auspices of the many clubs and organizations take place in the Sunday-school rooms.

Taking all things into consideration, Hope chapel is probably the most unique building of its kind in this vicinity, with the original building as a centre for the many extensions which have been found necessary to have added during the course of the years.

HOPE CHAPEL AS IT APPEARS AT THE PRESENT TIME.

NO PERMITS ISSUED DURING PAST WEEK

The year of 1914 passed out of existence very quietly as far as the construction world is concerned, no permits being issued by Inspector T. O. Doane to mark the closing days of the twelfth month.

Some interior work still remains to be accomplished, keeping a small number of the mechanics busy for a short time. Contractors, however, are keeping the number of men employed on such jobs down to a minimum number except where the contractors themselves are being pushed to complete the work at an early date. Very little encouragement is being held out for immediate relief of the building situation in the near future, but with a promising outlook for plenty of early spring operations.

TO BUILD NEW HOUSE.

Work on an eight-room dwelling on Sheridan avenue, near Grant avenue, for William H. Abbott, will be started Monday of next week. The structure will have a frontage of 40 feet, with a depth of 26. The estimated cost has been placed at $6,000. William B. Bird has been awarded the carpenter contract, while John T. Caulfield will care for the masonry work.

TENEMENT BOARD PASSES ON SEVERAL PLANS

The Board of Tenement House Supervision last week approved ten plans calling for the expenditure of $88,500, an increase of $32,500 in value over the preceding week, but a decline of two in the number of permits.

Of the ten permits, two called for alterations at a cost of $11,500, leaving the balance of $77,400 to be invested in new buildings.

EIGHT BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED IN DECEMBER

Eight permits issued by Inspector T. O. Doane sums up the total of building operations during the course of December, an estimated cost of $22,090 having been placed on the new buildings and alterations covered by the permits.

The tables below show the distribution and cost of the buildings as well as comparing the operations for December with the same month of 1913.

NEWARK REPORTS DECREASE OF MORE THAN SIX MILLION

Newark, Jan. 2.—The annual report of William P. O'Rourke, superintendent of buildings, indicates there was a decrease of more than $6,000,000 in the amount of work done on permits issued from his office, as compared with 1913. Fees also decreased about 50 per cent.

Business depression, intensified by the European war and tightness of the money market are the causes attributed to the declines. In 1913 work amounting to $16,317,973 was called for in permits issued. This year it dropped to $10,080,587. The office fees dropped from $28,573 in 1913 to $14,586.

JUST NOTES

In the National Real Estate Journal for December there appears a strong plea by Fitz-James E. Browne for a law compelling the licensing of real estate brokers. He takes the stand that the licensing of brokers would prove a guarantee to the buyer and to the seller and would prevent the machinations of the "shyster" operators. He says:

"To begin with, real estate is not a business, it is a profession. Name me one profession that is not under regulations if you can. The doctors are, the dentists are, the architects and insurance men are. It is true that we have bad in every profession, but it is the fear of God that keeps a man good, and so it is the fear of the law which keeps a man straight. * * * If you license real estate brokers, * * * the proprietor knows that his property cannot be hawked about and depreciated, the buyer knows that the price quoted by the reputable agent is correct and the agent knows that if he sells the property he will get his commission."

The Bulletin which has just been issued by the United States Geological Survey on "Slate in the United States," by T. Nelson Dale and others, defines and classifies the slates of the United States and describes the principal deposits. The Bulletin consists of 200 pages and is well illustrated with photographs and maps.

Boston, Mass., has decided that hereafter only buildings of rat-proof construction will be permitted within the city limits.

Due to the great European war, the course of supply of Circassian walnut has been cut off and we are turning to the use of our own native walnut, which is again becoming very popular. Before the war most of our native walnut was sent to England, Germany and France.

A movement has been inaugurated by the Sheet Metal Contractors of the city of Philadelphia looking to a more thorough and practical industrial education for the apprentice. Beginning on September 21 the Philadelphia Trade School began day instruction for a class of about forty sheet metal apprentices, all of whom have the privilege of attending school one full day in a week from 9 a. m. until 3 p. m. and the remainder of that day for study. The class is divided into five sections; that is, one for each school day of the week and the employer and the apprentice select the day the apprentice will attend the school. The course of study is that outlined by the educational committee of the National Association.

IN THE SUBURBS

Dunellen.

Paul Ratti is planning to build a one-story frame structure on North avenue, between his store and the property of Gustav Winter. The building, which is to be used as a store, will have a frontage of fifteen feet and a depth of sixty feet.

The Dunellen Home and Investment Company has recently purchased ten lots from Edward Maurer. It is expected that the concern will erect a number of dwellings on the newly acquired property early in the spring. Five of the lots are located on Fourth street, while the others are on Washington avenue.

John P. Fenner has another house in the course of construction on Third street.

Mrs. Gretchen J. Winges has sold a fifty foot front property on North avenue to Robert Broadway, of New Market, the deal being made through the agency of John Fedderman. A business building will probably be erected on the property at the opening of another building season.

A new house is being erected for L. W. Treichler on Mountain View terrace and the contract for installing the plumbing and heating has been awarded to Contractor Frank Broshart. Contractor Broshart has also secured the contract for putting the plumbing and heating plant into the new house of Contractor C. Lester Rule on Center street.

New Market.

The alterations in the carpentering line are proceeding steadily at the office of the C. E. Kelly Company.

South Plainfield.

BUNGALOW SHOOTING CASE HEARD IN COURT

Providence, R. I., Jan. 2.—The sensational shooting up of bungalow raiders at Esmond, R. I., last week, in which four men were shot, will be unfolded in court today, when Amos Collinson and his son, John Collinson, will be arraigned on the charge of assault with intent to kill. The four men are recovering from their wounds. The bungalow shooting was the result of a row over the ownership of a bungalow. At midnight one night the Collinsons were aroused by a noise in the uncompleted bungalow which was built by agreement on their land. The Collinsons claim there were noises which indicated someone was destroying the bungalow. They also claim that William Dickinson, of Providence, called them names, and ordered the gang with him to continue their work of tearing the building down. They claim they were defending themselves when they shot. Theodore LaMonthe is the most severely injured of the four victims.

"Hit the Trail" With SMOKE BELLEW

By JACK LONDON

OUR new serial is one of the best stories Jack London ever wrote.

It is about the iron muscled giants of the gold fields—about real men who face danger and sudden death without flinching.

It is by an author who has braved the snows and ice of the Yukon and has lived the life like Smoke Bellew, his hero.

It is as rich as a "mother lode" of Alaska—rich in adventure, romance, privation, heroism and love that is greater than death itself.

REMEMBER! Smoke Bellew Is the First of Our BIG SIX SERIAL LIST

The remaining stories to be published in this paper during 1915 are "Peg o' My Heart," "A Fool and His Money," "Penrod," "The Master Mind" and "The Forester's Daughter."

WOMEN IN PROFESSIONS.

Census Report Shows Big Proportional Increase In Decade.

Over half a million more persons above ten years of age were engaged in professional pursuits in the United States in 1910 than in 1900, according to figures given out by the census bureau. In 1910 the number of persons engaged in professional pursuits was 1,825,127, compared with 1,258,538 in 1900.

Of those engaged in professional occupations in 1910 1,151,709 were men and 673,418 women. This compares with 827,941 men and 430,597 women in 1900. During the decade the proportion of men decreased in the professions from 65.8 to 63.1 per cent, while that of women increased from 34.2 to 36.9 per cent. In 1910 there were four women to every seven men engaged in professional service, a large proportion of the women being teachers.

Some of the most noteworthy increases follow: Architects—Men, 110.5; women, 200.7. Literary and scientific persons—Men, 102.9; women, 126. Actors—Men, 95.6; women, 88.1. The smallest increase was in the number of lawyers—men 6.5 and women 3.3

MICE IN MUSIC'S HOME.

Unused Hotel Organ Scene of Seventeen Evictions.

An eviction took place at one of the big New York hotels about which considerable secrecy was preserved, although it affected no fewer than seventeen. In one of the storerooms an organ has reposed ever since early last spring. The other day the orchestra leader decided his music needed a little more substance than the stringed and brass instruments had been able to put into it, and he asked that the organ be brought down from its resting place and cleaned up.

The instrument was placed in the lobby, and the cleaner got to work. After dusting the keys with a damp cloth he began to press them, at the same time working the pedals. As the first chord sounded a squeak came. The musical cleaner pressed on with feet and fingers. Then came a chorus of squeaks, and, looking down, he saw the protests came from a mother mouse and papa mouse and a large family of children. By the time the cats had been brought to the spot the cleaner counted seventeen rodents.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy", at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful— all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.—Adv.

ONE dollar a day invested in life insurance is a very powerful investment.

It is so powerful that the man who tries it assures a large estate for his family.

If he's 29 when he begins he can buy a policy for $20,000.

FATHER FOLLOWS SON AS A SUICIDE

HAD BEEN DESPONDENT

His Peculiar Actions of the Past Few Weeks Led Many to Believe Him to Be Mentally Unbalanced—Body Removed to Cole's Morgue.

As a climax to a long period of brooding, Edward E. Phillips, a public stenographer, shot himself through the mouth with a .38 calibre revolver sometime after midnight last night. Going to the suicide's office at 2 o'clock this afternoon to leave a gas bill, John Garretson, an employe of the Public Service Gas Corporation, found the man dead in his chair.

Chief of Police Kiely was summoned and he in turn notified City Physician Norman W. Currie. The latter examined the dead man's body and declared that life had been extinct for a period of several hours at least. He had evidently meditated on his rash act for some time, taking special pains to end his life. He had drawn the shade on the Park avenue side of his office, which is located in the Marsh building, and assuming a sitting position at his desk, shot himself through the mouth. Death was probably instantaneous and when found his head leaned forward. The body was removed to Cole's morgue.

Tenants in the Marsh building said this afternoon that they had been attracted to the man's actions because of his pronounced despondency during the past two weeks and the suicide did not come as an entire surprise to those who knew him best. He had for many years done work for lawyers both in Plainfield and nearby cities and was at one time secretary for the late Craig Marsh and William Newcorn.

This is the second tragedy recorded in the Phillips' family in the last few months. On Labor Day, Mr. Phillips' twenty-year-old son, Homer, ended his life by hanging himself in a dilapidated barn near Somerville. The senior Phillips grieved considerably over his son's death and is also known to have had financial reverses of late.

NEGROES CELEBRATE THE ANNIVERSARY OF FREEDOM

An appropriate program, arranged by the Ministerial Union, of Plainfield, was rendered in Calvary Baptist church, Friday evening, the occasion being the fifty-second aniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation.

Rev. M. W. Vaughn, pastor of the church, was master of ceremonies, and the proclamation was read by Mrs. Bertha Brown. Rev. J. W. P. Collier, pastor of Mt. Zion M. E. church, also delivered an address. Miss Mary Smith read an essay.

BORO SCHOOLS RE-OPEN.

The North Plainfield public schools opened for the Spring term this morning and the regular schedule is being followed. All of the teachers reported with one exception, Miss Ruth Stauffer, of Westfield, who is assistant kindergarten teacher in the Somerset School, is detained at her home with sickness, but expects to return in a short time.

WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICES.

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, will have charge of the opening service of the week of prayer at the Park Avenue Baptist church this evening. The services at this church will continue throughout the week, with the exception of Saturday evening.

ASSOCIATIONS MAY COMBINE.

The Plainfield Business Men's Association will hold a regular meeting this evening at 8:15 o'clock in Coward Hall. At this meeting the members of the Business Men's Credit Association will be present to discuss the advisability of combining the two associations.

RESUME REHEARSALS.

The Plainfield Symphony Orchestra will resume rehearsals tonight in the Franklin School Auditorium at 8 o'clock. The Plainfield Choral Society will meet in the Franklin School Auditorium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

FINAL DECREE GRANTED.

Chancellor Walker has granted a final decree of divorce to James H. Knight from his wife, Anna B. Knight, on statutory grounds. The petitioner was represented by City Judge W. G. DeMeza.

HAD A BROTHER ON THE "FORMIDABLE"

Relative of Fred Cross May Have Perished With Ill-Fated 600 of Crew.

The sinking of the British predreadnaught Formidable, as chronicled in the war news, has more than a passing interest for many Plainfielders. It is probable that the death list of her crew, 200 of whom went down in the English Channel with her, contains the name of second Assistant Engineer Harry Cross, a brother of Fred Cross, of Grant avenue, this city. He entered the British naval service seventeen years ago and was doing duty on the Formidable when she was attached to the North Sea blockading fleet. Only 141 survivors were picked up, but it is barely likely Engineer Cross is among these from the fact that his duties kept him below decks.

Fred Cross has been a resident of Plainfield for several years and was at one time president of the Plainfield Association Football Club. He received word recently that his brother was to be retired in three years with a substantial pension and all were hoping against hope that he would emerge from the war in safety. There were many Plainfielders who knew of this and all feel as if they had experienced a personal loss in the destruction of the big vessel.

URGES ATTENDANCE OF MEN AT CHURCH

Rev. F. L. Greene Preaches to the Members of the Jr. O. U. A. M.

A large representation of members from Franklin, Somerset, Benevolent and Plainfield Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., attended service at Hope chapel, last night, at which time Rev. Frederic L. Greene, the pastor, preached an appropriate sermon. The National colors made an attractive decoration about the pulpit. During the evening the chorus choir sang several anthems.

"Men and the Church" was the subject of Mr. Greene's discourse. He spoke in part as follows:

"When we are confronted with the fact that 3,000,000 less man than women attend church, it is time that the reasons behind this condition be looked into from the viewpoint of the church as well as the men. The church is at fault to some degree, in that its ministrations to men might be readily increased. On the other hand, men on the outside of the church have a tendency to be overcritical of the church, and overestimate its faults.

"Others are agreeable to sending their children to church services, but hesitate to accompany the younger folks to the house of worship. If a greater portion of men would attend divine service, the men, the church, the home and the community would be the better for the effort. The church and the preacher needs the men fully as much as the man needs the church."

GAVE DANCE FOR SCHOOL FRIENDS IN HER HOME

A very pleasant evening of dancing was enjoyed by a number of pupils of the Plainfield High School, Saturday night, at the home of Miss Dorothy Simons. The following young people were present: The Misses Dorothy Steile, Elizabeth Martin, Constance Vesey, Dorothy Simons, Marion Lockwood, Marion Blanchard, Ruth Voorhees, Hazel Codington, Celia Cottrell, Ernestine Wilson, Elsie Stevens, Celia Chamberlain, Florence Nielsen, Elizabeth Evans, and Carl Evans, Harold Davis, William Wheelan, William Peacock, Donald Updike, James Herrmann, John Cottrell, Romyne Voorhees, Fred Chamberlain, Daniel McNamee, Harold Tomlinson and Edward Ryder.

TO MAKE DRAWINGS.

Lawrence French, of Rutgers College, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Frank French, of Washington avenue, has been chosen by Professor M. T. Cook, professor of plant pathology, of Rutgers College, to make the drawings for a new book he is about to issue on botany, for High School use. The book is to be illustrated by a large number of pictures and French will make them all.

TO OMIT MEETING.

The East End Civic Association will omit its January meeting, because of the pressure of engagements and other business at this time.

WORK OF THE M'CALL AUXILIARY REVIEWED

Through Its Various Activities Organization Has Had Wide Influence.

Forty-two years ago the McAll Mission was founded in Paris. Twenty-nine years ago the Plainfield McAll Auxiliary was organized. During all these years it has been contributors to the evangelistic life of France—a work which has found expression through settlements, clubs, classes, temperance organizations, itinerant preaching, Gospel boats, portable halls, an automobile mission, play-and-study classes for children, brotherhoods for men, and every variety of Christian service imaginable. It was also the McAll Mission that introduced into France the Boy Scout and later the Girl Scout movement.

Through these various instrumentalities the McAll Mission has extended its influence to hundreds of thousands of men, women and children throughout France and her colonies—and vital has been that influence.

Such has been its record during the years of peace which have followed the Franco-Prussian war and the Commune. Today France is plunged in the bloodiest war of history. The stations in northern France and Belgium are directly in the path of its ravages—and in all parts of France great is the suffering of those left destitute by the war.

Naturally, those who have come under the influence of our mission turn to it for help and consolation in their distress, and as our director, Pastor Guex, has said, while seeking to give them the consolation of the love of God, he cannot leave them to starve for lack of bread. Consequently great has been the draft upon the resources of the mission.

All moneys donated to the mission are distributed through the well organized channels of the McAll Mission, whose trained workers know the people and their needs.

Mrs. Charles H. Parkhurst, president of the American McAll Association, has formed a national committee for collecting a relief fund.

The friends of suffering France, in Plainfield, whether connected with our McAll Auxiliary or not, are urged to lend a generous hand to this greatly needed charity. Contributions may be sent to the local treasurer, Mrs. John Gray Foster, 91 Mercer avenue.

RETIREMENT OF ALBERT A. TILNEY IS ANNOUNCED

Announcement is made of the retirement of Albert A. Tilney, of this city, as a member of the New York banking firm of Harvey Fisk & Sons, the change becoming effective January 1. Mr. Tiley had been connected with the firm for the past fifteen years, becoming associated with it not long after leaving college. For several years he was the head of the Boston branch of the concern and later came to New York, where ever since he was associated with Pliny Fisk in the management of the firm's large business interests.

Mr. Tilney has planned to take a rest from a very active business career and may devote some time to travel. He is a member of the Plainfield Board of Education, being appointed last year by former Mayor Percy H. Stewart. He has rendered valuable service to the Board, especially in matters of finance.

YOUNG PEOPLE ENJOY A DANCE AT PARK CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Sandford, of Stelle avenue, gave a dance at the Park Club, Saturday evening, for their daughter, Miss Saidee Roome Sandford, which was one of the most pleasant social functions of the holiday season. There were about one hundred guests, including the young school set, many of whom were home from boarding-schools and seminaries for the Yuletide vacation. Miss Sanford is a student at the Hartridge School and many of the young women from that institution were among the guests.

The music for dancing, which began about 8:30 o'clock, was furnished by VanEps Brothers, there being a four-piece orchestra. The festivities were continued until midnight. During an intermission refreshments were served under the direction of Henry Johnson, the club steward. Mr. and Mrs. Sandford with their daughter received the guests.

MEET TOMORROW.

The Plainfield Allied Trades' Committee will meet tomorrow evening at the store of Milton H. Hinchcliffe, North avenue, to bring to a close all business in connection with its recent ball.

MAY NOT NAME WILLIAM S. TYLER

Rumor Says That Mayor Calkins Will Not Re-Appoint Him.

OTHER CHANGES LIKELY

Hugh Reilly May Be Dropped as a Member of the Board of Health—Appointments Expected at Tonight's Council Meeting.

The Common Council will hold its first regular meeting of the year, tonight, when, according to rumor, there is likely to be some surprises in the way of appointments by Mayor Leighton Calkins. Among the important appointments to be made is that of a member of the Board of Education to succeed William S. Tyler, who has served in that capacity for several years, in fact since he retired from the Common Council.

While there has been no official announcement of the fact, it is reported that there is likely to be a change, but who will be chosen to succeed Mr. Tyler, in case he is not re-named, is not known. The latter has been one of the most active members of the Board and many of the improvements in the school buildings have been made following his suggestions.

Mayor Calkins' campaign for election was conducted on a platform of school reform and it is known that he has in mind many suggestions looking toward a more economical plan for the maintenance of the public schools. In his message he strongly advocated wider publicity of school as well as city finances with the idea of giving the people every opportunity to know just how their money is being spent. He has also suggested that the public be invited to attend the Board of Education meetings and that the Board be requested to meet with the councilmanic finance committee from time to time.

Another appointment to be made is that of a member of the Board of Health to succeed Hugh Reilly. Whether the latter will be named for another term is not known, but the action of the Mayor in withholding the third name in making his appointments at the organization meeting, leads many to believe that Mr. Reilly will not be re-appointed. The latter is a practical plumber and was made a member of the Board for the purpose of having such a person in that body who is thoroughly familiar with the plumbing business, which now comes under the supervision of the Board.

MRS. THOMAS LYONS DIES AFTER LINGERING ILLNESS

Mrs. Bridget Lyons, aged 73 years, wife of Thomas Lyons, of 674 West Third street, died yesterday, after a lingering illness. Mrs. Lyons had been a resident of the West End for a number of years, and was a communicant of St. Mary's church. Beside her husband, Mrs. Lyons is survived by three sons, Henry Lyons, of Rahway; Thomas and John Lyons, of this city.

The funeral services will be held at her late residence tomorrow morning at 8:15, and from St. Mary's church at 9 o'clock. Interment will be made at St. Mary's cemetery.

APPROACHING WEDDING.

Miss Ethel Vail, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Vail, of Elmwood place, and Patrolman George Muir, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Muir, will be married on Wednesday, January 27.

PLAN TO FORM AN S. A. R. CHAPTER

Plainfield Members Take Steps to Organize in This City.

Steps are about to be taken to form a local chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution in this city. There are a number of members residing in Plainfield, who are identified with other chapters, and the matter was discussed at the annual meeting of the State society held in the rooms of the New Jersey Historical Association, at Newark, on Saturday. Among the Plainfielder's attending were Harvey R. Linbarger and William T. Sharp. The State society has promised to give the Plainfield members its support and encouragment in the organization of a chapter.

At the meeting in Newark, Saturday, there were addresses by Prof. and Mrs. Libbey, of Trenton, as well as the retiring president, John L. Merrill, of Orange, and the newly-elected president, Washington Irving Lincoln Adams, of Montclair. There was a large attendance of members at the meeting and the program was one of great interest to all.

CLAIMS CHICKEN DEALER THREATENED TO KILL HIM

Claiming that the individual who sold him a flock of chickens had stolen the fowls back, Isaac Duetch, of Watchung, appeared as complainant before Justice George T. Hughes, in the Town Hall at Watchung, Saturday night, against George Leffert. He alleged that Leffert had assaulted him and threatened his life with an axe.

J. Henry Crane, of this city, represented the complainant, and Samuel S. Swackhamer was counsel for Mr. Leffert. The defendant was released in $200 bonds to appear before the grand jury on the charge.

CHOSEN SUPERINTENDENT OF RAILWAY GAS COMPANY

Former Sheriff William H. Wright has been chosen as superintendent of the Rahway Gas Light Company. He has taken charge of the plant. The appointment of a superintendent of the Gas Light Company has been pending since the death of Harry Simmons, who managed the business for a long period. Francis Engel, of Elizabeth, has been temporarily in charge since the death of Mr. Simmons.

The Gas Company has been rather slow in selecting a man to fill Mr. Simmons' position and after careful consideration, Mr. Wright was offered the appointment. He had the matter under advisement for several weeks and only decided definitely a few days ago.

OBSERVE THE ANNIVERSARY OF FOUNDING HOPE CHAPEL

The twenty-seventh anniversary of the founding of Hope chapel was informally observed yesterday afternoon at the session of the Sunday-school. G. Herbert Condict, superintendent of the school, presiding.

William D. Murray and H. R. Munger, one time superintendent, extended greeting to the school. Special music by Dr. and Mrs. Waldo featured the gathering.

CHARGED WITH LARCENY.

Vincent Meaney, who was employed as time-keeper at the Walter Scott Printing Machine Works, was arrested Saturday night on a charge of larceny preferred by Walter Scott, Jr. He was arraigned before City Judge W. G. DeMeza and held in $200 bail for a hearing tomorrow morning. Councilman Francis J. Blatz has been retained as counsel for Mr. Meaney. It is alleged that the accused tampered with the time sheet records.

BUYS RESIDENCE PROPERTY.

Andrew McCardell, of West Seventh street, has purchased from the Misses Harriet and Sarah Manning, their handsome residence property at 524 West Front street. The consideration is said to have been about $12,500. The house is one of the most pretentious in that part of the city and is complete in every detail. Mr. McCardell will take possession within the next few days.

"CALLING OUT THE RESERVES."

"Calling Out the Reserves," is the title of an attractive New Year's card of greeting which Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, has sent to his parishioners. The card also contains an interesting story prepared by Mr. Hare, and a poem entitled "Consecration," by Frances R. Havergal.

INDOOR FETE PLANS PROMISE BIG EVENT

Plans are underway for the second annual indoor carnival of the Knights of Columbus to be held in Columbus Club on West Front street from February 6 to 13 inclusive. It is proposed to make this year's event a particularly elaborate one and it will no doubt eclipse the successful affair of last year. When introduced into the organization a year ago the indoor carnival proposition met with universal response and the success of the inaugural undertaking was all that was expected.

Added features will make the coming festival the largest of its nature ever held in Plainfield. Dancing, as usual, will be one of the leading attractions and negotiations are underway to bring an excellent orchestra to the rendezvous for the week of entertaining. Committees have been appointed and are now busily engaged working on the various events.

Special programs of varied numbers will be rendered each evening and fancy and useful articles will be for sale. The spacious dancing floor in the auditorium of the club affords an excellent place for this amusement and on all four sides booths will be erected. The members will be assisted in entertaining by the Women's Auxiliary.

MRS. E. D. MOFFETT DIES AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

Mrs. Elmore D. Moffett, aged about 70 years, a life-long resident of this city, died at her home, 445 Orchard place, Saturday night, following a long illness from complications. She had been a great sufferer. Mrs. Moffett was born in this vicinity and had always lived here. Her late husband was a member of the Common Council for several years, and later he was assistant county clerk. After his retirement from political life he engaged in the cigar business for a time at West Second street and Central avenue.

Mrs. Moffett was an active member of the First Baptist church and Lydia Chapter, Order Eastern Star Lodge. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. W. H. Tams, of Trenton, and several grandchildren. The funeral service will be held at the First Baptist church, Wednesday morning at 11:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, the pastor, will officiate. The burial will be in River View cemetery, Trenton.

REV. DR. W. T. STUCHELL TO GIVE THREE LECTURES

Rev. Dr. W. T. Stuchell, candidate for the Republican nomination for Congressional honors during the preprimary fight last September, will deliver a series of three lectures at Columbus Auditorium during the course of the present month, under the general subject; "The Land of Opportunity and the World's New Highway."

The dates and topics for the lectures have been announced as follows: January 15, "Panama and the Canal;" January 22, "Rio de Janeiro and Brazil;" January 29, "Buenos Aires and the Argentine Republic."

MANY MEMBERS RECEIVED AT COMMUNION SERVICES

Communion services were held in many of the local churches yesterday, with reception of new menfbers. It was a red letter day at the First M. E. church, where Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, the pastor, received thirty-three new members, five by letter and twenty-eight on confession. In the evening, Dr. Anderson preached his annual New Year's sermon, his subject being "Retrospection and Prospection."

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, at the First Baptist church, received five new members, three on confession and two by letter, while at the First Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring received six new members, three by letter and three on confession. The communion service at Grace M. E. church was postponed to a later date.

WILL GIVE RECITATIONS.

Hermann Riotte, the renowned German-American elocutionist, will appear at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock tomorrow evening, giving recitations in German, including poems from Heine, Longfellow and other authors, together with scenes from "Nathan the Wise," by Lessing. He will also speak in English. Tickets may be secured at the door.

GERMANS ADMIT SOME REVERSES

Official Headquarters Statement Says Allies Have Driven Troops Back.

HOT FIGHT ON BZURA

German Attempt to Gain Ground in Russia Reported by Petrograd to Have Been a Failure—Turks Claim Victories.

Berlin, Jan. 4 (by wireless via Sayville)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western war theatre it is generally quiet except for artillery combats more or less heavy. Only about Thennaid Auberstresse has the enemy shown great activity. After an overwhelming bombardment of the Heights west of Sennheim, the enemy occupied our demolished trenches. The enemy also took the heights and villages aroung Steinbach which we had stubbornly defended. During the night three of the heights were retaken at the point of the bayonet. Fighting for the village of Steinbach continues.

"In the eastern theatre of war the situation is unchanged. Our attacks in Poland, east of the Rawka River, continues."

Paris, Jan. 4—The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"From the sea to the Oise the day (Sunday) was almost wholly calm. The weather was rainy. There was a duel of artillery at some points on the front. Our heavy artillery silenced the German batteries on the Aisne and in the Champagne the cannonade was particularly violent. Our batteries established their superiority and shelled the reserve of the enemy.

"We captured several points of support held by the Germans in the region of Perthes and of Mesin Les Hurus. Between the Argonne and the Meuse we have done the same. An atempt made yesterday by our troops to capture Boureuilles was not successful.

"In upper Alsace we captured an important height to the west of Carnay. A counter attack by the enemy was repulsed. At Steinbach we have taken possession of the church quarter and of the cemetery."

Petrograd, Jan. 4—An official communication today by the Russian general staff regarding the fighting in Poland and Galicia says:

A strong artillery combat has been fought all along the front on the left bank of the Vistula. The attempt of the Germans to gain ground in certain places near the Bzura River was without success.

On the night of January 2 we discovered the passage of Germans across the Bzura near Kosloff and Biksoupt. Having watched the concentration of the enemy's forces, one of our glorious regiments surrounded the Germans. They attacked them with the bayonet, without firing a shot, and in the hand to hand struggle which followed killed several hundred men. The survivors saved their lives by surrendering.

About 3 p. m. on January 2 a brigade of German infantry attacked our position near Borjimow, northeast of Bolimow, but the German assault was repulsed with enormous losses by the fire from several batteries and a counter attack made with the bayonet.

Desperate fighting occurred during the night of January 2, continuing until daybreak, northeast of Rawa, where we succeeded in dislodging the enemy from some of the trenches they had previously taken.

South of the Pilica River fighting took place at Metairie and Gaschek, west of Inowlodz, and also southeast of Malagoszoz, near Volmine, where we repulsed all attacks of the enemy.

Near the Uzsok pass and Rostoki (south of Lisko) we have made progress. We drove back the enemy, who fled in great disorder. We captured 2,000 prisoners and some mitrailleuses. Several companies of the Austrians surrendered in a body. In their retreat to Uzsok the Austrians abandoned arms and ammunition.

Our offensive in Bukowina continues.

An official communication from the Russian general staff in the Caucasus gives details of the fighting in the region of Sari Kamysh, in Transcaucasia, as follows:

In the region of Sari Kamysh, on January 1, the great battle continued, obviously to our advantage. The enemy, however, continued to offer an obstinate resistance.

We captured the Fiftieth Regiment of infantry almost complete, including the commander and fifty officers.

DUNELLEN

MISS BUNNELL ENTERTAINS.

Miss Helen Bunnell delightfully entertained a few of her friends at her home on Mountainview terrace on New Year's Eve. Games, musical selections and dancing were features of the evening. A dainty repast was served at a late hour. Among those present were Miss Irma Baldwin, Miss Nora Bird and the Misses Marguerite and Olive Eckert.

Miss Elizabeth Sullivan, of Bronx Park, New York, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Edward Gray, of First street.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hauser, of Brooklyn, who have been visiting Mr. Hauser's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Basil Hauser, of Walnut street, since Thursday afternoon, returned home last evening.

On New Year's Day, Councilman and Mrs. H. D. Williams entertained Mr. and Mrs. David Carr and children, of Newark; Mrs. Samuels and daughter, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Cook, of Newark; Henry Liefke, of Plainfield, and David C. Carr, of Newark.

Charles Wyckoff and son, Charles, Jr., of Front street, when hunting last Tuesday in the Passaic valley, caught two raccoons, one of which weighed 27 pounds and the other 16 pounds.

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the Presbyterian church, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Silas Neller, of Front street.

Mrs. George Martin, of Columbia street, has been visiting a sister at Brooklyn.

ENJOYED WATERMELON.

At their New Year's dinner, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Dildine, of Prospect avenue, and guests enjoyed a watermelon that had been raised by Mr. Dildine in the summer. The watermelon had been kept by Mr Dildine in the cellar of his home in the same manner as one would keep a pumpkin or a squash. Its flavor and texture had not been impaired in the least by the length of time which it had been kept.

Borough Engineer and Mrs. L. T. Churchill entertained Mrs. Churchill's brother, Arthur Gangloff, of New York, over the week-end.

WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICES.

Week of prayer will be observed in the Presbyterian church this week. Services will be held on every evening of the week, with the exception of Saturday evening. The pastor, the Rev. E. R. Brown, will be in charge.

John P. Faber, of Washington avenue, who has been ill for the past week with stomach trouble, was able to return to his business in New York this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Merwin H. Fagely, of New York, spent the week-end in the borough as the guests of former Mayor and Mrs. Harry Swackhamer.

Miss Annie Alberti, who is employed in the George Zink bakery, has returned from Hudson, N. Y., where she has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Alberti, over the holidays.

SATURDAY NIGHT DANCES.

The Saturday evening dances, as conducted in the local theatre on Saturday evenings under the management of Charles Cregar and William Ricketts, of Plainfield, are proving to be very popular. There were over forty on the floor Saturday evening.

Edward Dix, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dix, of Prospect avenue, has returned from Brooklyn, where he spent the past week visiting his aunts, the Misses M. and K. Stieverman.

The condition of Mrs. John H. Schneidler, of Washington avenue, has shown marked improvement during the past several days.

Ruliff J. Fisher, who has been spending the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Fisher, of Washington avenue, has returned to his business in the West. He leaves his mother very much improved.

Mrs. John Smedley, of Prospect avenue, has been obliged to take to her bed again.

PLANNING FOR FAIR.

At the monthly meeting of the Defender Fire Company, No. 1, held in the Borough Hall on Thursday evening, the committee on arrangements of the fair of the company to be held sometime during the month of February, reported progress. The personnel of this committee is: J. Newton Apgar, Melvin Fritts, George I. Apgar, Jr., and Charles Starker. Other business was routine.

A party composed of of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Marx, Miss Ernestine Richter and Miss Rosa Abenheim attended the grand opera performance of "Parsifal," at the Metropolitan Opera House on New Year's evening.

FIRE ALARM SIGNALS.

The Board of Education has caused cards reading in the following manner to be distributed about town: "Attention—Members fire department and citizens. At its last meeting the Mayor and Council decided to allow us to use the fire alarm bell to 'ring off' the schools on stormy days. Beginning with January 4th it will be used when necessary. The signals will be given at 8 a. m. and 1 p. m., and will be three taps of the bell followed by an interval of ten seconds and then repeated twice as follows: (... ... ...). This will mean 'no school.' When given at 8 a. m. it will mean no morning session, but if not repeated at 1 p. m. there will be school in the afternoon."

ADMITTED TO BAIL.

Clarence Waldron, of North avenue, who was arrested after the advent of the New Year on a charge of assaulting Miss Carrie Francis, of North avenue, and taken to the county jail Saturday morning, has been released under a $2,000 bond to await the action of the grand jury. John Sebring, of Green Brook, an uncle to Waldron, went his bail.

METHODIST CHURCH NEWS.

At the communion service in the church, yesterday morning, four new members were received in the church.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society will meet at the home of Mrs. George T. Schenck on Front street at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

They Were In Use Long Before Hand Firearms Appeared.

CRUDE GUNS OF EARLY DAYS

Curious Weapons From Which Have Been Evolved the Modern Deadly Engines of War—Uncle Sam's Famous Collection in the National Museum.

Specimens of military and other forms of firearms from England, France, Russia, Japan, Germany and many other countries, are to be seen in the small arms exhibition of the United States national museum. The exhibit includes some 1,400 individual pieces and comprises probably the best general collection in the United States, considering that there are represented examples of military rifles, pistols and revolvers, sporting shotguns and rifles, target rifles and pistols, and numerous odd and unusual pieces relating to the development of firearms.

Although the discovery of gunpowder is attributed by some to China, there is no positive evidence that the Chinese ever made use of it. At an early period they produced certain kinds of fireworks, accounts of which came through Persia. Egypt and the Moorish countries in southern Europe, but gunpowder for use in firearms, it is believed originated in Italy, Spain or Germany. While cannon of a sort were built in the early part of the fourteenth century, hand firearms were slow to be adopted on account of their unreliability, and it was not until about 1381 that they are known to have appeared in Germany, while Europe in general did not take them up until the middle of the fifteenth century, when they became known as hand cannon.

The earliest form of hand gun was a crude affair, fired by the application of a burning match to the touchhole. The first improvement was the mounting of the match on a springless lock or cock, which later, upon the addition of a spring, became known as the matchlock. Examples of this early weapon from India, China, Afghanistan, Japan, Formosa, Arabia, Morocco and Mexico are in the museum collection.

The next development was the wheellock gun, about 1515 or 1517, fired by a spark struck on pyrites by a roughened wheel revolved by a spring. Specimens of this type of gun and pistol from Greece, Germany and England are also included in the museum exhibit.

A form of flintlock, called the snaphaunce, followed in 1540. This substituted in place of the wheel a lock, which held in its jaws a piece of pyrites and when released hit the cover of the pan, striking a spark, which ignited the charge of powder. A pair of pistols of this type from Constantinople illustrate the principle well. Further improvements in the snaphaunce resulted in the flintlock gun, in which a piece of flint replaced the pyrites. Examples of this style are more common, and some sixty are included in the museum collection, representing nearly every country and well illustrating the various changes and improvements made.

One of the most interesting and valuable arms in the collections is the John Cookson flintlock breech loading magazine gun, made in 1586, which has a magazine in the stock capable of holding ten rounds of loose powder and bullets.

One movement of the lever feeds the ammunition into the barrel, cocks the hammer and primes the pan. In spite of the English name of the maker, this odd piece is believed to be of Spanish origin on account of its general type and the style of its decoration. It was probably brought to Maryland by the early English colonists. At least it was found in Baltimore and confiscated in 1863 and held by the government until 1867, when it was thrown away. In 1888 it was purchased for a small sum and put in its present perfect condition by a gunsmith of Baltimore, from whom it was secured by an American collector and presented to the museum.

From a military viewpoint, the design of this gun evidences great advances of its time, for, with the magazine charging appurtenance, ten shots could be fired in a little more time than is required for a modern magazine gun. Altogether, the antiquity, design, workmanship and beauty of this gun make it a most valuable and remarkable relic.

The collection also contains several pflock, and the percussion cap guns, which followed the flint lock, and the Prussia needle gun, and the French Chassepot which appeared somewhat later.

The development of the gun and ammunition in the United States is well illustrated by a series of historical cases showing the types used in the succeeding wars from the French and Indian to the war with Spain, thus connecting closely history and invention.

While many foreign guns are represented they are not all of the latest patent or of the type now in use. In the case of our military rifle, however, the latest developments are shown, and it is interesting to note that the Springfield rifle, generally known as the 1903 model, though it has been improved upon since, is to be found in three separate series—the target, game and military—showing that it is suitable, with different sorts of ammunition, to many uses.

Some of the museum specimens are the donations of individuals, others are from American manufacturers, the war and navy departments, and the patent office.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

"Just because you see a man coming out of a saloon it is no sign that he has been drinking."—Plainfield Press. Very true, and further, if you see a man coming out of a house at midnight with a bag of loot it's no sign he's a burglar. He may be the owner. If you see a man coming out of jail it's no sign he's a crook. He may be the grocer. If you see a man coming out of church it's no sign he's a worshipper. He may be the sexton. If you see a man coming from the Legislature it's no sign he has been making good laws. He may be a corporation lobbyist. If you see a man coming from Congress it's no sign he's great. He may be an office hunter. And yet, people will have their suspicions.—Newark Evening News.

MAYOR CALKINS' MESSAGE.

Probably never before in the history of Plainfield has such a thorough diagnosis of the ills of the city been made as was the case in the annual message of Mayor Calkins to the City Council. It showed careful study of the troublesome problems which have confronted the local government for some years, and incidentally demonstrated beyond contradiction that it is wise to select a man who has seen service in the City Council for the head of the government. While there never was any question in our mind that he was the right man for the place, it is even now conceded by those who were opposed to Mr. Calkins that if his many excellent recommendations are carried out this will be a much better municipality when his term ends than it is today.

Plainfield has always been fortunate in the men who have been chosen for public office, and there has never been a charge of deliberate mismanagement or graft involving anyone who has held office. But conditions have arisen which need correction, and Mr. Calkins points the way. His suggestion that an administrative survey be made, with an idea of bringing about modern methods and efficiency and economy will receive an emphatic "amen" from all sides, and everyone familiar with local government knows that home rule is needed, doing away with the interference in every minor local matter by the Legislature. Former Councilman Frank L. Holt pointed out this condition two years or more ago in a contributed editorial which appeared in the Daily Press. At the present time the only municipalities in the State which have such a privilege are those under the commission form of government.

On the school question Mr. Calkins undoubtedly voices the opinion of a large majority of the taxpayers. Whether or not the complaint has been justified, the people of Plainfield have felt that they have in the past known too little about the plans of the Board of Education until it was too late to make a protest. That the tentative budgets should be given to the newspapers and civic associations, so that citizens may analyze them, and also make protest against expenditures, is in keeping with modern thought. As Mr. Calkins says the budget proceedings "under our present methods are a good deal of a farce." Not only regarding the budget, but in all other matters regarding school affairs should publicity be given. "The public should not only be permitted but should be encouraged to attend the business sessions of the Board of Education which should be advertised and held where the public can be accommodated," says the Mayor. Had this been the rule most of the present criticism of the Board, whether warranted or not, would be unheard.

Recommendations regarding the need of a municipal building to house all city offices; the abolition of the fee system; the city planning commission, and planning to eventually have a city manager are all timely and should receive the earnest consideration of the Council with an idea of bringing them about. If half of the things suggested are accomplished or put under way during Mr. Calkins' term, it may safely be predicted that it will be the most successful administration that the city has known.

Of the many excellent appointments made by Mayor Calkins none will give more general satisfaction than the renaming of Elliott T. Barrows and Dr. Harold D. Corbusier to the Board of Health. Both men have given splendid service, and their association with the hold-over members will assure the continuation of business methods in all health matters. The Mayor's selection of Allen E. Beals for membership on the Playground Commission was also a most happy one. Mr. Beals has already proven, in his work as head of the local boy scouts, that he takes more than a passing interest in the young people, and it is safe to predict that he will make good in the position to which he has been chosen. Dr. Norman W. Currie's selection to succeed himself as city physician is also pleasing to those who know of the excellent work he has done during the preceding term in the office.

It is to be hoped that the license question will not be permitted to clog the affairs of the City Council this year, as has been the case for three years past. The councilmen know what is best for the city and the matter has been so thoroughly thrashed out recently that arguments pro and con are tiresome. No one disputes that there is a big sentiment in this city for another wholesale place. Whether it is a majority sentiment or not cannot, of course, be said, but probably the majority of the people do not care one way or the other and are willing to leave the matter in the hands of the capable members of the City Council. Let the matter be settled at the first possible meeting, so that some of the excellent suggestions made in the Mayor's message can be acted upon.

The selection of James T. MacMurray for another term of three years as city clerk but fulfills a prediction made in these columns a month or more ago. Mr. MacMurray is too valuable an official to lose, unless it is assured that the city will get better service, and no such assurance was forthcoming when an effort was made to bring about a change. Mr. Clay's re-election as president of the Council was anticipated and no better man could be chosen.

GONG'S BLOWING IS SADLY MISSED

Although the city's fire gong has been silenced only four days, it has already been sadly mised by thousands of people in Plainfield and vicinity who depended upon it for time twice a day. More than one man who set his watch or clock by it has waited in vain for the 12 noon and 5 o'clock blow, waking up to the fact that there was "nothing doing." They found themselves behind schedule. This will undoubtedly continue to occur until the people adopt some other reliable time announcer.

The passing of the gong has led to many reminiscent stories concerning installation and use and men prominent in the fire department in other days enjoy relating incidents about it in which they figured. The history of the gong has been told many times in the past week, but naturally enough, the details vary in the telling.

Fire Chief T. O. Doane, in an interview with a Daily Press reporter, said:

"It was stated by Chief Doane that the present Gamewell system was installed in the early part of 1891, but it was several months before the whistle could be made to work properly. There was more or less adverse comment from the citizens until early on Saturday night, March 20, of that year, when Whitney Frazee, the well known New York special messenger, turned in the first alarm for a fire. Flames had broken out in a barn belonging to Hugo Weigmann, located in the rear of his upholstering store on East Front street and almost directly back of the new headquarters building on Second street. Previous to the introduction of the gong, Plainfielders had no way of telling the exact location of a conflagration and when box 12 sounded out as Frazee pulled it at Front and Somerset streets, an immense throng hurried to the scene. Thousands of people clambered over fences into Front and Second street back yards, declaring almost to a man that the gong was a success inasmuch as it let them know in all parts of the city just where to go.

"The fire was a memorable one for several other reasons, one of which was the death of Mr. Weigmann as he made an attempt to rescue a horse from the burning structure. His fate was not learned by the great gathering of people until after the flames were extinguished, although Chief Doane and several of his men knew it shortly after the blaze broke out. The Chief ordered that nothing be said for fear of creating panic and causing a stampede in the congested yards and alleyways. The charred body of Mr. Weigmann was found by two of the firemen, who, at great risk to themselves, crawled into the ruins as soon as the flames had been sufficiently quelled.

"From the time of the Weigmann fire until the present day the Gamewell system has proven to be a great success. The alarm boxes and gong continued to work satisfactorily and Chief Doane was frequently commended by the same taxpayers who at first decried his optimism when he recommended its installation. An odd fact in connection with the passing of the gong is that box 12 was also the last one it sounded as well as the first. It was pulled last Sunday morning by Patrolman John Neylon for the blaze in the Dreier-Abrams building, which damaged the stores of A. L. Eames and Brother, W. W. Warnock and St. Stephen's confectionery.

"The gong was purchased through the agency of A. M. Griffen, who gratuitously provided one two inches larger than what was ordered. The Council called for a ten inch cylinder and Mr. Griffen made it a twelve inch. At the time it was put in place on the old electric light station on Madison avenue it was considered one of the finest in this part of the country and several reliable persons are authority for the statement that the sound has frequently been heard as far as Red Bank, 32 miles away. The big piece of mechanism was lowered from its lofty perch today and for the present will be stored at fire headquarters pending final disposition."

WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICES TO BE OBSERVED HERE

Week of prayer services will be observed in a number of the local churches this week. The First Baptist, First M. E., First Presbyterian and Trinity Reformed churches will hold union services, with the exception of tonight and Saturday night. The first of these services will be held tomorrow night at the First Baptist church and Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring will have charge. Wednesday night the service will be at the First Presbyterian church with Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson in charge, and on Thursday night, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong will be in charge of the service at Trinity Reformed church, while Rev. J. Y. Broek will have charge of the service on Friday night at the First M. E. church.

Similar services will be held at the Monroe Avenue church beginning tonight, with Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph in charge, and at Hope chapel, where F. H. Andrews will be in charge. There will be special services at the Crescent Avenue church, tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, in charge of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie.

A Golf Outrage.

The Earl of Wemyss was on a Fife golf course on one occasion accompanied by an old caddie. His lordship got his ball on one occasion so near the hole that to play it was, as it appeared to him, superfluous. So he simply tipped it in with the toe of his boot.

The caddie revolted instanter, threw down the clubs and looked horrified. When he found words to speak it was to say, "Hang it, me lord, gowf's gowf!"

BLOCH PULLMAN BABY COACHES

We direct special attention to our large showing of 1915 models of the famous Bloch Pullman Reed Baby Coaches, sold exclusively in this city by us. The name Bloch and Baby Carriage have been allied words for nearly fifty years. Bloch quality is known the country over, a Bloch name plate on a baby carriage is a sign of perfection, excellence, greatest value and superior quality. Bloch Baby Carriages are built along the newest approved scientific lines for the sole comfort, ease and safety of the baby.

Every Bloch Baby Carriage is built to safeguard the baby's back, the spine, the head and the limbs. No matter how the baby squirms or moves about, its tender bones will find a restful position in a Bloch Carriage. These are all important things for the mother to consider when buying a baby carriage. The most essential feature for the comfort and care of the baby is an easy riding running gear, with plenty of spring and resistency. The Cradle Gear and the new Reversible Gear used in the Bloch Pullman Coaches has many advantages. The Cradle Gear enables the carriage to have a lateral or cradle motion, and with the Reversible Gear you can swing the body of the carriage around so that the baby faces you. With all the splendid features mentioned above, Bloch Baby Carriages do not cost any more than the ordinary kinds.

We are selling a good substantial carriage for as low as $18.50.
Others at $21,50, $23.50, $25.00 and up to $39.00.

Wounds Seemed to Make Lord Napier Fight All the Better.

Oliver Wendell Holmes said that the lamp of a man's life has three wicks—brain, blood and breath—and that to turn down any one of them makes the other two go out. The wounds a man will survive and even disregard so long as his head, heart and lungs are unhurt have long been one of the wonders of war history.

Lord Napier had an utter indifference to wounds, and the wonderful celerity of his recovery makes an interesting story. Two of his wounds he had not cared to notice at all in his record of services furnished to Hart's army list.

He was severely wounded at Ferozeshah in December, 1845, but had recovered in time to take part in the battle of Sobraon, seven weeks later. Before Mooltan, in the middle of September, 1848, a cannon shot all but took off his leg, but he was marching and fighting again by the second week in November.

Jan. 12 following he was severely wounded in the trenches, but he was able to march several hundred miles across the country and fight at Gujrat one month later to a day.

He was shot in the leg at the first relief of Lucknow, but nevertheless rode out next day and brought in the rear guard, after which throughout the blockade he did continuous and arduous service. At the second relief he was severely wounded, but this did not hinder him from taking up the active duty of chief engineer at the Alumbaugh a few days later.—Washington Star.

Ten Thousand Matches a Minute.

Simple and insignificant as a match is, its manufacture is a complicated and elaborate process that can be carried on commercially only by means of a succession of ingenious machines and devices that must work at all times with the utmost precision and delicacy. Recent improvements in the process of making square matches make it possible to turn out matches from a single dipping machine at the rate of more than 600,000 an hour, and a green log is made into matches and packed for shipment in less than two hours.—Popular Mechanics.

Common Law.

The early settlers brought with them the laws and system of courts which they had been used to in England. These laws had grown partly out of men's sense of right, also out of men's dealings in trade and in holding property. As new questions rose in the courts the decisions became precedents to help decide other cases. The common law is the accumulation of such decisions through many generations.—New York American.

Long Tailed Roosters.

Undertaking to breed roosters with but one aim in view, that of lengthening the tail feathers, the natives of the island of Shikoku, Japan, have produced, after a hundred years of patient efforts, some marvelous results. It is of record that tail feathers eighteen feet in length are to be seen on the island.—Argonaut.

Broadway and Ninth, New York

From Stickley Brothers Company, Grand Rapids

("The Old House")

Originators of Mission Furniture in America and the largest makers of high-grade Mission Furniture in the world.

When a manufacturer—no matter what his field—decides upon a large operation and wants it concluded with dispatch, he comes to Wanamaker's.

When the Stickley Brothers Company decided to give up their New York warehouse they offered us all the stocks. And, to make it the they included hundreds of pieces of furniture which they are not going to duplicate and hence could not advertise in their catalogue to the trade.

"We can sell it all at 25 off to the stores that handle our product," they said; "but, frankly, it would mean some work, and might interfere with our regular business."

"All right," we said, "let us have it at 50 off; and we'll conclude the whole thing right now."

After some consideration they accepted our offer.

What It Means

(1) 46 carloads of mission furniture, all perfect.

(2) 520 patterns of quaint pieces for living room, dining-room, den, hall, library and bedroom.

(3) Thousands of pieces in all, the largest number and greatest variety of mission furniture ever offered in a sale.

(4) Half usual cost saved.

Time to Buy

It is the time of all times to buy mission furniture—

Chairs, rockers, divans, desks, dressers, costumers, buffets, tabourettes, magazine stands, footstools, waste paper holders, bookcases, mirrors, dinner gongs; in the Stickley nut brown shade and in the light fumed and gray fumed finishes added last year (1914).

If we could, we would have been glad to take.

A Million Pieces

We would have made room for it.

The public would have bought it all.

Because—

It will always be in vogue;

Durability is one of its strongest features;

To get full quality

on Stickley mission furniture (from "the Old House") and have the choice of $131,321 worth, is something New York has never been treated to before.

The sale begins tomorrow, Tuesday morning.

CLUBMEN SOB AT STORIES OF WAR

Treatment of Wounded Greatest Crime, Says Cobb.

TELLS OF BELGIUM'S MISERY

Returned War Correspondent Says Only Recording Angel Could Adequately Describe Horrors—Trains Loaded With Wounded Sidetracked While Road Is Kept Open For Fresh Troops.

Two hundred members of the Green Room club of New York, who tendered Irvin Cobb, war correspondent with the German army in Belgium, a "welcome home" dinner, started to laugh when he was introduced as one who could tell about the humorous side of the fighting in Europe. They continued to laugh for the first five minutes of his talk, but after that as one horror after another was described gasps and even sobs took the place of the laughter. Mr. Cobb finished his talk with the statement: "If I could really describe the war to you I would not be writing for a magazine. I would crowd the recording angel out of a job."

He was elected an honorary member of the Green Room club for life by a standing vote, and then a contribution was taken up to aid the starving Belgians.

In telling his hearers about Belgium Mr. Cobb said he was replying to many questions asked him before the dinner commenced.

Impossible to Describe.

"It's something you can't describe," he said. "Think of a people 7,000,000 strong, where everything was gay with laughter at the outbreak of the war. Then picture this people reduced in four months of fighting from 7,000,000 to 3,000,000, and of these 3,000,000 picture 1,000,000 as dependent upon the charity of the United States of America tonight for their supper. Then you have a faint idea of the war and Belgium.

"I came to a fort that had been blown to pieces by the shells. A German told me that as his men rushed into the fort they found it burning and thought no living being could be in it. Then came out of a tunnel a black man, stripped of his clothing. Behind him came 200 others, all hairless and black and naked. Some were blind, all were deaf, most of them were insane.

"He told me some were in a hospital. I said I would like to see them, and he replied, 'Oh, no, you wouldn't, for every one that lives is a gibbering idiot.'

"At a railroad station bandages torn from wounded men lay four feet deep on the floor. Women who obviously were gently bred dropped down into that mess and slept between the arrival of trains loaded with the wounded from the front.

Could Smell Odors From Train.

"We saw nine men in the last stages of lockjaw, who had been five days in a hospital train. The crime of the war is that a wounded man is no more of use. Trains loaded with German wounded lay on sidetracks for days while the road was kept open rushing fresh troops to the battle lines.

"First aid bandages often lay on a man's wounds for nine days while gangrene set in, and yet he was some distance from the base hospital for which the train had started. You could see the trains passing, gayly decorated with flags, and you could hear the young men in them singing. That was the raw material going into the mill. You could see 1,800 men coming back in a single hospital train and indeed could catch the odors from the train before it came into sight—that was the finished product on the way back from the mill.

"I tell you every penny sent to help in that stricken territory is bread cast upon the waters. To give is the greatest honor and privilege you who are spared can have."

HUNGER DEATH PAINLESS.

So Chicago Physician Who Starved Five Days Announces.

Hunger, even to the point of death by starvation, causes little pain other than psychic, according to Dr. A. J. Carlson of the University of Chicago, who related the conclusions he drew from five days of voluntary fasting to the members of the National Academy of Sciences.

This fasting period and other experiments, he said, have caused these conclusions:

"That hunger is caused by the contraction of the stomach muscles close to the aesophagus.

"That these contractions can be reduced by psychic means.

"That tonics and bitters ordinarily given to increase the appetite have no effect on the stomach, but tend to decrease rather than increase the appetite.

"That liquor and tobacco decrease the appetite.

Seeking Her Fiance.

At the request of a young Baltimore woman the state department has asked Ambassador Gerard by wireless to find out if her fiance, a German naval officer on the Yorck, destroyed by a mine, is alive.

"Hit the Trail" With SMOKE BELLEW

OUR new serial is one of the best stories Jack London ever wrote.

It is about the iron muscled giants of the gold fields—about real men who face danger and sudden death without flinching.

It is by an author who has braved the snows and ice of the Yukon and has lived the life like Smoke Bellew, his hero.

It is as rich as a "mother lode" of Alaska—rich in adventure, romance, privation, heroism and love that is greater than death itself.

REMEMBER! Smoke Bellew Is the First of Our BIG SIX SERIAL LIST

The remaining stories to be published in this paper during 1915 are "Peg o' My Heart," "A Fool and His Money," "Penrod," "The Master Mind" and "The Forester's Daughter."

SHOOT POORLY BUT WIN FROM "VETS"

P. H. S. Boys' Close Guarding Held Old-time Stars in Check.

The boys' basketball team of the Plainfield High School gained another victory over the Alumni, Saturday night, by the score of 27 to 16. The game was rough and close until the last ten minutes of play, when a spurt by the schoolboys gave them a lead with their older opponents could not overcome.

Both teams were poor at shooting missing many easy shots which should have been turned into points. "Joe" Gavett and "Shaky" Clarke were the high score men for the "Old Timers," with three field goals each to their credit. The High School boys played a great passing game, and had their opponents bewildered but when the ball would be brought within shooting distance they had no eye for the basket. Rosenson and Ryder each scored three field goals.

SHOTS AND MISSES

Near riots are getting to be all the rage in basketball nowadays. In Saengerbund Hall, Saturday night, the Woodbridge aggregation wanted to chew up the officials and the spectators were ready to guarantee safe delivery of the players to the morgue. A squad of bluecoats might be given some good exercise at our interscholastic court engagements these days and the time is not far distant when each performer will have to tote around a bodyguard while on parade.

If those Plainfield High School basketeers don't get their scoring machine oiled up before the opening of the Interscholastic League there's going to be one grand spill and the red and blue colors are going to be rubbed on the earth beneath the pile. Passing may make a game look flashy, but it's the points that always bring victory. The P. H. S. youngsters have as pretty a passing aggregation as has been seen here in several years, but when it comes to chalking up double-deckers they're in a class with these minor "prelim" teams we read about these days.

The N. Y. U. bunch that was humiliated by the Y. M. C. A. players here New Years, certainly garnered a lot of enjoyment out of heralding false reports of the result in Metropolitan sport chronicles. Although sent down to a 38 to 37 victory the Gothamites modestly claimed a 37 to 36 victory. Sounds like some of the European War results we've been getting hot off the bat.

Some championship stock from Rahway is due to appear on the P. H. S. court Wednesday afternoon. The Rahwayans possess a lineup that includes several gridiron notables and the usual strong argument with the red and blue contingent is expected.

In view of the fact that they were treated to a walloping by the Leal quintet here last week, the Staten Island Academy youngsters have seen fit to cancel the home engagements slated for next Saturday. This would indicate that the local private school delegation is gaining some "rep" as a winner this year.

If they don't start that Interscholastic League ball rolling pretty soon the fans will begin to realize that some one aggregation has been conceded the title without playing for it. Wonder who the lucky quintet will be?

A new era in feminine court competition will be ushered in tomorrow afternoon. The N. P. H. S. girls are scheduled to make their debut in Rahway. If the "rep" of the Rahway male performers for rough-house is to be taken as a criterion the borough fair sex better make the trip under double guard.

One drawback in basketball competition is the variation of the rules in various stopping-off places. A high school aggregation is treated to a hundred different changes during the playing season nowadays.

Further complications have developed between Woodbridge and N. P. H. S. Playing on the foreign court the boroughites were defeated by a count of 27 to 24. Playing on their own court they tasted a 40 to 20 walloping. Fine way to start the new year.

From a Perth Amboy sport issue—"Warm and interesting going on the High School court at North Plainfield is anticipated tonight (Saturday), when the quintets of the Woodbridge and North Plainfield High Schools clash."—The battle was warm, all right, and it was also interesting for those who are exponents and lovers of the pugilistic art.

HOPE CHAPEL QUINTET BEAT THE RIVERSIDES

The Riverside Five, of this city, lost an exciting game to the Hope Chapel Second team on the Chapel court, Saturday night, the final score being 30 to 19. The Chapelites did not get into their stride until the last period and then they scored field goals at will, passing the score of their opponents and securing a 11-point lead before the game ended.

The score at the end of the first half was 14 to 9 in favor of the visiting combination, but nine field goals by the Fourth street aggregation in the second half overcame this lead. WHITE TEAM GAVE REDS A 38 TO 7 WALLOPING

The Red team, of the Y. M. C. A. Color League, was no match for the White five in the preliminary game, Saturday night, the latter team winning by the score of 38 to 7. The game was of an uninteresting nature, the White players scoring at will and keeping the ball out of their opponents' hands. The count at the end of the first half was 28 to 2, Borden being the only Red player to score.

The Whites only scored ten points in the last period, while their opponents were making half that number.

This is the inaugural meeting of feminine athletic forces from the Union and Somerset county towns and the boroughites are anxious to take the initial tilt from the fair sex of Rahway.

The Plainfield boys will take on the athletes of State-wide renown from Rahway the following afternoon in the local High School gym, and the North Plainfield shooters are slated to appear on the New Brunswick High School court.

Friday afternoon, the Plainfield girls go to Plainfield and the North Plainfield boys entertain the Westfield tribe. The Plainfield boys will go to Passaic, Saturday afternoon, and the Cranford High School girls appear on the Ninth street court.

N. P. H. S. LOST TO TEAM OF FIGHTERS

Rough Game Staged in Saengerbund Hall Saturday Night.

In a rough and tumble basketball engagement, which was featured by many fouls, the North Plainfield and Woodbridge High School basketball teams met for the second time this season, on Saengerbund Hall court, Saturday night, and gave one of the roughest exhibitions of the court game that has ever been staged on the borough floor. The final score was 40 to 20 in favor of Woodbridge. Fouls were called every half minute, a feature which slewed the game up considerably. In the first game of the season, which was played at Woodbridge, there was sixty-two fouls called and the home team won by three points, while Saturday night's contest was won by the visitors with a margin of 20 points.

The Woodbridge players held their opponents incessantly and as the borough foul shooters could not find the basket the visitors made no attempt to stop their fouling. The game was fast from the very start, Woodbridge taking the lead in the first few minutes which was never overcome by its opponents. At the end of the first half the score stood 18 to 11. North Plainfield made the gap between the two scores smaller at the beginning of the last half, but the visitors started a shooting streak before the score was tied and ran away from the boroughites.

Fully thirty-five fouls were called on the visitors and North Plainfield failed in almost every attempt to increase their score. Wand and Ryder were the best scorers for the visitors, the former getting the most field goals of the game.

HOPES LOSE GAME AND BOOK.

The Hope Chapel basketball team met defeat at the hands of the Bloomfield F. C. aggregation at that place, Saturday night, the final score being 41 to 26. The game was a fast one throughout, the locals losing out in the last part of the game after putting up one of the best fights of the season. A mislaid scorebook accounts for the absence of the box score.

BORO GIRLS AT RAHWAY.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team will play a Rahway sextet for the first time in the history of the school tomorrow afternoon at Rahway. The borough girls will be accompanied by a large delegation of rooters and expect to give their opponents a hard fight for the game. The Rahway team has never appeared on a borough schedule before.

ALL LOCAL TEAMS BACK IN HARNESS

Plainfield Bowlers Will Roll on Many Drives This Week.

The regular scheduled matches of the bowling circuits in which local teams are entered, will be resumed this week after a period of idleness. Several of the teams of the Elks Leagues have played off postponed matches during the holidays. Besides the leagues, local tourneys will also be resumed and this week promises to be a busy one in bowling circles.

ELKS' SENIOR LEAGUE.

Plainfield will be one of the teams to set this league in action again and one of the four quintets to open the new year's schedule. The locals are scheduled to take on the New Brunswick "Bills" on the Watchung alleys, tomorrow night, while Elizabeth will roll on the New York drives. Two matches will be played Thursday, Hoboken at Rahway and Rutherford at Paterson, and Friday night will finish the week's games when Jersey City and Newark will meet on the latter's alleys.

ELKS' JUNIOR LEAGUE.

Two matches will be played Wednesday night. Paterson will entertain Newark and Jersey City will go to New Brunswick. Plainfield pinners will get into action the following night when they meet the Elizabeth leaders on the Betsytown alleys.

F. O. E. LEAGUE.

Newark and Rahway will start off the new year with a match on the Rahway drives, Wednesday night, and Thursday, Plainfield will meet Elizabeth on the Elizabeth alleys. Progress, of Newark, will be the guests of Somerville on the same night.

MASONIC LEAGUE.

Both local teams of the league will play this week, Anchor being scheduled to entertain Orient on the Second street alleys tonight, while Herrman is playing Azure on her home alleys. Wednesday the Second street drives will be used by Jerusalem pinners, who play Washington, and the following night Essex and Lafayette are matched.

LOCAL LEAGUES.

The Park Club pinners will resume their weekly schedule and there will be competition at Gates' alleys all week. The local teams will play as listed below:

THIRD VICTORY OF WEEK FOR Y. M. C. A.

Bound Brook Aggregation Proved Easy for Fast Association Team.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team finished its hardest week of the schedule with a victory Saturday night over the Bound Brook Y. M. A. aggregation, the score being 62 to 18. This is the third victory of the week for the association team.

The visitors were easy prey for the local team and in the first half scored only three field goals, while all of the local players had a hand in the tallying and totalled 29 points. Gavett was out of the game and Ricketts played the pivot position.

During the second half the home team passed a large part of the time and also scored eight more points than in the first half. Bound Brook scored an even dozen counts in the last half. Taylor was responsible for eleven field goals, Ricketts made six and Moulton made the same number.

QUEEN CITY SEVEN IN FAST HOCKEY MATCH

The Queen City hockey team, of this city, and the Meadowspread hockey team, of Fanwood, played a fifty-minute tie game at the latter place yesterday afternoon, the score being 1 to 1. The halves were twenty minutes each and at the end of the game was tie, so an extra ten minutes were played. Neither team scored in this period and the game was called.

Both teams scored their goals in the initial period, A. Sander, rover, getting the goal for Fanwood, and McDonald, cover point, shooting the puck through the goal for Plainfield. Next Sunday the local team will meet Westfield on Lambert's pond, Westfield. The locals would like to hear from the Cranford Canoe Club for a game. The teams lined up as follows:

Queen City	Fanwood
Sharp, Meyers	Honeyman

The total of Turkish prisoners amand several surgeons. We also captured six pieces of mountain artillery, 14 machine guns and ammunition.

The next day the fighting here was still going on. Our troops recaptured some positions which the Turks had occupied, and took three machine guns and ammunition.

At one point a company of a Caucasian regiment was dispersed by bayonet charges, while two Turkish companies were cut to pieces by artillery fire.

Our troops are operating under conditions exceptionally painful on account of the cold and snow in a high altitude. The morale of our soldiers is good, and they fight with ardor.

London, Jan. 4—An official communication given out by Turkish headquarters is contained in a Constantinople dispatch to Reuter's. It says:

Our Caucasian army continues its victorious advance. Our troops, which reached Sari Kamysh, thirty-five miles southwest of Kars, won a final victory after a severe battle.

In the past ten days we have captured 2,000 Russians, eight cannon, thirteen quickfirers and a great quantity of ammunition and war material.

Between Sari Kamysh and Kars we captured two military trains and destroyed the railway. Our troops are advancing farther north with fresh success.

Troops advancing from Touschkerd into Rusian territory dispersed a Rusian battalion which lost 200 dead and 400 prisoners.

The Exchange Telegraph hears from Amsterdam that French aviators dropped several bombs in the vicinity of Brussels, Saturday, partly destroying a Zeppelin shed under construction and killing several German soldiers.

London, Jan. 4—Capt. Arthur N. Loxley, of the battleship Formidable, stood on the bridge smoking a cigarette as his vessel went down in the English channel, according to survivors.

The captain's last words, they say, were a compliment to the officer superintending the launching of the boats.

"Capt. Loxley gave his orders as calmly as if his ship had been in harbor," said one of the rescued sailors. "In a brief speech he exhorted his crew, saying: 'Steady men, everything is all right. Keep cool and be British. There's tons of life in the old ship yet!' "

The survivors give graphic stories of the scene on board the battleship. When the explosion occurred, at 2:20 a. m., 500 men were asleep. Their hammocks and bunks were jerked several inches upward by the shock. The explosion missed the magazine by only ten feet, but it entered the dynamo room and put all electric lighting and the wireless out of action.

The captain of the battleship, according to survivors, was on deck all the time until the vessel sank. When the order was given for all hands to come on deck men swarmed up, saluting the officers as they passed them. Many were almost without clothes.

Two minutes after the first alarm was given the engineroom was flooded and the supply of steam stopped. This was the worst blow of all, because with steam the Formidable might have been able to make port.

The absence of steam also made the work of getting the boats out very laborious. The vessel was soon tilted at an angle that made it difficult for the men to retain their foothold.

Orders were given to make rafts and soon the men were tearing up the decks and bringing all available furniture from below for this purpose. The ship's carpenters improvised rafts by the dozen.

While the second cutter was being launched another explosion occurred. This, curiously enough, served to lengthen the warship's life. She had tilted to a terrifying angle and it seemed as though she might capsize at any moment, but the rush of water into the port side had the effect of balancing her better, though she lay lower in the water.

A large percentage of those saved wore patent inflatable waistcoats, which are described as more effective than life belts.

The Formidable's end was hurried by the fact that she was struck three times by terrific seas within the space of a minute.

Amsterdam, Jan. 4—The presence of a Russian warship in the Mediterranean is declared in a statement issued from the Turkish headquarters in Constantinople. According to the statement the Russian cruiser Askold recently atempted to disembark troops at Jaffa, on the coast of Palestine. The Turkish coast guards fired on the boats, forcing them to return to the cruiser and killing a number of the party.

Constantinople, Jan. 4—The Turks in the Caucasus are advancing victoriously, according to a statement given out by the army headquarters last night. They have taken 8,000 prisoners and captured 8 guns and 13 maxims since December 25.

The Daily Press will be glad o have its attention called to any misleading or untrue statement if such should appear at any time in an advertisement in its columns.

Readers are requested to assist in protecting themselves and legitimate advertisers.

Episode Five Shown at Proctor's January 6.
"THE CASE OF THE PERPETUAL GLARE."

The secret room in the house of Hassam Ali, is the opening scene in The Case of the Perpetual Glare, the fifth episode of Zudora, Thanhouser's great serial by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, which will be seen at Proctor's Theatre, on Wednesday. The mystic sits in reverie before the crystal ball, when into the secret room glides his Hindu servant, a weird, shriveled, bearded creature who never steps upon the screen without suggesting some new unpleasantness. This time he speaks to his master, then leaves, but only to return again and usher in two white-haired old men. Apparently the pair are twins, and, by the look of them, cranks. They hold an earnest consultation with Hassam Ali, and presently Zudora is summoned. She kneels beside her uncle and he slips an arm around her.

"We are hunting a stone of matchless brilliance, my dear," he says to her. "Some new Kih-I-Nor that will catch light up, concentrate it, and throw it like a burning shaft in whatever direction we wish. There is some such stone around because we have seen this phenomenon of light throwing, and are anxious to find the source of it. We believe that it could have originated in nothing but a wonderful diamond."

Zudora, unaware of the fact that this is only another attempt of her uncle's to trick her, readily consents to attempt the search. All she thinks of is that he has promised his consent to marriage with John Storm, the young lawyer whom she has learned to love, if she solves twenty cases brought to him in his capacity as a mystic detective. She has already solved four cases. Here, then, is her opportunity to explain a fifth and count one more step toward the goal of her hopes. She sets out happily, and going to the cabin of the aged twins, which is situated at the top of a bare hill, she talks with them. They tell her that this jewel has the strength and potency of an eternal fire, and with that bit of information to comfort her she goes down the hill again.

As she walks along, the card she holds in her hand catches fire. Alarmed, she looks around her. Soon a magazine she is carrying also bursts into flames. Smoke rises from her hat. Everywhere she goes, fire seems to follow her. In desperation she runs wildly across a nearby field where her lover, John Storm, is waiting. As they are hurrying along, a farmer, driving a load of hay, catches up with them and offers them a lift which they gladly accept. They are no more than safely seated on the comfortable hay, however, than it catches fire, and bewildered and frightened, they and the farmer leap from the wagon for their lives.

The picture changes, and on the screen are shown the two old men, alternately rubbing their hands together gleefully or staring through a telescope. Soon Hassam Ali joins them. He, too, seems delighted by what he sees through the long, brass covered instrument, and together the three go back to the dilapidated cabin on the hilltop. There, presently, Storm comes with Zudora. They are attacked by the twins and, while they are being securely tied, Hassam Ali, who has been in hiding, departs without being seen and goes home. When the twins come to him there to be paid for what they had been led to believe was only an attempt to frighten a disobedient girl Hassam Ali suddenly makes known to them his nefarious schemes for doing away with Storm and Zudora. They refuse his overtures to aid in this attempt, and leave. Their machine, that wonderful invention with which they produce the perpetual glare and with which they hope to startle the world, is not to be turned into a weapon for murder, so they tell Hassam Ali.

In a rage with them, Hassam Ali stalks up the street to see what he can do alone. He collects a gang of ruffians on the way and with them succeeds in planting dynamite in the hill where the twins have their cabin. When this is done and a fuse has been run to the bottom of the hill, he sends for the twins, for at the last moment he has decided to spare their lives. They crouch, cowering by the mystic as he touches a match to the fuse.

Meanwhile, John Storm has struggled free of the ropes that bind him and loosed Zudora. She hastens away, but fearing some catastrophe, hurries back and high on the hill sees her lover smashing that strange arrangement of cylindrical mirrors and magnifying glasses which has produced the mysterious glare. She stops never for a second to examine this strange affair, but suspecting from the looks of the workmen she has seen on her way, that something portends, climbs up and siezes Storm and hurries down the hill again. They reach safety just as the dynamite flings the hill high in the air.

TO CUT DOWN EXPENSES.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Governor Whitman made it clear in his talk with newspaper men this morning that his investigation of State departments is not for the sake of getting any one's head, but to learn of the workings and necessities of the departments and to ascertain where unwarranted expenditures exist. He stated that he believes the State government can be carried on at much less cost in its several departments.

SIX INDICTMENTS.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Six indictments against the Swift Packing Co., of Chicago, were presented to the county court by the grand jury today. The company is charged with violating the State health law by keeping edibles in cold storage longer than ten months. Monday was set as the limit in which a written plea to the indictments can be filled. The case will test the constitutionality of the law in question.

COAL OPERATORS MEET.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 4.—Practically all of the coal operators in eastern Ohio will meet at a consultation to be held here at 2 p. m. today on the strike situation.

ASKS FOR ALL PAPERS.

Washington, Jan. 4 — Senator Hardwick, of Georgia, introduced a resolution in the Senate today, calling for all the papers that have passed between the State Department and Great Britain concerning the contrabond put by England upon shipments of naval stores and resinous products. The resolution also calls for information regarding the number of American ships bearing cargoes of naval stores and resinous products that have been held up by Great Britain.

BIG LOAN SUBSCRIBED.

London, Jan. 4.—Advices from Rome indicate that the loan of $200,000,000, asked for by the Government, has been subscribed for in full. The loan is to run for twenty-five years.

DENIES STATEMENT.

Baltimore, Jan. 4. President Willard, of the Baltimore and Ohio, flatly denies the statement that the company will begin the expenditure of $30,000,000 for improvements.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The serial photo-play is now regarded by managers and public alike to be the last word in moving picture development. In consequence, the management of Proctor's Theatre has endeavored to give the Plainfield public the very best in this line, and with that end in view has contracted for the sole presentation in this city of the Pathe latest continued feature, "The Exploits of Elaine." This serial is now being published in story form by the William R. Hearst publications throughout the United States, and Mr. Hearst has evidenced a personal interest in its exploitation. The principle characters in "The Exploits of Elaine" are interpreted by Miss Pearl White, who is well-known to Plainfielders through her personal appearance at Proctor's Theatre a few weeks ago in connection with the presentation of the "Perils of Pauline" for which she posed, and Arnold Daly, the popular dramatic actor, who is best known for his work in George Bernard Shaw's successful plays. The cast also includes several other actors and actresses whose names have been familiar in legitimate theatricals fields for many years. The first episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" will be screened at Proctor's Theatre, Friday. Read this wonderful story in the New York Journal and then follow it at Proctor's if you wish to see the greatest moving picture narrative that has ever been produced.

PROLOGUE.

It is the "Hit You! Mush on! Chook! Chook!" spirit—the vim, dash and "go" of a hustling mining country like the Yukon—that Jack London has put into these Smoke Bellew stories. Mr. London writes of real men—men whose daily job is to join issue with danger and sudden death with never a whimper. You can't help feeling the thrill that runs in the veins of these iron muscled giants of the gold fields, particularly since Jack London, a good, husky figure of a man himself, has been through many of the adventures he writes about and has the knack of taking you along and of making you "hit the trail" with him. "Smoke," once a tenderfoot, now a sure enough sour dough, has the test of his life in one story and is saved from defeat by a mere girl. In another he drops, as he supposes, to sudden death to save the life of a friend. Beyond question Jack London has struck the rich "mother lode" of fiction in these wonderful stories.

CHAPTER I.

The Taste of the Meat.

IN the beginning he was Christopher Bellew. By the time he was at college he had become Chris Bellew. Later in the bohemian crowd of San Francisco he was called Kit Bellew. And in the end he was known by no other name than Smoke Bellew. Nor would it have happened had he not had a fond mother and an iron uncle and had he not received a letter from Gillet Bellamy.

"I have just seen a copy of the Billow," Gillet wrote from Paris. "Of course O'Hara will succeed with it. But he's missing some tricks. Go down and see him. Let him think they're your own suggestions. Above all, don't forget to make him fire that dub who's doing the musical and art criticism. Another thing. Tell him to kick around and get some gink to turn out a live serial and to put into it the real romance and glamour and color of San Francisco."

And down to the office of the Billow went Kit Bellew faithfully to instruct. O'Hara listened. O'Hara agreed. O'Hara fired the dub who wrote criticisms. Further, when O'Hara wanted anything no friend could deny him. Before Kit Bellew could escape from the office he had become an associate editor, had agreed to write weekly columns of criticism till some decent pen was found and had pledged himself to write a weekly installment of 10,000 words on the San Francisco serial—and all this without pay. The Billow wasn't paying yet, O'Hara explained.

Luckily for Kit he had his own income. Small it was compared with some, yet it was large enough to enable him to belong to several clubs and maintain a studio in the Latin quarter. Yet he was always broke, for the Billow, in perennial distress, absorbed his cash as well as his brains. There were the illustrators, who periodically refused to illustrate; the printers, who periodically refused to print, and the office boy, who frequently refused to officiate. At such times O'Hara looked at Kit, and Kit did the rest.

When the steamship Excelsior arrived from Alaska, bringing the news of the Klondike strike that set the country mad, Kit made a purely frivolous proposition.

"Look here, O'Hara," he said. "This gold rush is going to be big—the days of '49 over again. Suppose I cover it for the Billow? I'll pay my own expenses."

The next Kit heard of the Klondike was when he dropped into the club that afternoon and encountered his uncle. "Hello, avuncular relative," Kit greeted. "Won't you join me?"

He ordered a cocktail, but the uncle glanced with irritated disapproval at the cocktail and on to his nephew's face. John Bellew came of the old hard and hardy stock that had crossed the plains by ox team in the fifties, and in him was this same hardness, and the hardness of a childhood spent in the conquering of a new land. "You're not living right, Christopher. I'm ashamed of you. Your father was a man, every inch of him. I think he'd have whaled all this musical and artistic tomfoolery out of you."

"Alas! these degenerate days," Kit sighed.

The older man was on the verge of choking with wrath, but swallowed it down and managed to articulate, "How old are you?"

"I have reason to believe"—

"I know. Twenty-seven. You finished college at twenty-two. You've dabbled and played and trifled for five years. Before God and man of what use are you? When I was your age I had one suit of underclothes. I was riding with the cattle in Colusa. I was hard as rocks, and I could sleep on a rock. I lived on jerked beef and bear meat. I am a better man physically right now than you are. You weigh about 165. I can throw you right now or thrash you with my fists.

"It doesn't take a physical prodigy to mop up cocktails or pink tea," Kit murmured deprecatingly. "Besides, I wasn't brought up right. Now if when I was a youngster I had taken some of those intensely masculine vacations you go in for—I wonder why you didn't invite me sometimes?"

The older man looked at his nephew with unconcealed disgust. "Well, I'm going to take another one of those what you call masculine vacations. Suppose I asked you to come along? Hal and Robert are going up to Klondike, and I'm going to see them across the pass and down to the lakes, then return"—

He got no further, for the young man had sprung forward and gripped his hand. "My preserver!"

John Bellew was immediately suspicious. He had not dreamed the invitation would be accepted.

"When do we start?"

"It will be a hard trip. You'll be in the way."

"No, I won't. I'll work."

"Each man has to take a year's supplies in with him. There'll be such a jam the Indian packers won't be able to handle it. Hal and Robert will have to pack their outfits across themselves. That's what I'm going along for—to help them pack. If you come you'll have to do the same."

"When do we start?"

"Tomorrow."

"You needn't take it to yourself that your lecture has done it," Kit said at parting. "I just had to get away somewhere, anywhere, from O'Hara."

• • • • • • •

Kit Bellew landed through the madness of the Dyea beach, congested with the thousand pound outfits of thousands of men. This immense mass of luggage and food, flung ashore in mountains by the steamers, was beginning slowly to dribble up the Dyea valley and across Chilkoot. It was a portage of twenty-eight miles and could be accomplished only on the backs of men.

Tenderest of the tenderfeet was Kit. Like many hundreds of others, he carried a big revolver swung on a cartridge belt. A strapping six foot Indian passed him, carrying an unusually large pack. Kit swung in behind, admiring the splendid calves of the man and the grace and ease with which he moved along under his burden. The Indian dropped his pack on the scales in front of the post, and Kit joined the group of admiring gold rushers who surrounded him. The pack weighed 125 pounds, which fact was uttered back and forth in tones of awe.

Here Kit slid out of the conversation. A young woman standing in the doorway had caught his eye. Unlike other women landing from the steamers, she was neither short skirted nor bloomer clad. She was dressed as any woman traveling anywhere would be dressed.

The bright beauty and color of her oval face held him, and he looked overlong—looked till she resented, and her own eyes, long lashed and dark, met his in cool survey. From his face they traveled in evident amusement down to the big revolver at his thigh. Then her eyes came back to his, and in them was amused contempt. She turned to the man beside her and indicated Kit. The man glanced him over with the same amused contempt.

"Chekako," the girl said.

The man, who looked like a tramp in his cheap overalls and dilapidated woolen jacket, grinned dryly, and Kit felt withered, though he knew not why.

"Did you see that man with the girl?" Kit's neighbor asked him excitedly. "Know who he is?"

Kit shook his head.

"Cariboo Charley. He was just pointed out to me. He struck it big on Klondike. Old timer. Been on the Yukon a dozen years. He's just come out."

"What does 'chekako' mean?" Kit asked.

"You're one; I'm one," was the answer—"tenderfoot."

Kit's first pack was a success. Up to Finnegan's Crossing they had managed to get Indians to carry the 2,500 pound outfit. From that point their own backs must do the work. They planned to move forward at the rate of a mile a day. It looked easy—on paper.

Since John Bellew was to stay in camp and do the cooking, he would be unable to make more than an occasional pack. So to each of the three young men fell the task of carrying 800 pounds one mile each day. If they made fifty pound packs it meant a daily walk of sixteen miles loaded and of fifteen miles light, "because we don't back trip the last time," Kit explained the pleasant discovery. Eighty pound packs meant nineteen miles travel each day, and 100 pound packs meant only fifteen miles.

"I don't like walking," said Kit, "therefore I shall carry 100 pounds." He caught the grin of incredulity on his uncle's face and added hastily: "Of course I shall work up to it. I'll start with fifty."

He did and ambled gayly along the trail. He dropped the sack at the next camp site and ambled back. It was easier than he had thought. But two miles had rubbed off the velvet of his strength and exposed the underlying softness. His second pack was sixty five pounds. It was more difficult, and he no longer ambled. Several times, following the custom of all packers, he sat down on the ground, resting the pack behind him on a rock or stump. With the third pack he became bold. He fastened the straps to a ninety-five pound sack of beans and started. At the end of a hundred yards he felt that he must collapse. He sat down and mopped his face.

"Short hauls and short rests," he muttered. "That's the trick."

Sometimes he did not make a hundred yards, and each time he struggled to his feet for another short haul the pack became undeniably heavier. He panted for breath, and the sweat streamed from him. Before he had covered a quarter of a mile he stripped off his woolen shirt and hung it on a tree. A little later he discarded his hat. At the end of half a mile he decided he was finished. As he sat and panted his gaze fell upon the big revolver and the heavy cartridge belt.

"Ten pounds of junk!" he sneered as he unbuckled it.

He did not bother to hang it on a tree, but flung it into the underbrush.

His short hauls decreased. At times a hundred feet was all he could stagger, and then the ominous pounding of his heart against his eardrums and the sickening tottering of his knees compelled him to rest. And his rests grew longer. But his mind was busy. It was a twenty-eight mile portage, which represented as many days, and this by all accounts was the easiest part of it.

"Wait till you get to Chilkoot," others told him as they rested and talked "where you climb with hands and feet."

"Wait till you hit the canyon. You'll have to cross a raging torrent on a sixty foot pine tree. No guide ropes, nothing, and the water boiling at the sag of the log to your knees. If you fall with a pack on your back there's no getting out of the straps. You just stay there and drown."

He and the sack of beans became a perambulating tragedy. It reminded him of the Old Man of the Sea who sat on Sindbad's neck. Again and again he was nearly seduced by the thought of abandoning the sack of beans in the brush and of sneaking around the camp to the beach and catching a steamer for civilization.

Before the mile pack was ended if ever a man was a wreck he was. As the end of the pack came in sight he strained himself in desperation, gained the camp site and pitched forward on his face, the beans on his back. It did not kill him, but he lay for fifteen minutes before he could summon sufficient shreds of strength to release himself from the straps. Then he became deathly sick and was so found by Robbie, who had similar troubles of his own.

"And I am twenty-seven years old and a man," he privately assured himself many times in the days that followed. There was need for it. At the end of a week, though he had succeeded in moving his 800 pounds forward a mile a day, he had lost fifteen pounds of his own weight. His face was lean and haggard. All resilience had gone out of his body and mind. He no longer walked, but plodded, and on the back trips, traveling light, his feet dragged almost as much as when he was loaded.

He had become a work animal. He fell asleep over his food, and his sleep was heavy and beastly save when he was aroused, screaming with agony, by the cramps in his legs. Every part of him ached. He tramped on raw blisters.

When they had moved the outfit across the foot logs at the mouth of the canyon they made a change in their plans. Word had come across the pass that at Lake Lindeman the last available trees for building boats were being cut. The two cousins, with tools, whipsaw, blankets and grub on their backs, went on, leaving Kit and his uncle to hustle along the outfit. John Bellew now shared the cooking with Kit, and both packed shoulder to shoulder. Time was flying, and on the peaks the first snow was falling. To be caught on the wrong side of the pass meant a delay of nearly a year.

The older man put his iron back under 100 pounds. Kit was shocked, but he gritted his teeth and fastened his own straps to 100 pounds. It hurt, but he had learned the knack, and his body, purged of all softness and fat, was beginning to harden up with lean and bitter muscle.

Also he observed and devised. He took note of the head straps worn by the Indians and manufactured one for himself, which he used in addition to the shoulder straps. It made things easier, so that he began the practice of piling any light, cumbersome piece of luggage on top. Thus he was soon able to bend along with 100 pounds in the straps, fifteen or twenty more lying loosely on top the pack and against his neck, an ax or a pair of oars in one hand and in the other the nested cooking pails of the camp.

But work as they would the toil increased. The trail grew more rugged; their packs grew heavier, and each day saw the snow line dropping down the mountains, while freight jumped to 60 cents. No word came from the cousins beyond, so they knew they must be at work chopping down the standing trees and whipsawing them into boat planks.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—The Man Who Chose Flowers.

In Her Hand She Carried a Bouquet of Blue Flowers.

"ALONG, long time ago in a peaceful German valley lived a poor man and his family in a very humble little cottage." Daddy was telling the evening story.

"He had some cattle which he drove to pasture every morning when the sun was bright and drove them back at twilight to be milked.

"When he started out in the morning he always took his bow and arrows with him to shoot game with, and this particular day he saw a beautiful deer with large horns grazing peacefully. Of course he wanted the deer, but just before he got ready to shoot the deer bounded away.

"The man ran after the deer, up, up a high mountain, when it disappeared. The man reached the place and saw an opening.

"He went in and found himself in a lofty hall. The walls and ceilings were of glittering precious stones, and in the center of the hall stood a beautiful queen clothed in a dress of gold and silver cloth.

"In her golden hair sparkled many jewels. Her eyes were a wonderful blue, and in her hand she carried a bouquet of blue flowers which just matched her eyes. She was surrounded by lovely girls.

"The man had no eyes for anything, however, but the blue flowers, and when the queen asked him to select jewels, gold and silver, to carry home with him he asked instead for the bouquet of blue flowers.

"As the queen presented them to him there came a loud clap of thunder, and then he found himself alone, and all that remained was the bunch of flowers and a handful of seeds.

"When he arrived home he told his wife of his adventure, but she scolded him for being so silly as not to accept some of the jewels and gold and silver.

"But he didn't seem to care at all about the scolding. He admired the blue flowers, put them in a vase and then went out, plowed a big field and planted the seeds that had been given him by the fairy queen.

"The seeds seemed almost enchanted, they grew so fast, and soon the field was covered with these wonderful blue flowers.

"The man saw the fairy queen and her hand maidens tending the flowers near by every day, but they never came near him.

"Soon the flowers faded, the seeds ripened, and then the fairy queen came and asked if they could spin flax and weave linen.

"The man and his wife had never heard of flax and spinning and weaving, so the queen explained that the field was filled with flax, which was the queen's flower, and that she wished them to know the uses of it.

"So she taught them to spin and weave, and they grew very rich."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Yes, I am a divorced woman and money troubles were at the bottom of my difficulties," said Mrs. Langdon.

"I saw a statement in a paper the other day that made me furious. A judge of a court of domestic relations was quoted in the paper as saying that the old system under which the man had absolute control of the purse strings was the ideal one and that divorces would not cease until women ceased to be financially independent." Her eyes snapped and she gave the fire a vicious jab.

"That judge was over sixty, believe me," answered her friend, looking into her vanity box and patting her hair.

"I suppose his wife rises nightly and rifles his pockets to get a little needed cash," continued the divorcee, "or meekly recites her list of desires, with prices attached. If men would only realize that women can be trusted with the family money as well as the family honor, there would not be so large a crowd of women flocking to the divorce courts."

"But some women are not to be trusted with money," said her friend, snapping the box and laying it on the table.

"If a man finds he has married a woman like that his first business should be patiently to train her to assume responsibility in money matters, not to keep her irresponsible by treating her like a child. Even if he is generous, he may die and leave her to manage or suffer from his mismanagement," said Mrs. Langdon.

"That's a mother's job, not a husband's," said her friend.

"True enough! Why mothers let their girls grow up with no financial training I cannot imagine, but if a man marries one of these poor, untrained creatures it surely is up to him to educate her, not to repress her.

"When I was first married," continued Mrs. Langdon, "I asked Carl for an allowance. He said he did not think that was necessary, as he would settle all bills. And we had midnight sessions every month when he went over the itemized accounts. They usually ended in scenes, for it angered me to have to justify every five-cent purchase. I was not allowed to have money even for car fare. He gave me tickets, if you please."

"I wonder you stood it," said her friend.

"Stood it! You have never been married. Do you think, like that judge, that women for a trivial discontent are going to get a divorce? I tell you a woman will endure and endure and continue to endure before she is desperate enough to seek a separation. Marriage is a solemn thing." She relapsed into silence and gazed into the blazing coals.

"What finally drove you to get a divorce?" asked her friend.

"I tried earning my own money after my baby died, hoping by eliminating financial friction to patch things up. He didn't like that and sneeringly told me, since I was so crazy to earn my own money, I could support myself entirely, and he left me. I would never have broken the bond myself, but I am far happier alone. I had begun to hate him and hate shrivels the soul," answered Mrs. Langdon.

"How blind some men are," said her friend, softly.

"Yes, blind and deaf," replied Mrs. Langdon.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

Hand Lotion—One usually pays at least 25 cents for a bottle of prepared lotion, while this recipe makes about five times as much for the same cost. It also dries into the skin. Have your druggist put into one bottle 5 cents' worth each of glycerin, rosewater, bay rum, tincture benzoin, and a few drops of carbolic acid. Get also 5 cents' worth of quince seed (it ought to be about a tablespoonful); soak seeds over night in a pint of warm water. In the morning stir well, strain through cheesecloth and add to the other ingredients.

Camphor Ice—One cup mutton fat drippings strained, two tablespoons glycerin and two tablespoons spirits of camphor. Pour into small molds and when cool wrap it in paraffin paper or tinfoil. Use for chapped hands and face.

To Heal Badly Chapped Hands in One Night—Mix equal parts of glycerin and lemon juice (or vinegar) and apply freely.

CHILDREN'S RUBBERS

It is the little helps that count in these busy times. Buy a yard of half-inch (or wider) black elastic, cut the storm rubber down at side, place two inches elastic under, sewing neatly; then the kids will not want help when those rubbers must be put on and off so many times a day. In mending them, elastic is much better than cloth, for stretching keeps it from tearing again, as it is sure to do when cloth is used, and one almost always has garters that have good pieces that can be used.

THE TABLE

Christmas Cake—Two pounds powdered sugar, one pound butter two egg whites, one teacup sweet cream, two pounds sifted flour, one tablespoon strong lemon extract. Mix all and beat thoroughly for half an hour. Have a fancy, high mold; grease it, fill three-fourths full and bake in steady oven. When icing. Place cake on a plate; with a spoon put the icing on top and allow it to run down the sides until every part is covered. Ornament with flowers, leaves or bonbons.

Ginger Squares—One cup sugar, one-half cup lard, one-half cup molasses, one-half cup warm water, one-half cup cold water, one-fourth teaspoon ginger, one teaspoon soda sifted in two cups flour. When cold make a frosting of confectionery sugar and milk. Mark in squares, bake in shallow dripping pan.

Fried Mush—After making a nice pan of mush, while it is still hot, turn out into a stone crock to cool. When perfectly cold, turn out and slice in strips one-half inch thick. Roll each strip in beaten egg, then cracker meal, drop in hot meat drippings and let brown on both sides. You will find this good and inexpensive.

Chicken Goulash (Hungarian style)—Two potatoes (raw), one tablespoon butter, one-half teaspoon paprika, one cup brown stock, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-fourth clove garlic, one cup cold chicken. Pare three small potatoes, cut into dice and fry in melted butter in the spider. Toss about in the butter till they begin to brown, add seasoning, stock and chicken. Simmer slowly. Serve at wonder, others act.

"How can Mrs. So-and-So dress so well, I wonder?" says her next door neighbor.

Let us whisper a secret. Mrs. So-and-So stretches her income (moderate though it is) to the very furthest limit. She don't pay out big sums all at once in order to buy her clothes for cash.

She deals at Laurie's.

MERGER OF CIVIC BODIES FAVORED

Business Men's and Credit Associations May Join Forces.

ACTION ON JANUARY 18

Retention of New Auto Engine in Business Section Urged—Merchants Plan for "Dollar Day" on February 24.

Whether or not the Plainfield Business Men's Association and the Business Men's Credit Association will become one organization will be determined at the meeting of the Business Men's Credit Association, which is to be held on January 18. At their regular meeting, last night, the members of the former organization went on record as favoring the combination, provided the Credit Association agrees to it, and pending the possible amalgamation, no officers for 1915 have been elected by the Business Men's Association.

Last night's meeting was one of the largest that has been held in some months by the merchants. The matter of consolidation was thoroughly discussed by them, and by some of the officers of the Credit Association, who were invited to be present. It was reported that the executive committees of both organizations had held a meeting a week ago, and went on record as being unanimously in the favor of the combination, and this soon brought the subject to a vote. J. L. Bennett, president of the Credit Association, was present and he said he favored the consolidation, was ready personally to bring about the combination at the earliest possible date. A. E. Force, head of the business men, made similar remarks.

The treasury of each organization is in good condition, and the combined membership is 123. This number will be somewhat decreased, however, as only nineteen members of the Business Men's Association are at the present time members of the other organization as well.

J. J. Varley called attention to the resolution passed by the West End Civic Association protesting against sending the new fire engine to Netherwood, and after some discussion it was voted, on motion of Herbert Schuldenfrei, that the Common Council be notified that it was the opinion of the meeting that the new engine be quartered in the center of the city, and the engine at present at headquarters be transferred to Netherwood.

The committee appointed to have an ordinance drafted that would drive the fly-by-night auction and fake sales out of town, reported progress, and there was a discussion of methods to compel wholesalers to pay freight on goods to Plainfield, as is now said to be done to Newark and Elizabeth. A committee was appointed to attend the meeting of the West End Civic Association, on Friday night, when taxation matters with relation to the schools, will be discussed. The secretary was also ordered to write a letter to Edward F. Bodin, of Watchung, thanking him for a song entitled "It Pays to Trade in Plainfield," which he wrote some time ago and forwarded to the organization.

Another Dollar Day will be held on Thursday, February 25, the following committee having been appointed with power to complete the arrangements: Henry Rosenbaum, chairman; John J. Varley, Isaac Schwed, Kenneth Stewart and Leslie R. Fort.

VAGRANT DISCHARGED.

Joseph Murphy, of Bound Brook, was arrested last night by the local police charged with soliciting from house to house. Arraigned in the city court, this morning, he pleaded for an opportunity to get out of town and was let go with this proviso by Judge DeMeza.

FOR JUVENILE COURT.

Clarence Garthwaite, of 40 Harmony street, the borough, a pupil in the North Plainfield schools, was arraigned before Recorder Fred Hand, this morning, on a charge of disorderly conduct, the charge being made by Supervising Principal Fred Aungst. The boy was released until Friday, when he will be taken before the Juvenile Court at Somerville.

Seventh Annual Fur Sale.

Charles Kurtzman, the furrier, 178 E. Front St., near Watchung avenue, announces his seventh annual fur sale, which starts today. This is an honest cut-price sale and every article is fully guaranteed. Mr. Kurtzman has been in Plainfield for the past seven years and expects to remain in this city for many years to come, thereby you are assured of honest and trustworthy dealings at his store. Here the year round.—Adv. ***

COMPANY K ELECTS OFFICERS FOR YEAR

Also Makes Plans for Annual Indoor Carnival in the Armory.

The annual meeting and election of civil officers of Company K took place last night, in the West Front street Armory, with the following results: Secretary, Corporal A. R. Tranchand; treasurer, Lieutenant James B. Conkling; recruiting committee, Corporal Myrton E. Glover, chairman; entertainment committee, Sergeant George L. Apgar, chairman. The election of trustees was laid over until the next meeting.

Twenty-eight men signed for the School of Musketry which will be held again this year. The course of instruction consists of the use of the rifle, construction of the rifle and all departments of shooting. This was very successful last year. A. R. Philips will be the instructor. Plans were made at the meeting for the annual fair to be held in the Armory during the week of Washington's Birthday.

The following men were named on various committees for the fair: Sergeant George L. Apgar, chairman of floor committee; Corporal A.R.Tranchand, chairman of door committee; Sergeant O. R. Pearson, chairman hat checking committee; Corporal M. E. Glover, chairman donation committee; Sergeant Augustus H. VanArsdale, chairman feature committee; Corporal Carmen, chairmen novelty committee; Sergeant LeRoy DeCamp, chairman refreshment comittee, and Corporal Stephen G. Millwater, chairman decorating committee.

SEEK GOVERNMENT LAND FOR STREET

City Council Takes Further Steps Toward Widening Thoroughfare.

Relative to the proposed widening of East Second street, between Watchung avenue and Church street, Councilman F. J. Blatz at last night's meeting of the Council, offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the application to the Government for permission to use a portion of its land for the improvement as suggested. Postmaster A. E. Hongland recently gave the Council to understand that such permission would be given upon application. Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett was authorized to sign all necessary papers on behalf of the city.

C. L. Morgan, of Trenton, communicated with the Council, informing that body that as per request, he would furnish the city with all copies of bills introduced in the Legislature during the coming session. The bond of H. R. Adams was received and filed. Upon motion of Councilman R. A. Claybrook the rules of the Council were made the by-laws, according to the annual custom. The Council adjourned to meet on Monday night, January 11, to pass upon matters pertaining to the joint sewer proposition.

BAMFORTH SUCCEEDS CRAM AS HEAD OF LOCAL UNION

Members of Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, held their annual meeting and election of officers in their headquarters, last night, the following being chosen to serve during the ensuing term: President, J. H. Bamforth; vice-president, Andrew J. Shampanore; secretary-treasurer, H. W. Thomas; sergeant-at-arms, Thomas Heron. The auditing committee will be composed of Winfred C. Cram, Andrew J. Shampanore and Frazee Putnam.

Mr. Bamforth succeeds Winfred C. Cram as president, the latter's term of three years having expired at last night's meeting. Following the disposal of accumulated routine business a social hour was enjoyed.

HOME AFTER SAD TRIP.

Mrs. Margaret Hansen, of East Second street, and Mrs. Frank Sheppard, of Washington street, accompanied by their mother, Mrs. McKay, returned home this morning from Inverhuron, Ont. to which place they were called by the death of their father, Danold McKay. The latter expired suddenly two days before Christmas at Syracuse, N. Y., having stopped there for a brief visit with another daughter, while on his way to spend the holidays in Plainfield.

WEATHER RECORDS COMPARED.

The temperature on January 5, 1904, eleven years ago today, was 13 degrees below zero, while today's lowest temperature was 14 degrees above the zero mark.

ASSESSORS MAKE REPORT OF WORK

West End Avenue Commissioners Supply Boro Council With Details.

WILL COST $1,046.12

Annual Reports Received From Various Departments—Public Hearing On Street Question Will Be Held February 5.

Commissioners appointed recently by the Borough Council to ascertain the expense that would be entailed in macadamizing West End avenue, from Greenbrook road to Rockview avenue, made their report at the January meeting of the Council, held last night, setting the figure at $1,046.12. The commission included James L. Love, Thomas S. Armstrong and William C. Smith. The following owners of property will be affected by the proposed improvement: W. J. Buttfield, West End Heights Improvement Company, William L. Smalley, Newton B. Smalley and the borough. Councilman Alexander Milne, chairman of the street committee, offered a resolution that the matter be taken up by the Council at its meeting February 5, and this suggestion was favorably accepted. At that time all property owners desiring a hearing on the subject will be given an opportunity to express their opinions.

Annual reports from the chief marshal, recorder and overseer of the poor were received. Chief Marshal Weiss reported a total of 294 arrests during the year, and Recorder Fred Hand, in his resume, stated that $951 had been collected in fines. Of this amount $896 had been turned over to

SCHOOL EXAMINER MAKES HIS REPORT

Dr. A. F. VanHorn Presented Statistics to Board of Education.

The January meeting of the Board of Education was held at the High School, last night, most of the business being of a routine character and a number of bills were approved for payment. A proposal received from the Princeton Club, of this city, to give one or more lectures at the High School Auditorium by members of the Princeton faculty was received and accepted. This will add a valuable feature to the entertainments being given this winter at the school buildings. The lectures are free to the public and the dates will be announced as soon as determined upon.

Dr. VanHorn, the medical examiner, presented some figures showing the results of the policy of the Board in instituting regular medical inspection among the pupils. For the year ending December 31, 1914, 3,654 regular medical inspections of the pupils were made and the comparison with the year of 1913 showed a smaller proportion of defective eyes, deafness and other ailments. Much of this improvement Dr. VanHorn attributes to the increased interest on the part of the children's parents in co-operating with the school authorities.

Reports submitted showed that a substantial income is now being earned by rentals of the school buildings to outside organizations, particularly the High School Auditorium and swimming pool. This does not in any way affect the use of the buildings by the school children, but is confined to hours when schools are not in session.

The Board will meet again tomorrow night at which time it is expected that the award will be made of the contracts for the Evergreen Avenue School.

G. O. P. COMMITTEE MEETING.

A special meeting of the local City Republican Executive Committee will be held this evening at the offices of Councilman Francis J. Blatz. A number of important matters will come before the meeting, and a large attendance is desired.

MAYOR APPOINTS FRANK J. HUBBARD

Will Succeed William S. Tyler as School Commissioner.

New Appointee is a Civil Engineer and a Member of Hospital Board—A Change in Health Board to Be Made at An Early Date.

One of the early surprises of the new city administration came last night when Mayor Leighton Calkins appointed Frank J. Hubbard as a member of the Board of Education to succeed William S. Tyler, who has served in that capacity for many years. The change becomes effective February 1. The appointment was referred to Councilman Richard A. Claybrook, who, later moved that the city clerk notify the Board of Education of the change. No confirmation of this appointment was necessary.

For several days there has been a rumor that Mayor Calkins would probably not re-appoint Mr. Tyler and yet to many the change comes as a surprise. As previously stated, Mr. Tyler has been a very active member of the Board, giving largely of his time to that work. Many improvements in the public schools have been the result of his initiative.

Mr. Hubbard is a civil engineer, and is at present a member of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital. He is more or less familiar with the work of the Board of Education having kept in close touch with educational matters.

Mayor Calkins in discussing the appointment after last night's meeting, said that he had given the matter a great deal of thought and attention and in his opinion Mr. Hubbard was thoroughly fitted for the position on the school Board.

The Mayor characterized Mr. Hubbard as being a practical business man, having the courage of his convictions and one whom he believes will give the city his best service. Mr. Calkins did not think that because Mr. Hubbard happened to live in the Third ward was a basis for just criticism, provided the appointee was a man well fitted for the job. Mr. Calkins made it plain that in all his appointments he would seek men who, in his opinion, were best qualified for the places to be filled.

The reason that Hugh Reilly has not been re-appointed a member of the Board of Health is that he intends to remove from the city and the Mayor in consequence will be obliged to name someone else.

JANUARY SESSION OF COUNTY COURTS

Three Local Men on Grand Jury Sworn in by Justice Bergen This Morning.

Elizabeth, Jan. 5—Hyman Adelberg, DeWitt C. Ivins and Duncan W. Taylor, of Plainfield, are members of the new Union County Grand Jury panel sworn in here today. Justice James J. Bergen is presiding and the foreman of the jury is George A. Watkins, of Cranford. The charge to the jury included remarks on the excise question and Justice Bergen cited conditions prevalent at the present time throughout the county.

Resolution on the death of former United States Senator John Kean, which occurred recently, were offered this morning by former Judge Benjamin A. Vail. Up to the time of his death Mr. Kean was a member of the Union County Bar Association.

In the Common Pleas Court, Judge James C. Connolly granted an in and tavern license for the sale of liquor at Terrill road and South avenue, Fanwood.

FORMER LOCAL GIRL DIES FOLLOWING LONG ILLNESS

Miss Ella Galvin, daughter of John Galvin, who formerly lived at West Fifth and New streets, died at her home in Dixon, Ill., Christmas Eve, following a long illness caused by cancer of the stomach.

She was prominent in vaudeville circles, having made her debut at the age of three years. Her father and brother conducted an amusement hall at what is now known as the Plainfield Theatre and later opened Galvin's Park, opposite the Westfield golf links.

The board of trustees of the Church of the Heavenly Rest will meet this evening.

MACMURRAY TO QUIT CLERKSHIP

George B. Wean, City Stenographer, Also Presents Resignation.

ACTION A SURPRISE

Failure of Common Council to Fix Salaries Prompts Officials to Retire—Resignations Are Laid On the Table.

Coming as a complete surprise to Mayor Leighton Calkins and the members of the Common Council, City Clerk James T. MacMurray and George B. Wean, city stenographer, both presented their resignations at the first regular meeting of the 1915 Council, held last night. The action was so unexpected, there being no previous intimation of the fact, that the city officials, as well as others, were dumbfounded. Councilman Thomas F. Hylan, whose attention was directed to another matter at the time, was so puzzled that he requested that the communications be read again, explaining that he did not understand them at first.

Following the reading of the resignations the councilmen were apparently so non-plussed over the matter that they looked at each other in amazement. Finally, it was moved that the resignations be laid on the table. They were worded to read that they were to become effective at the "end of this meeting," but inasmuch as the Council adjourned to January 11, neither Mr. MacMurray nor Mr. Wean were permitted to retire last night.

While there is no absolute assurance that the differences will be adjusted so that the clerk and stenog-

J. V. E. VANDERHOEF CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Borough Board of Health Organizes for the Coming Year.

J. V. E. Vanderhoef was elected president, and Dr. A. H. Dundon secretary, treasurer and registrar of vital statistics at the annual meeting of the North Plainfield Board of Health, last night. James L. Love and Cormack McDonough, the two new members, who succeed C. H. Rugg and A. E. Kenney, met with the Board. J. L. Oliff was re-appointed health inspector for another term.

The annual report of the treasurer showed receipts of $1,113.99 and disbursements of $943.30, with a balance of $170.69. The registrar of vital statistics reported 61 deaths, 54 marriages and 116 births.

There was also reported for the year eight scarlet fever cases, eight tuberculosis, five diphtheria, fifteen chicken-pox, 115 cases of measles, with no typhoid. At present there are two cases of scarlet fever and one of diphtheria.

The two new members of the Board evidenced considerable interest in the proceedings and there is every indication that all of the members will work in harmony for the best interest of the borough's health department.

The 15th Annual Automobile Show held at the Grand Central Palace all this week by far surpasses all previous Automobile Shows. As usual there as a number of cars showing innovations in body designs and new types of engines, such as the slide and rotary valve motors, and there are four makes of cars ranging in price from $1,295 to $1,975, having 8-cylinder V motors, another car is shown having an electrical or magnetic transmission. All the standard high priced and recognized best cars shown, have six-cylinder motors with enclosed side poppet valves, and handsome but conservative body designs. The light weight six-cylinder passenger moderate priced cars seem to be most in public favor, and the 1915 Hudson light six easily dominate this field, it being by far the most popular and the most widely copied car in the world. The Hudson exhibit is the center of attraction, where all styles of open and closed cars are shown; one of the novel features of this exhibit is a Hudson car balanced on a scale showing its exact weight. Andrew C. Thompson and J. W. Mosher, representing the Thompson Auto Co., will be in attendance at this exhibit and will be pleased to explain all points of interest.

MRS. C. A. WESTPHAL DIES IN 75TH YEAR

Last Member of Well Known Family Succumbs to Long Illness.

Mrs. Catherine A. Westphal, aged 75 years, widow of Frederick Westphal, who conducted a grocery at West Fourth and Liberty streets for many years, died yesterday, at the home of her nephew, Frank Ingraham, 206 Manson place, after a long illness.

Prior to the death of her husband several years ago, Mrs. Westphal was a resident of this city, and afterward removed to Newark. Her son, William A. Westphal, who died about ten years ago, served several terms as a member of the Board of Freeholders of this county, representing this city on that body. Mrs. Westphal was active in several of the women fraternities of the city, being a prominent worker in Iona Council, No. 14, Daughters of Pocahontas, an auxiliary to the Red Men.

Mrs. Westphal is the last of a well-known family residing in the West End of the city. She is survived by several immediate relatives, including a nephew, Frank Ingraham, at whose home she passed away, a sister-in-law, Mrs. Hannah Westphal, of East Third street, this city, and two grandchildren, Mrs. Harry Carr and William P. Westphal, of Newark. The latter are children of the late Freeholders and Mrs. William A. Westphal. The funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 402 Park avenue, at 2:30 o'clock. Burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

DEATH OF WELL KNOWN MISSIONARY

Mrs. Jennie Dumont Schenck Passes Away in Brooklyn Hospital.

Mrs. Jennie Dumont Schenck, widow of Rev. Jacob Schenck, and sister-in-law of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, of West Front street, died Sunday night in a private hospital in Brooklyn, following an attack of pleurisy and complications. Mrs. Schenck was born near Somerville and at one time lived in this city. After her marriage she lived at West Ghent, N. Y., where her husband was pastor of the Reformed church. She was also a teacher at one time in a private school in New Brunswick. After her husband's death she located at Mt. Vernon, N. Y., where her son-in-law, Rev. Frank Scudder, now of Honolulu, was a pastor.

In 1897 she went to Japan as a missionary under the direction of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America, remaining there six years. She returned to this country owing to poor health. Since that time she has been engaged as a church missionary. She was at Marconnier church two years, then continued her work at Greenwich and Rye, Conn.; Cohoes, N. Y., and Orange, and lastly was engaged in work at a mission chapel in Brooklyn. She was a devout Christian and faithful worker.

There survives one brother, Peter Dumont, of Cranford; a sister, Mrs. Jacob DeMott, of Somerville; a son-in-law, Rev. Frank Scudder, of Honolulu; three grandchildren, Mary, Raymond and Ruth Scudder. She was also a cousin to John B. Dumont, of this city.

The funeral will be held at the home of the sister, Mrs. Jacob DeMott, in Somerville, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and the burial will be in the cemetery at that place.

FRENCH SILENCE GERMAN FIRING

War Office Reports Progress in Spite of Weather Conditions.

TRENCHES BLOWN UP

Counter Attacks Have Failed in Argonne, According to Wireless Message From Berlin—Little Change in Position of Opposing Forces.

Paris, Jan. 5.—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"In Belgium, despite the condition of rain and the difficulty resulting therefrom, our infantry has made progress before Nieuport.

"In the region of St. Georges it has gained at various points 200, 300 and 500 yards, capturing houses and parts of trenches at numerous points.

"In Belgium artillery has silenced that of the Germans.

"From the Yys to the Oise in the region of Notre Dame De Lorette west of Lens, who have, thanks to our mortars and our grenades, completely stopped the sapping operations of the enemy.

"In the vicinity of Lille highway the Germans blew up one of our trenches with a mine and captured it, but an immediate attack made us again masters of the position.

"From the Oise to the Vosges there is nothing to report concerning any infantry action.

"In Alsace to the southeast of Bonhomme pass we have entered the halet of Creux D Argent, two kilometres west of Ordey, where we are fortifying our positions. The gains made on road from Thann to Cernay have been maintained as far as one kilometre to the east of Old Thann, and our artillery has silenced that of the enemy at a point two miles east of upper Bornhaupt."

"In the western theatre north of Arras we blew up a trench 200 yards long and have taken some prisoners. The enemy's counter attacks failed.

"In the Argonne we repelled several French advances.

"A French attack between Steinbach and Aufholz in Alsace was repulsed after a bayonet encounter.

"The situation is unchanged in East Prussia and northern Poland. Our attacks east of the Byura near Kosslyobiskuipi and south thereof are progressing. Northeast of Bolimow we have also advanced as well as east of Rawka via Hunina. We are advancing east of the heights toward the north. On the right bank of the Pilica the situation is unchanged. The condition of the roads is unfavorable."

Berlin, via Amsterdam, Jan. 5.—The attempt by the Russians to break the lines of communication between the Austrian army in the Carpathians and that in western Galicia by an advance in the region of Nevo Sandeo has been checked, says the Berliner Tageblatt. The Russian army which is pressing forward toward Cracow, continues the Tageblatt, has been recently strengthened by the addition of new forces and has necessitated a general shifting of German troops.

Lausanne, Switzerland, Jan. 5.—All Roumanian residents in Switzerland who are liable to military service have been notified by their consuls here to return to Roumania. The Roumanian military establishment has commissioned agents in this country to purchase quantities of stores.

SCOTCH PLAINS MAN TAKES SARATOGA GIRL AS BRIDE

Miss Beatrice McBain Davidson, daughter of Mrs. Anna F. Davidson, of Saratoga, N. Y., was married at that place Saturday, to Percy Alexander Cook, owner of the Cook Poultry Farms in Scotch Plains. The wedding was an elaborate social function in the winter colony at Saratoga, where the bride is well known, and many friends and relatives attended. The Rev. H. P. LeF. Grabau, rector of Bethesda Episcopal church, officiated. F. L. C. Martin, of this city, was best man, and Mrs. Carl W. Jungen, of New York, and Mrs. Edmund Decker, of Montclair, were the bride's attendants.

The bride is a prominent stockholder in the Knight-Davidson Motor Car Company, while Mr. Cook is well known in the section. He was at one time lieutenant in the British Navy.

DUNELLEN

INCREASE SALARY OF DUNELLEN MARSHAL

Council Also Authorizes Improvement for Madison Avenue.

Pursuant to a resolution offered at the January meeting of the Dunellen Borough Council, last night, the petition from property-holders requesting that a drainage system be constructed from Front street and Madison avenue, down Madison avenue to Greenbrook road, was brought up for further consideration, and after considerable discussion the Council authorized the drawing of the necessary ordinance. The property benefitted by the improvement will bear eighty per cent. of the cost and the borough will bear the remaining per cent.

Two separate resolutions offered by Councilman Richard M. Ryan, chairman of the law and ordinance committee, one that Regular Marshal Patrick J. Tarpey's salary be increased $5 a month, and the other that Chief Marshal Owen Mohan be allowed $10 a month for expenses, were unanimously adopted.

Mayor Latham said in connection with the raise of $5, that the marshal's duties were going to be increased by the large number of foreigners that the sewerage work would bring into the borough.

The Mayor appointed Harry S. Shugars as dog-catcher, and Edward Gary as pound-keeper. A letter was received from John P. McCauley in which he tendered his resignation as first deputy marshal and it was accepted. A communication was received from the Defender Fire Company requesting that Peter Benson's recent election as a member of that company be confirmed, which was done. Plans and specifications of a one-story building to be erected by Paul Ratti in the alley-way between his store and the property of Gustav Winter were submitted to the Council for their approval and were duly referred to the fire and water committee with power to act. The fire and water committee was instructed by the Mayor to take up the matter of blowing out the dead ends of the water mains with Superintendent Cook, of the water company.

Bills aggregating $666.97 were ordered paid. The next meeting of the Council will be held Monday evening.

PARENTS OF A GIRL.

A girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Fowler, of Washington avenue, Sunday. Both mother and child are doing nicely now.

Mr. and Mrs. George Meyers, of Prospect avenue, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Peter Meyers and child, of New York, and Edward Meyers, of Raritan, yesterday.

Miss Lillian Garretson, of Front street, entertained Miss Sadie Horn, of Paterson, over New Year's.

Miss Emaline Vail, of Dunellen avenue, spent Sunday at Sebring's Mills as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. John H. Sebring.

VISITED NEAR THE SCENE OF FAMOUS CLEARY TRIAL

Standing on the steps of the 11:58 from New York as she pulled into the Dunellen station at noon, yesterday, Adelbert Whitford, son of Dr. and Mrs. M. J. Whitford, returning from Stony Point, N. Y., where he had spent the holidays with friends, was thrown off of the step of the train when it stopped suddenly, tearing his trousers and bruising his knees. He was lifted to his feet and assisted to the bench on the station platform by a passenger on the train and after resting for a couple of minutes and pulling himself together he was able to proceed to his home. When interviewed by a reporter last evening, he appeared to be little the worse for his experience.

Stony Point, where Mr. Whitford was stopping, is only a short distance from Haverstraw, the scene of the recent tragedy in which Town Clerk Cleary shot Newman, who had married his daughter against his wishes. The acquittal of Cleary by a jury recently of the charge of murder pressed against him by the State of New York was and still is the cause of a white-flame indignation among the residents of Haverstraw and vicinity. Mr. Whitford said that several petitions calling for Cleary's removal from the office of town clerk are now in circulation. The ministers of Haverstraw and vicinity are still preaching strong sermons upon the freeing of Cleary. Mr. Whitford, who heard a couple of these sermons, quoted one of the ministers as saying "That any jury that would free a man like Cleary were a lot of jack-asses." The way the people of Haverstraw and vicinity feel about the verdict cannot be better illustrated, Mr. Whitford said, than by the fact that some of Cleary's friends who endeavored to arrange a banquet in his behalf upon his acquittal have been socially ostrasized.

"Most Things Men Wear."

214 W. FRONT ST.

Mr. and Mrs. George Moore, who are on an extended trip East from their home at Los Angeles, Cal., are spending the week in the borough as the guests of Mrs. Moore's cousin, Mrs. S. C. Seal, of Front street.

Doris Deering, the young daughter of Borough Clerk and Mrs. William P. Deering, has the measles.

NOW HE'S SEEING THINGS.

Editor George W. Day, of the Weekly Call, and Edwin Johnson, connected with the same publication in the capacity of foreman of the mechanical department, spent yesterday in New York. Up to yesterday Edwin had never seen the fishes in the Aquarium at the Battery or the animals at Bronx Park, way up town, but he saw them yesterday, and don't make any mistake about that, for when Edwin goes to see a thing he sees it.

Ford Eckerson, manager of the local theatre, who was confined to his home last week with the grip, ventured out too soon, and as a result he has suffered a relapse.

Miss Lillian Felmley, of Front street, has returned from Milburn, where she spent the holidays with relatives.

Mrs. C. T. Voorhees, of Lincoln avenue, is entertaining her sister, Mrs. C. B. Lake, and son, Charles Ditmar, of Jersey City.

Democratic Committeeman Willard N. Apgar, who was ill last week with bronchitis, was able to be out today.

Miss Florence Smalley, of Jackson avenue, entertained Miss Grace Barrows, of Lakewood, and Miss Estelle Barrows, of Ridgewood, over the week-end.

Contractor Charles H. Wrage has purchased a lot on Second street, adjoining the property upon which a house is being erected for Mrs George I. Apgar, from Dr. T. H. Platt, Jr. Contractor Wrage is contemplating erecting a house for a Dewey Park party on this lot in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Russell and son, Elmer, of Front street, have returned from Philadelphia, where they spent the holidays with relatives.

VISITED BY THE STORK.

Contractor and Mrs. Raymond Whitford are rejoicing over the arrival of an eight-pound girl, born on New Year's Day.

Eugene R. Smalley, of the North avenue hardware firm of Smalley Brothers, was a business visitor in New York, yesterday.

Mrs. Frederick Tallamy, of North avenue, entertained Mrs. A. E. Smith, of Plainfield, recently.

Nathan Guyre, of Washington avenue, who has been confined to his bed for the past week with heart trouble, was much improved last night. Mr. Guyre put in a very bad day on New Year's, so bad in fact that his life was at one time dispaired of.

FLORIST DISPOSSESSED.

As rapidly as this borough has grown in the past eight years it is not quite large enough as yet to support a florist. At any rate such would appear to be the case as Constable C. Wesley Blaine, as bailiff, has posted papers on the door of the store in the Walter G. Runyon building, adjoining the postoffice, informing Henry Winceske, who has conducted a florist business there under the name of Henry the Florist, for the past several months, that unless two months' rent is paid the owner of the quarters within a specified time that the chattels will be sold at auction.

In the local theatre this evening, Augustus Thomas proffers a motion picture production of Richard Harding Davis' "Soldiers of Fortune" in six parts.

HAD A BAD FALL.

Contractor J. S. Hawkyard, of Plainfield, a well known personage on the streets of our borough, had a nasty fall in New York on Saturday afternoon. While coming down the elevated steps of the 125th street station his feet shot out from under him and he fell eight or ten steps to the sidewalk, shaking him up considerably and bruising his limbs. He was able to complete his errand and come home withou assistance. Mr. Hawkyard, who is always inclined to look upon the rosy side of everything, is congratulating himself that he was not further up the steps when his feet slipped.

RETURNED TO COLLEGE.

The local young men and women who are attending various colleges and universities have terminated their holiday vacation and left the borough to resume their studies: Miss May Day, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Day, of Dunellen avenue, has returned to Smith's College, Holyoke, Mass.; Albert Maurer, son of Edward Maurer, of Madison avenue, to the Bordentown Academy at Bordentown; Earl Victorson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Victorson, of First street, to New York University; Miss Mae Pennock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pennock, to Barnard College and Lloyd Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Sumner Smith, of Grove street, to New York University.

There is no excuse for your not knowing whether you get good milk or not.

The Board of Health makes regular reports on the seventeen kinds sold in Plainfield.

These reports show Wood Brook milk to be the purest and most wholesome.

Parents, the use of Wood Brook milk is health insurance.

WOOD BROOK FARMS.

Phone 1035 Plainfield, N. J.

Mrs. Joel Giddes, of Lincoln avenue, has been obliged to take to her bed again.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Siedentop, of Walnut street, are the parents of a son, which arrived on Monday.

Paul Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Smith, of Front street, has the grip.

Rev. and Mrs. D. W. C. Ramsey and family and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Todd were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Firman H. Gise at a New Year's dinner on New Year's evening. The spread was a sumptuous one and after partaking of it the evening was pleasantly passed with music and games. The home was appropriately decorated for the occasion.

Rev. E. R. Brown spent yesterday in Newark on business.

Contractor Charles Wrage, who was ill last week, was able to be out yesterday.

HELD FAMILY REUNION.

At a family reunion on New Year's Day, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Giles, of Whittier avenue, entertained Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Giles and family, of Plainfield; Russell Giles, of California; Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Johnson and family, of New Market road, and Mr. and Mrs. William Giles, of New Market road. There were twenty in all present and in the afternoon a group picture was taken in front of the home by Charles Johnson.

Cecil Trimmer, the popular gateman at the Washington avenue crossing of the Central Railroad, has returned from Berlin, Md., where he spent the holidays. Mr. Trimmer's visit was marred by the untimely death of a friend, who was killed by be coming off of a fly-wheel in one of Berlin's factories a few days before Mr. Trimmer arrived at Berlin for his visit.

Michael A. Gallagher has been laid up for some time past with a severe attack of rheumatism.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Those popular favorites, the three Rianos, returned to Proctor's Theatre, yesterday, in a new and screamingly funny acrobatic and grotesque sketch entitled, "A September Morn in the Jungle." It is even funnier than the sketch they presented for an entire season at the New York Hippodrome, and affords this clever trio an opportunity to display their versatile and comedy effects with splendid results. The Carolina Five, a quintet of colored singers and dancers, were the second feature number of the well balanced bill, which opened yesterday. The songs and dance numbers in this act made good with the audience from the moment the curtain went up. The Dohertys presented a nonsensical skit teeming with up-to-date jokes that elicited a succession of laughs, and Aubery Yates, the singing actor, put over several pleasing song numbers, and an artistic recitation entitled, "The Tale of the Glasses." The bill was rounded out by an excellent dramatic sketch, "The Bribe," ably presented by Manning, Sloane and Company. The big feature film, "The Dancer and the King," with Cecil Spooner in the leading role, was shown for the first time yesterday, and will be repeated this afternoon and tonight. It tells a vivid and absorbing story and was applauded continuously after the plot was understood. The fifth installment of the serial film, "Zudora," will be presented tomorrow afternoon and evening, unraveling another of the amazing mysteries which the beautiful girl detective brings to light.

CONCERNING BIRTHDAYS.

President Wilson recently celebrated his 58th birthday. It was a public occasion, interesting many people, and was widely heralded in the newspapers.

In private life birthdays are more intimate and secluded affairs. The young and the old have jolly parties. But in middle life there is an atmosphere of condolence and effort at cheerful philosophy.

The refusal of women to give their age to the census taker is a periodical joke, due for publication again in the next national count of 1920. Many women will leave unfilled the blanks for their age in legal documents, taking the risk of invalidating the paper.

This feeling is manifest in a thousand ways, and is often carried beyond the grave. Every newspaper reporter recalls cases where the relatives would not tell the age of the deceased, out of respect to the keenness of her regret at the growing years. The obituary reporter recognizes that any woman's age is an interesting news item to her acquaintances. Being human, he usually suppresses unpleasant facts when asked.

Men are less sensitive about their age, but often have some reluctance to having it known. You never throw out hints to find out what birthday your neighbor is celebrating. In some towns lists of taxpayers or voters give ages, and answer all such queries. Such lists are read with much attention, particularly by the unmated element of women. If public men entertain any sensitiveness about birthdays, they never show it. Their age is public property, and they learn to get over the minor human weaknesses.

So when a president has a birthday, he no doubt sees it in the true light. It is not an occasion for regret, for any person who has lived worthily. Rather it is a time for joy, for perils escaped, results achieved.

The Trenton State Gazette comes to the rescue of the poor, overworked employes in the various State departments at the capital and says that if they are to be compelled to work from 9 o'clock in the morning to 5 in the afternoon with an hour off at noon, they should be allowed extra pay for the hours they put in "overtime." The Perth Amboy News says that when we consider the fat salaries some of the State employes receive the wonder is that it is necessary to pass a law to compel them to work seven hours a day. But if they are to be paid for "overtime" under such conditions, why not also "dock" them for the time they are not at their desks during the work day as fixed by law? This ought to apply to the department chiefs receiving $5,000 to $6,000 a year as well as the clerks. Under such conditions, perhaps some of the State officials could find it convenient to visit the State House a little oftener than once or twice a week.

The selection of Frank J. Hubbard for the Board of Education by Mayor Calkins has met with instant approval. Mr. Hubbard has been a student of public affairs for many years, and his training will bring to the Board much valuable information, which, coupled with his profession, will make him a most efficient member. The retiring member, Mr. Tyler, has given generously of his time and thought to the work of the organization, of which he has been the president for many years, but Mayor Calkins felt that changes were demanded by the people, and hence did not rename Mr. Tyler.

The Elizabeth Journal says that the people of Union county show a woeful lack of interest in the work of the Mosquito Extermination Commission. Just now there are a lot of people who would be tickled to hear the hum of one of those native Jersey "birds." How can they expect interest in the middle of winter? Perhaps if a little less money were spent on a fancy report, showing half-tone illustrations of barn yards, and diverted to the more practical work of driving the mosquitoes out of business there would be more interest in the work.

There is another splendid editorial in store for Press readers on Saturday. It has been written by one of the best known citizens of Plainfield, and he shows in such a convincing way why the tax rate has been soaring that more than one reader will stop to do a lot of thinking before making a "kick" next year if there should happen to be an increase of a point or two in the rate for 1915.

Once again the peace maker has the worst of it. A man in Elizabeth who was trying to stop a fight between two other men, accidentally pushed one of the combatants out of the door of a lunch wagon, and in the subsequent fall his skull was fractured. The peace-maker is now waiting in jail to learn whether or not he will be charged with murder.

One small boy was cleaning windows on Park avenue when another kid called to him that he was glad to see him work. The first boy shouted back, "This ain't work, this is fun." He's what we would call an optimist.

A man in Trenton drank a quart of wood alcohol as the result of a bet. The five men with whom he made the wager will not be permitted to leave jail to attend the funeral.

DUTCH ARMS BAND HOLDS ITS ANNUAL ELECTION

The annual meeting of the Dutch Arms Band, of the Trinity Reformed church, was held last evening, at the lecture rooms of the church, officers being elected and reports of various officers and committees being received. The musical organization has now completed its second year, and has a membership of forty in full uniform.

MILLARD W. BELLIS GIVES BIRTHDAY PARTY

Millard W. Bellis, of East Second street, entertained a number of friends at a stag party at his home, last night, the affair being in honor of the host's twenty-third birthday anniversary. The dining room was decorated in orange and black and dinner was served at 9 o'clock.

After the dinner cards were enjoyed and music was furnished. Those who were present were Clarence Thorn, Clarence Swalm, Albert Compton, Walter Sharkey, Daniel McCormack, George Simon, David Weiss, Howard Firstbrook and Millard Bellis.

NEW FIREMEN ASSIGNED.

The six new regular fireman recently appointed by the Common Council, have been assigned by Chief Doane to do duty as follows: Hearquarters, Roy McDonough, Harold Gloak and Floyd Carroll; No. 1 house, Matthew Hefti; No. 3 house, Raymond Randolph; No. 4 house, George Leland. The six men have already entered upon their new duties.

BLOCH PULLMAN BABY COACHES

We direct special attention to our large showing of 1915 models of the famous Bloch Pullman Reed Baby Coaches, sold exclusively in this city by us. The name Bloch and Baby Carriage have been allied words for nearly fifty years. Bloch quality is known the country over, a Bloch name plate on a baby carriage is a sign of perfection, excellence, greatest value and superior quality. Bloch Baby Carriages are built along the newest approved scientific lines for the sole comfort, ease and safety of the baby.

Every Bloch Baby Carriage is built to safeguard the baby's back, the spine, the head and the limbs. No matter how the baby squirms or moves about, its tender bones will find a restful position in a Bloch Carriage. These are all important things for the mother to consider when buying a baby carriage. The most essential feature for the comfort and care of the baby is an easy riding running gear, with plenty of spring and resistency. The Cradle Gear and the new Reversible Gear used in the Bloch Pullman Coaches has many advantages. The Cradle Gear enables the carriage to have a lateral or cradle motion, and with the Reversible Gear you can swing the body of the carriage around so that the baby faces you. With all the splendid features mentioned above, Bloch Baby Carriages do not cost any more than the ordinary kinds.

We are selling a good substantial carriage for as low as $18.50.
Others at $21,50, $23.50, $25.00 and up to $39.00.

We invite steady-going people to take advantage of the Club Plan.

P. H. S. ATHLETES ARE ALSO GOOD STUDENTS

Male Squad Left Intact After Report Cards Are Distributed by Faculty.

Report cards containing scholarship records such as have heretofore proven fatal to athletic forces in the Plainfield High School, made their appearance yesterday, and it is found that all members of the boys' basketball squad are eligible to compete, but that two star performers on the feminine sextet are barred by reason of deficiencies in various courses. Miss Dorothy Crane and Miss Helen Ryder are the ineligibles.

The satisfactory standing of the male athletes sets aside the apprehension prevalent prior to the issuance of the scholarship statistics for the month and the regular personnel of the quintet will be maintained. Inasmuch as the initial Interscholastic League contest is scheduled to be played this month those interested in the red and blue quintet are anxious to have the best material available for the contest and barring injuries prior to that date all of the regulars will get into the fracas.

The initial combat is looked upon as one of the hardest and most important this year, inasmuch as it will be played against the present champion in Saengerbund Hall. Two years ago the P. H. S. quintet sprang the inevitable by copping a contest on the Somerset street floor, but popular opinion concedes the boroughites a victory this year. To date one contest has been played in the organization, the "Canadians" plucking one at the expense of Leal's, and should N. P. H. S. gain a verdict over the localites they would enjoy a commanding lead in the race for the gonfalon.

PUBLIC ENTERTAINMENT BY APPOLO MALE QUARTET

The first of the public entertainments given by the Board of Education in 1915, will be a concert by the Appolo Male Quartet, in the High School Auditorium, Thursday night. The following program will be rendered:

One sacred song—"Whispering Hope," Hawthorne; two songs of patriotism—"To Thee, O Country," Eichberg; "In Liberty's Name," (adapted to the soldiers' chorus from "Faust"); two songs of nature—"The Bugle Song," Hatton; "Lovely Night," Chwatal; piano solo, "Air de Ballet," No. 5, Moszkowski; tenor solo, "The Rosary," Nevins; two songs of childhood—"Sweet and Low," Barnby-Parks; "Po' Little Lamb," Parks; baritone solo, "Invictus," Bruns-Huhn; tenor and bass duet, "Excelsior," Longfellow-Balfe; one operatic song, "Un di, se ben Rammentomi," Verdi (quartet from "Rigoletto").

It has been decided to hold all the remaining entertainments of this series at the High School instead of the Washington School, where they have previously been held, as the attendance has been so large this year that it is believed the larger auditorium will be needed to take care of the increased audiences.

MR. AND MRS. W. N. PANGBORN OBSERVE 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. William N. Pangborn, of Pearl street, observed the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding in their home yesterday and last night were guests at a dinner in honor of the event. The couple was married January 5, 1865, by the Rev. James Bailey and have lived here for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Pangborn received many floral remembrances and congratulations during the day. A postal card shower also featured the anniversary. The dinner was given at the home of their daughter, Mrs. Oscar W. Ellis, of Bound Brook, and relatives were present from Westfield, Scotch Plains, Bound Brook and this city.

RECREATION NOTES

The Choral Society, directed by S. Frederick Smith, will meet this evening at 8 o'clock in the Franklin School.

The Stillman School will be opened this evening for the colored people. There is a girls' gymnasium class which is enjoying free gymnastics, drills, folk dancing and athletic games. There is also a young men's club. A social hour will follow the regular class meetings.

The men's gymnasium class, directed by Mr. Patch, will meet this evening at 8:15 in the High School gymnasium.

The Girls' Athletic Club will meet tomorrow evening at 8:15 in the High School gymnasium.

VICTIM OF PICKPOCKET.

John Logan, Jr., of Dunellen, has had New York and Dunellen police searching for a pickpocket who relieved him of $12 in the metropolis New Year's Eve. The money was taken from him as he was jostled by the Broadway crowd, but he did not discover his loss until about to pay his bill in a Child's restaurant, where he had entertained a party of friends at dinner. He reported his loss to the authorities, but the chances of getting it back are slim.

LOCAL GIRL BRIDESMAID.

Miss Ethel Nielson, of this city, was one of the bride's attendants at the wedding of Miss Esther Hademark to Paul Tuxen, of Brooklyn, which took place there last Saturday. John Goble, of Lincoln, was best man. The bride formerly lived at 1412 East Second street. Others present at the wedding from this city were Miss Gladys Meael and Martin Whelan.

When You Come to Buy FURNITURE for your home you will find here the beauty of design and quality of material that offers the most advantageous selection. FURNITURE that is standard in quality and design and has the merit of moderate price.

EVENING SCHOOLS ARE PROVING BIG SUCCESS

Applications for entrance to the public school evening classes, now being conducted at the High School, should be made as soon as possible. J. C. Evans will receive all applications for advanced instruction and assign pupils to the proper classes. Mrs. Sarah Wardner will receive all applications for primary instruction. Applications should be made at the High School at 7:30 o'clock, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday evenings.

Residents of Plainfield are entitled to free instruction and arrangements will be made to enroll non-resident pupils at a moderate charge. Public interest in these evening schools has been very remarkable this year, over 500 being enrolled.

In addition to the elementary subjects such as reading, writing, and the principles of arithmetic, the High School department is offering many attractive and useful courses. Among these mechanical drawing, stenography, bookkeeping, typewriting, advanced arithmetic, shop mathematics and dressmaking are especially popular.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The basketball schedules that had been ordered sometime ago by Manager VanMater, have been completed and have been distributed throughout the High School.

At a meeting of the Student Council, yesterday noon, Elmer French, of the senior class, was elected to represent North Plainfield High School in arranging the interscholastic debating league which has been started by Rutgers College.

Manager VanMater, of the basketball team, expects to have the new jerseys, which were ordered some time ago, ready for use by the team when they meet New Brunswick tomorrow.

Miss Margaret Vossellor, of Rochester, N. Y., who is a daughter of the former supervising principal of Somerset School, was a visitor to the school this morning. She is the guest of Miss Murielle Dunham while she is stopping in Plainfield.

Miss Lucile Ewart, a graduate of the High School, who is now attending the Geneseo Normal School, at Geneseo, N. Y., was a visitor at the High School this morning.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Two dancing classes will be started for those who wish to learn the new dances. These classes will meet every Monday afternoon beginning next week, with Miss Ball in charge.

The Commercial Club will hold a meeting on Thursday afternoon. Former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, will be the speaker.

The boys' basketball team did not lose any of its players when the report cards were issued, but the girls team will be minus the services of Miss Dorothy Crane, forward, and Miss Florence Ryder, center, for the next month.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Boys' Athletic Association, yesterday afternoon, Dean Worden, of the senior class, was elected manager of the swimming team.

MEETING OF THE CLERICUS.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, of Grace church, and Rev. C. H. Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, were among those who attended the meeting of the Plainfield Clericus, yesterday, the clergymen being entertained by Rev. L. E. Hubbard, rector of St. John's church, Elizabeth. There was a large attendance of members. Rev. Dr. Robert Rogers, of Brooklyn, read a scholarly paper on "The Sanctity of Truth." Luncheon was served in connection with the meeting.

FUNERAL OF SUICIDE.

The funeral services of Edward Philips, who killed himself early yesterday by shooting himself in the mouth, will be held at 200 West Second street, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services will be in charge of Dev. Dr. E. G. Read. Interment will be made in Somerville cemetery and will be private.

"LUMBER JACK" PREACHER DEAD AFTER OPERATION

There is great sorrow among the men of the lumber camps of Northern United States and Canada today. Rev. Francis E. Higgins, known in all the logging camps as the "lumberjack preacher," is dead. He died at his home, near Toronto, Canada, following an operation on his ear. The ear trouble was caused by the clergyman carrying heavy packs from one logging settlement to another while on missionary tours.

Few knew that the clergyman was in such a critical condition, and the brief telegram that was received yesterday by the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, No. 156 Fifth avenue, New York, announcing his death was a distinct shock.

TAPS FROM THE GAVEL.

The recently elected officers of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 26, F. and A. M., will be installed at the session of the lodge this evening. George T. Caskey, distrist deputy accomplishing the ritualistic work in connection with the exercises.

The following officers of Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., were installed last evening: Councilor, John J. Richards, vice councilor, Harvey VanPelt; financial secrtary, Arthur H. Peck; recording secretary, Arthur J. Spicer; assistant recording secretary, A. C. Harriburtin, treasurer, J. G. Williams; warden, Garret C. Ackerman; conductor, J. G. Williams; inside sentinel, Frank Nye, outside sentinel, S. H. Cratsley.

Royal Council, No. 77, O. U. A. M., will install officers at the meeting tomorrow evening at Coward Hall.

Garwood Council, No. 309, Jr. O. U. A. M., elected the following officers at its meeting last evening: Councilor, Joseph H. Braum; vice-councilor, Frank W. Braum; assistant recording secretary, Walter Baird; warden, Henry Wacher; conductor, Walter Sargent; inside sentinel, Carl Chapin; outside sentinel, Harold Dushanek; chaplain, David Bullock.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The fifteen-cent Tuesday night Bible class suppers will be resumed tonight and will begin at 6:30 o'clock.

All Bible and educational classes have resumed their regular schedules which were suspended during the holidays.

A large number of members have already signed to attend the sectional conference to be held at national headquarters, 600 Lexington avenue, New York, January 12 and 13. All who are interested in the work and would like to attend the sessions will be welcome. There will be afternoon and evening sessions on Tuesday, and morning, afternoon and evening meetings on Wednesday.

The annual meeting for the entire membership of the association will be held Monday night, January 18, at 8 o'clock. The program for the night will be announced later.

ANNUAL BANQUET.

The annual banquet of Branch No. 306, National Association of Letter Carriers, has been arranged for Saturday evening, at Junior Hall, 119 East Front street. The entire office force of the local office, as well as a representative of the Postoffice Department at Washington, will be present upon the occasion. J. R. McCormack is chairman of the committee in charge.

OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Vail, of Watchung avenue, observed the fourth anniversary of their wedding, last night, by entertaining a gathering of twenty-five relatives and friends. Dinner was a feature of the evening after which several hours were passed in an informal way. The celebrant received numerous appropriate gifts. Previous to her marriage, Mrs. Vail was Miss Ella Welch.

BIBLE CLASS MEETS.

The Loyal Daughters' Bible Closs, of Hope chapel, held their monthly business sesion last evenig at the home of Mrs. Clarence Hoffman, of West Front street. Following the formal session, a social hour was enjoyed, during which a number of piano selections were rendered by the Misses Emma Windham and Carrie Coon.

JR. O. U. A. M. FAIR.

The Uniformed Rank, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold a fair in Sebring's Auditorium the week of February 6-13, with many attractions. Halbfoerster's orchestra will furnish the music.

PLAIN COLOR CARPETS

Our stock is unequalled, in variety of weaves and colorings, by any other collection in the country, while our prices are uniformly reasonable.

Of the many desirable weaves shown here, several of the best are controlled by us. These are the English Barodas, Saxines, Angoras, Saxonias and Velvets. There are also excellent values in American Wilton, Axminster, Velvet and Ingrain Carpets. Widths range from 27 inches to 15 feet, according to the weave, the greater widths offering the advantage of eliminating seams entirely.

PRISON PROBLEMS REMAIN THE SAME

So Declares Miss Katharine B. B. Davis at Monday Afternoon Club Lecture.

FOR SELF-GOVERNMENT

Speaker Discusses Labor Question and Suggests That Prisoners Be Paid Even a Small Sum As An Incentive to Industry.

Miss Katharine Bement Davis, commissioner of correction of New York city, addressed the Monday Afternoon Club at its meeting in the parish house of the Congregational church, yesterday afternoon. There was an unusually large attendance of members of the club and others, and all were deeply interested in what Miss Davis had to say about correctional matters. She has a country-wide reputation because of her notable work and naturally her presence was of unusual interest.

At the outset Miss Davis said that she had been recently reading a book on prison problems of sixty-five years ago, and that apparently the same troubles were present then as now the two most vital ones being discipline and labor. She said that the main reason why these had not been solved, in her opinion, was because the prisoners are not paid in any way for their work.

In New York city there are at present 6,644 persons in the penal institutions. She described the various prisons and the penitentiary where 2,000 prisoners are held, as well as the workhouse, with 1,700. In the boys' reformatory there are 500 boys and 750 women are in permanent custody. Last year the average age for sentencing was 27, which is much younger than ever before and the offenses were much more serious than in previous years.

Labor in the prison is the hard problem because under a State law prison-made goods can only be used in penal institutions, except in the case of brooms, which may be used in the city street cleaning department. Shoes, clothing and tinware are manufactured, but do not keep the prisoners busy, and the printing department could be greatly extended. This Miss Davis hopes to accomplish soon.

If the men could be paid even a small sum, Miss Davis believes that it would be an incentive to industry especially in the case of wife desertion, when provision should be made to have the money go to the families of the men. In her estimation prisons should be made self-supporting and the raising of produce for the market seems to be about the best field offered. As an example she quoted the case of the boys' reformatory, for which she was able to get 610 acres in Orange county. Not having any money to buy farm implements, she begged enough old horses and wagons from the hospital and police departments with which to make a start. A friend gave her the salary of a man for one year to take charge of the boys on the farm where work was started with twelve boys, and has since been increased to fifty-five, with sixty acres under cultivation. This, however, would not be practical with 500 boys. Rikers Island, at the workhouse, will soon be used for gardening purposes.

The prison labor problem is directly contrary to that employed in business. In modern business method the plan is to use the least number of men. In prison labor, it is necessary to keep the largest number busy. Speaking of prison discipline Miss Davis said that it had been found at Bedford Reformatory that the majority of the girls are opposed to self government, and that in the penitentiary the men argued the same way. She also said that Vassar girls have shown their opposition to self-government, as it were, so that it is not always education which instills a desire for this form. That, however does not mean that self-government is not the best thing, and in her opinion it should be developed because it is educational.

Prevention of crime is the most important thing of all, and a club like the one which she addressed was urged by the speaker to devote their time to municipal improvement, beginning with the children. She placed special emphasis on the need of keeping the children out of prison.

SUFFERED A STROKE.

William R. Craig, of Myrtle avenue, suffered a stroke of apoplexy at his home, Saturday, and is at present in a critical condition. He is the father of Patrolman Arthur Craig, of the local police force.

BOARD OF TRADE MEETING.

The local Board of Trade will hold its monthly business session this evening, at Exempt Firemen's Hall, 105 Park avenue. A number of important matters will come before the meeting.

TO MEET ON SATURDAY.

The Allies Trades Committee will meet Saturday evening, at the Trades Council Hall, at which time unfinished business relating to the recent ball will be completed. A full attendance is desired.

ASSESSORS MAKE REPORT

the borough treasurer, and $55 forwarded to the State Motor Vehicles Department, in compliance with a law instructing communities to forward all moneys collected from fines levied for infractions of the motor vehicles' laws. Twenty-two prisoners have been committed to the Somerville jail by Recorder Hand, seven have served time in the borough lock-up, and 114 were given suspended sentences. Overseer of the Poor Fred Becker reported receipts during the year totalling $2,106.17 and expenditures of $2,035.10, leaving a balance at the present time of $71.07. Included in the poor department's receipts were $196.17, a balance remaining in the treasury at the completion of the work in 1913.

Borough Treasurer George F. Brown filed his annual bond of $10,000 with the borough last night, and the bonds of Overseer of the Poor Fred Becker, Clerk Charles M. Dolliver and Recorder Fred Hand were renewed. It was reported that the sewer contracts and sale of bonds for the Joint Sewerage Disposal work had been executed. Frank Puglio, of Paterson, will do the work on contract number one, and the Harrison-Burton Company, of New York city, will construct the work as specified in contract number two.

A total of $2,464.61 remaining from the 1914 borough fund was transferred to the 1915 borough fund. The usual $250 allowed to the borough clerk for extra help was appropriated, also the $200 for rent, fuel, etc. Bills amounting to $172.35 were ordered paid.

In order to give Borough Treasurer Brown an opportunity to prepare his report for 1914 and for other minor reasons the meeting was adjourned until Monday night, January 11.

MACMURRAY TO QUIT

rapher will continue, the present indications are that an amicable arrangement will be made so that there will be no change. After the meeting the councilmen went into executive session, but the members declined to say what action if any was taken.

It is understood, however, that a committee is to be named to confer with Mr. MacMurray and Mr. Wean with a view to settling the differences. The whole truth dates back to the time when the Council failed to fix the salary of the city clerk and the stenographer. Several caucuses, at which Mr. MacMurray was present, were held, but for some reason no agreement was reached regarding salaries.

Mr. MacMurray, it is said, was perfectly willing to have all fees turned over to the city treasurer and accept a flat salary of $1,200 a year, out of which he desired to pay Mr. Wean $200 a year which has been his custom for several years, but some of the councilmen were of the opinion that the city should pay for all help in the city clerk's office. For some reason the Council and Mr. MacMurray could not come to amicable terms and the salary was left undecided when the organization meeting was held.

Mr. MacMurray was of the opinion that some of the councilmen sought to belittle his services and he felt humiliated to a certain extent over the way the Council was acting, hence his decision to resign. Mr Wean's determination to resign came from a desire not to remain in the city's employ if Mr. MacMurray was to give up his position.

The fact that John J. Carroll, the present chairman of the City Republican Committee, announced himself as a candidate for the clerkship soon after the election, tended to further complicate matters, but when Mr. Carroll discovered that the net salary of the office was about $900 he withdrew from the contest, evidently not being willing to give up his present position and devote his entire time to the clerkship at that salary.

As further indication of the fact that Mr. MacMurray wanted to do what was right in the matter, it is said that he turned over to President George S. Clay, of the Council, a signed resignation, the same to become effective at the pleasure of the Council within the next three years provided it desired to secure the services of a man who would give his entire time to the clerkship.

Mr. MacMurray has served the city as clerk for twenty-one consecutive years, and when asked for an explanation of his actions, last night, requested the newspapermen to state that he thanked every citizen of Plainfield for kind and courteous treatment. Mr. Wean has served almost as long as Mr. MacMurray and up to 1904, the clerk paid the entire salary of the city stenographer.

After an opportunity had been given the Council to think over Mr. MacMurray's action in resigning, some of the members thought he had acted a little hasty, believing that he should have given the Council a little more time to consider the question of fixing his salary. One member said that there was no intention of doing anything but the right thing by the city clerk.

It is the purpose of the Council to abolish all fee systems, having the fees turned over to the city treasurer and paying all city employes a fair salary for their work.

CHAPTER II.

The Making of a Man.

JOHN BELLEW grew anxious. Capturing a bunch of Indians backtripping from Lake Lindeman, he persuaded them to put their straps on the outfit. They charged 30 cents a pound to carry it to the summit of Chilkoot, and it nearly broke him. As it was, some 400 pounds of clothes bags and camp outfit were not handled. He remained behind to move it along, dispatching Kit with the Indians. At the summit Kit was to remain, slowly moving his ton until overtaken by the 400 pounds with which his uncle guaranteed to catch him.

Kit plodded along the trail with his Indian packers. At the end of a quarter of a mile he desired to rest. But the Indians kept on. He stayed with them and kept his place in the line. At the half mile he was convinced that he was incapable of another step, yet he gritted his teeth, kept his place and at the end of the mile was amazed that he was still alive.

Then, in some strange way, came the thing called second wind, and the next mile was almost easier than the first. The third mile nearly killed him, but, though half delirious with pain and fatigue, he never whimpered. And then when he felt he must surely faint came the rest. Instead of sitting in the straps, as was the custom of the white packers, the Indians slipped out of the shoulder and head straps and lay at ease, talking and smoking.

A full half hour passed before they made another start. To Kit's surprise he found himself a fresh man, and "long hauls and long rests" became his newest motto.

The pitch of Chilkoot was all he had heard of it, and many were the occasions when he climbed with hands as well as feet. But when he reached the crest of the divide in the thick of a driving snow squall it was in the company of his Indians, and his secret pride was that he had come through with them and never squealed and never lagged.

When he had paid off the Indians and seen them depart a stormy darkness was falling, and he was left alone, a thousand feet above timber line, on the backbone of a mountain. Wet to the waist, famished and exhausted, he would have given a year's income for a fire and a cupful of coffee. Instead, he ate half a dozen cold flapjacks and crawled into the folds of the partly unrolled tent.

In the morning, stiff from his labors and numb with the frost, he rolled out of the canvas, ate a couple of pounds of uncooked bacon, buckled the straps on a hundred pounds and went down the rocky way. Several hundred yards beneath the trail led across a small glacier and down to Crater lake. Other men packed across the glacier. All that day he dropped his packs at the glacier's upper edge, and by virtue of the shortness of the pack he put his straps on 150 pounds each load. His astonishment at being able to do it never abated.

Unwashed, unwarmed, his clothing wet with sweat, he slept another night in the canvas.

In the early morning he spread a tarpaulin on the ice, loaded it with three-quarters of a ton and started to pull. Where the pitch of the glacier accelerated, his load likewise accelerated, overran him, scooped him in on top and ran away with him.

A hundred packers, bending under their loads, stopped to watch him. He yelled frantic warnings, and those in his path stumbled and staggered clear. Below, on the lower edge of the glacier, was pitched a small tent, which seemed leaping toward him, so rapidly did it grow larger. He left the beaten track where the packers' trail swerved to the left and struck a pitch of fresh snow. This arose about him in frosty smoke, while it reduced his speed. He saw the tent the instant he struck it, carrying away the corner guys, bursting in the front flaps and fetching up inside, still on top of the tarpaulin and in the midst of his grub sacks.

The tent rocked drunkenly, and in the frosty vapor he found himself face to face with a startled young woman who was sitting up in her blankets—the very one who had called him a tenderfoot at Dyea.

"Did you see my smoke?" he queried cheerfully.

She regarded him with disapproval. "It was a mercy you did not overturn the stove," she said.

He followed her glance and saw a sheet iron stove and a coffeepot, attended by a young squaw. He sniffed the coffee and looked back to the girl.

"I've shed my shooting irons," he said.

Then she recognized him, and her eyes lighted. "I never thought you'd get this far," she informed him.

Again, and greedily, he sniffed the air. "As I live, coffee!" He turned and directly addressed her: "I'll give you my little finger—cut it off right now—I'll do anything; I'll be your slave for a year and a day or any other old time if you'll give me a cup out of that pot."

And over the coffee he gave his name and learned hers, Joy Gastell. Also he learned that she was an old timer in the country. She had been born in a trading post on the Great Slave and as a child had crossed the Rockies with her father and come down to the Yukon. She was going in, she said, with her father, who had been delayed by business in Seattle.

In view of the fact that she was still in her blankets, he did not make it a long conversation, and, heroically declining a second cupful of coffee, he removed himself and his quarter of a ton of baggage from her tent. Further he took several conclusions away with him—she had a fetching name and fetching eyes, could not be more than twenty or twenty one or twenty two, her father must be French, she had a will of her own, temperament to burn and she had been educated elsewhere than on the frontier.

The last pack from Long lake to Lindeman was three miles, and the trail rose up over a thousand foot hog back, dropped down a scramble of slippery rocks and crossed a wide stretch of swamp. John Bellew remonstrated when he saw Kit rise with a hundred pounds in the straps and pick up a fifty pound sack of flour and place it on top of the pack against the back of his neck.

"Come on, you chunk of the hard," Kit retorted. "Kick in on your beans, meat fodder and your one suit of underclothes."

"Avuncular, I want to tell you something important. I was raised a Lord Fauntleroy, but I can outpack you, outwalk you, put you on your back or lick you with my fists right now."

John Bellew thrust out his hand. "Christopher, my boy, I believe you can do it. I believe you can do it with that pack on your back at the same time. You've made good, boy, though it's too unthinkable to believe."

Kit made the round trip of the last pack four times a day, which is to say that he daily covered twenty-four miles of mountain climbing, twelve miles of it under 150 pounds. He was proud, hard and tired, but in splendid physical condition.

"Did you see my smoke?" he queried cheerfully.

One problem bothered him. He had learned that he could fall with a hundredweight on his back and survive, but he was confident that if he fell with that additional fifty pounds across the back of his neck it would break it clean. Each trail through the swamp was quickly churned bottomless by the thousands of packers, who were compelled continually to make new trails. It was while pioneering such a new trail that he solved the problem of the extra fifty.

The soft slush surface gave way under him. He floundered and pitched forward on his face. The fifty pounds crushed his face into the mud and went clear without snapping his neck. With the remaining hundred pounds on his back he arose on hands and knees. But he got no farther. One arm sank to the shoulder, pillowing his cheek in the slush. As he drew this arm clear the other sank to the shoulder. In this position it was impossible to slip the straps, and the hundredweight on his back would not let him rise.

On hands and knees, sinking first one arm and then the other, he made an effort to crawl to where the small sack of flour had fallen. But he exhausted himself without advancing, and so churned and broke the grass surface that a tiny pool of water began to form in perilous proximity to his mouth and nose.

He tried to throw himself on his back with the pack underneath, but this resulted in sinking both arms to the shoulders and gave him a foretaste of drowning. Then he began to call for help. After a time he heard the sound of feet sucking through the mud as some one advanced from behind.

"Lend a hand, friend," he said. "Throw out a life line or something."

It was a woman's voice that answered, and he recognized it.

"If you'll unbuckle the straps I can get up."

The hundred pounds rolled into the mud with a soggy noise, and he slowly gained his feet.

"A pretty predicament," Miss Gastell laughed at sight of his mud covered face.

"Oh," she cried in recognition, "it's Mr.—ah—Mr. Smoke Bellew."

"I thank you gravely for your timely rescue and for that name," he answered. "I have been doubly baptized. Henceforth I shall insist always on being called Smoke Bellew."

The arctic came down apace. Snow that had come to stay lay six inches on the ground, and the ice was forming in quiet ponds despite the fierce gales that blew. It was in the late afternoon during a lull in such a gale that Kit and John Bellew helped the cousins load the boat and watched it disappear down the lake in a snow squall.

"And now a night's sleep and an early start in the morning," said John Bellew. "If we aren't storm bound at the summit we'll make Dyea tomorrow night, and if we have luck in catching a steamer we'll be in San Francisco in a week."

Their camp for that last night at Linderman was a melancholy remnant. Everything of use, including the tent, had been taken by the cousins.

Only once during supper did Kit speak. "Avuncular," he said, "after this I wish you'd call me Smoke. I've made some smoke on this trail, have I not?"

A few minutes later he wandered away in the direction of the village of tents that sheltered the gold rushers who were still packing or building their boats. He was gone several hours, and when he returned and slipped into his blankets John Bellew was asleep.

In the darkness of a gale driven morning Kit crawled out, built a fire in his stocking feet, by which he thawed out his frozen shoes, then boiled coffee and fried bacon. It was a chilly, miserable meal. As soon as it was finished they strapped their blankets. As John Bellew turned to lead the way toward the Chilkoot trail Kit held out his hand.

"Goodby, avuncular," he said.

John Bellew looked at him and swore in his surprise.

"But what are you going to do?"

Kit waved his hand in a general direction northward over the storm lashed lake. "What's the use of turning back after getting this far?" he asked. "Besides, I've got my taste of meat, and I like it. I'm going on."

"You're broke," protested John Bellew. "You have no outfit."

"I've got a job. Behold your nephew, Christopher Smoke Bellew! He's got a job. He's a gentleman's man. He's got a job at $150 per month and grub. He's going down to Dawson with a couple of dudes and another gentleman's man—camp cook, boatman and general all around hustler. Goodby!"

But John Bellew was dazed and could only mutter, "I don't understand."

"They say the bald face grizzlies are thick in the Yukon basin," Kit explained. "Well, I've got only one suit of underclothes, and I'm going after the bear meat, that's all!"

WHITE SALES BECOME MORE INTERESTING EACH YEAR

Vogue says that the January white sales of underwear and household linens become more interesting each year, very largely because their worth is appreciated by a growing circle of the purchasing public, which plans its expenditures so that it may take advantage of the excellent values offered at this time. Recognizing this, the shops co-operate with their patrons to the fullest extent, and thus the merchandise described in this article may be purchased during January at the special prices quoted.

In the underwear departments there is noticeable a decided tendency toward simpler sheer designs in the American-made articles. This is undoubtedly the response to a growing demand for underwear of this character; the era of over-trimmed underwear has seemingly passed.

Instead of an elaborate mass of intricate tucks and lace, the women who buy now demand simplicity of design and extreme fineness of materials, but least these be uninteresting, they also demand the style which is achieved only through the medium of individual design. Thus, even simple gowns, chemises, drawers, underbodices and negligees almost devoid of trimming are cut in the smartest shapes and succeed in being exceedingly attractive.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

And the Sun's Smiles Grew Warmer Still.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—Why the Sun Smiles So Much.

"WHY do they write of the 'smiling sun,' daddy?" asked Jack. "Now are you going to smile unless you have a mouth and teeth to show?"

"Silly!" cried Evelyn. "It's because its light is so 'comfy' and warm and cheery."

"I knew that," replied Jack crossly.

"There, there, children," said daddy; "we won't quarrel about a little thing like that, please. If you children will be good I'll tell you why the sun smiles."

Evelyn cooed, "We'll be good, daddy."

"Very well," said daddy. "Well, kiddies, the sun smiles about a lot of things the year round. Evelyn has it right about the way the sun smiles in the summer. He just feels so good over the greenness and freshness and beauty of the world that he grins all over his face, and in the winter, when all is ice and snow and it is all cold, the sun smiles a bleak, frozen kind of smile just to keep his courage up.

"But he knows in his heart all the time that it's going to be all right, don't you know, children. He knows somehow that the summer is coming again, and he smiles his cold, patient smile in spite of the cold and snow. And by and by, why, all of a sudden it begins to grow warmer, and the sun smiles more warmly just to be in keeping, and then the snow begins to melt, and the green grasses appear.

"And the sun's smile grows warmer still, and then the new grass springs up, all green, and the little leaves come out on the trees, and the breeze is springlike, and the children run and shout because they know summer is coming again, and the woods nod their thanks, and the waters dance as if they were at play, too, like the children, and the sun smiles because it is such a beautiful world.

"And then the sun, away up in the sky, gets wireless messages from the earth people, and one day when he had been very angry for days he got a wireless that a poor little lame boy was dying in an attic because the sun had ceased to shine. It was Christmas time, too, but he wanted the sun worse than he wanted Christmas toys. So when the sun heard that it smiled for the poor little boy.

"The sun smiles because of good children, too, and now the sun has gone to bed a long time ago, and children must do the same."

"Daddy, do you think the sun will smile when he sees my Christmas toys?" asked Evelyn.

"I think so," laughed daddy, "but you must make haste and go to bed or he will be terribly cross."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"You are wanted at the telephone," whispered the maid, stealing into the sick room where Mrs. Lilly sat watching her delirious husband.

"You stay with Mr. Lilly while I am gone," said the mistress, and disappeared through the door.

"Hello! This is Mrs. Lilly talking."

"I am sorry to trouble you, but word just came that Clapham & Co. have raised the price of meat on the hoof one cent a pound. It looks like war. What shall I do about it?" came over the phone from her husband's office.

"Meet it," she answered. "I will come down to the office as soon as the nurse is on duty again. Goodby," and she hung up the receiver and returned to her husband's side. "It's like Clapham to choose this time to try to freeze us out," she said under her breath.

When the nurse awoke, she slipped into her coat, put on her hat and hurried to the office. She had a long conference with the man in charge, then she sat down at the desk and wrote:

"Clapham & Co., White Dog, Mont.

"Gentlemen: I am informed of your advancing prices of livestock. As the telegraphic reports quote no such advance anywhere else, I am led to conclude that you have decided that while my husband is sick would be a good time to freeze him out. I suppose you call it business and shrug your shoulders and smile. I call it despicable. Fortunately, I have known everything about this business for the ten years since my marriage, and you will find that the Belgian women are not the only ones who can fight shoulder to shoulder with their husbands. I am not asking quarter. I am taking up the glove you have thrown down.

"In this county our business is about equal to yours, but in the county adjoining you have three buying stations to our one. I suppose you think it will be easy to down us there, but you are wrong. I shall raise the price paid for stock five cents a pound. You will have to meet it in every one of your stations or go out of business. We can stand it, as our business in that county is small.

"Which shall it be, an agreement to have no underhanded, cut-throat business practices, or war to the end?

"Very truly yours,

"KATHERINE LILLY."

She sealed and stamped the letter and dropped it into the box on her way home. The letter brought Mr. Clapham himself to town to interview Mrs. Lilly. A definite agreement was reached and the war was called off.

When Mr. Lilly was able to sit up she told him of her experience, and he said, admiringly, "I have tried for years to get such an agreement out of Clapham and you have won out where I failed."

"I am a good pupil," she replied. "You made me your partner in everything, so I was able to stand by you in an emergency," she said, stroking his hair.

PROHIBITION VICTORIES AMONG THE NATIONS

ELLEN M. STONE.

There is time to touch but lightly upon the continued high degree of temperance sentiment in Bulgaria, which has contributed significantly to the development of the fine morale in its army and its consequent notable efficiency, and has aided greatly in the remarkable recovery which the nation is making from the exhaustion of the Balkan Wars of 1912-1913.

Let us note the stupendous victories which the world has seen during the few months just past. At the word of one man, our own Secretary Daniels, the entire American Navy became absolutely temperance, because of his prohibition of all that can intoxicate. "No drinking in the Navy!" is an order everywhere respected. The naval officer is a splendid type of manhood; to him an order is an order. Americans now need never fear to see on shore a jackie or marine from an American battleship in an intoxicated condition, which brings disgrace to the country whose uniform he wears. With shame and sorrow I have seen men from the battleships of other nations, in the streets of Salonica, jeered at by Turks, Jews, and others of that ancient city. "Wonder of wonders that the ocean should go dry!" as an enthusiastic white ribboner wittily remarked.

Norway follows the lead of the United States, and other nations are falling in line. The Kings of Sweden and Denmark are reported to have taken a stand for prohibition, and as the majority party in Denmark has declared for it in its platform, it is probable that that country may win in its victory within the next two years.

France placed its ban upon the sale of absinthe at the outbreak of the present war and now has prohibited the sale of this popular drink in its African colonies. Prominent French writers are advocating the prohibition of all forms of alcoholic drinks, and M. Raphael Georges Reves, a well-known economist, writer and statistician, declared in a recent number of Figaro that the greatest enemy of his country is alcohol.

Full of meaning as are all of these facts, they pale before the stupendous impetus given to prohibition by the stern necessities of the present terrible conflict in Europe. At its outbreak, as we have seen, France banned the use of absinthe. According to a Berlin correspondent, one of Germany's first orders, when martial law was proclaimed, was that "if intoxicating drinks, including beer, are sold, the places where they are sold shall be immediately closed."

In England, the public houses had their hours of sale promptly cut down to close at 10 p. m. Lord Kitchener, minister of war, warned his British soldiers to abstain from intoxicants, and also issued appeals to the public to help keep the army in good condition by refraining from "treating" them, and in every way to assist them to continue temperate.

An English war poster has for its subject: "Effects of Alcohol on Naval and Military Work," addressed "to all men serving the empire," and continues, "It has been proved by the most careful scientific experiments, and completely confirmed by actual experience in athletics and in war, as attested by Field-Marshal Lord Roberts [this idol of the British soldier has since died in France, in active service, though in his eighty-second year, and is greatly lamented], Lord Wolseley, and many other army leaders, that alcohol or drink (1) slows the power to see signals, (2) confuses prompt judgment, (3) spoils accurate shooting, (4) hastens fatigue, (5) lessens resistance to fatigue and exposure, (6) increases shock from wounds. We therefore most strongly urge you for your own health and efficiency, that at least so long as the war lasts, you become total abstainers." Signed by the physicians and surgeons to King George.

All these countries have acted wisely, but it is the Czar of Russia who under God has achieved the greatest transformation. As soon as the mobilization of his army was ordered, he decreed total abstinence from vodka, the national intoxicant, through his vast domains. The results were so surprisingly beneficial that the moujiks or peasants themselves begged the emperor to continue this prohibition for all time. October 21 last, Czar Nicholas issued his declaration that the Russian government will never again embark in the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. The minister of finance has stated that in consequence of this decree, the people will be healthier, and the nation stronger. The Czar himself declares with regard to the prohibition of vodka, the monopoly in which has added enormously to the government revenues, yielding annually about 800,000,000 Russian roubles, or $400,000,000 to its treasury—that "no nation should depend for its existence upon the spread of drunkenness among its subjects!"

'Plains & Fanwood.

A meeting of the Borough Board of Health was held in the Fanwood firehouse, last night, at which it was voted to have the officers and committees remain the same as last year, for 1915. Dr. F. W. Wescott is president, and Dr. Ray Munger is secretary. Four plumbing applications for houses being erected were received and work can be started and inspected by Inspector William Addis. Philip Neider was appointed a committee of one to draw up an order of business and a bill of $2 from Dr. Wescott for sewer inspection was approved. Dr. Munger made the rather novel report that in the whole borough not a single case of a contagious disease had been reported during 1914. The February meeting of the Board will be omitted and the next one will be the first Monday in March.

The first meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of All Saints' Episcopal church since before Christmas, was held at the home of Mrs. J. Hudson Thompson, on Martine avenue, yesterday afternoon. A profitable time was spent sewing after which tea was served.

A meeting of the Junior League Society was held at the home of Miss E. Babcock, on North avenue, yesterday afternoon, and resulted in a large attendance. Most of the time was spent in sewing for the missions.

The Borough Council meeting in the Fanwood firehouse tomorrow evening will be more in the nature of an organization meeting as at the session held New Year's day only the election of a president of the Council could be accomplished as the Mayor and several councilmen were absent.

Miss Virginia Glover has returned to her home in New York after visiting friends in the borough for several days.

John Morrell, of Park avenue, is carrying his arm in a sling as the result of falling on the ice while skating the latter part of the week. An X-ray showed the arm to be broken near the wrist.

Edwin Howe, of Martine avenue, is entertaining his mother, Mrs. E. F. Howe, of Troy, N. Y.

The weekly meeting of the Boy Scouts will be held in the Sunday-school room of the Baptist church this evening.

As has been the case in past years the local boys who frequent Schuyler's pond form a hockey team every Sunday and play outside teams. Several Plainfield fellows play on the local seven, which travels under the name of the Meadowspreads. About fifteen young men are on the squad, the mainstays being the three Saunders brothers.

A business meeting of the Epworth League will be held in the Methodist church this evening.

Master Franklin Howe has returned to his home on Martine avenue after spending several weeks with relatives in Troy, N. Y.

Miss Jennie Calloway has returned to her home in Dunellen after visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Lewis Coddington, of Park avenue.

Mrs. Oscar Graham, of Aldene, is visiting her father, Frank Urner, of Tilliston road.

The Misses Kyte, of Martine avenue, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Pence and children, of Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Clark and daughter, Marie, of Newark, have returned home after spending the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Frowery, of The Inn.

Bound Brook.

Edith Thompson returned to Baltimore, Md., on Sunday, after spending a week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Stryker.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Young Men's Association will be held in the chapel of the Reformed church this evening.

Mrs. Mary E. Giddes, of Harris Lane, is spending some time at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Porter, at Plainfield.

The regular meeting of Lewis Parker Lodge, No. 276, I. O. O. F., will be held in the Voorhees building this evening.

John Aufnonger, of Corona, L. I., has returned to his home after a few days spent with William V. Fehr.

The Misses Mary and Florence Gorman, of Easton, Pa., were week-end visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Teston.

Mr. and Mrs. John Garretson, of East Millstone, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Blanche Garretson, to Ebenezer Evans, of this place.

Mrs. Helen Walter and daughters, the Misses Helen and Mary, left yesterday morning to join the Bound Brook winter colony in New York.

The new councilmen took their oath of office on New Year's Day. They were sworn in by Mayor Packer. They are Messrs. L. J. Mathis, George Bolmer and S. H. Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Newman have returned from Charlottesville, Va., and other Southern points of interest, after spending a two weeks' honeymoon troop and visiting the groom's parents.

THE MEN'S STORE OPENS AT 7:30 TOMORROW (WEDNESDAY) TO USHER IN

The Greatest Sale in the History of Men's Clothing

The John Wanamaker Store

We don't like superlatives. They have been much misused; have lost a great deal of their dictionary meaning. But when we tried to avoid using them in telling the news of this Sale we were "up a tree." We could find only one phrase to fit the facts---the greatest sale in history of men's clothing.

This is the First Annual National Clearaway of Men's Better Suits and Overcoats

From the Great National Clothing Manufacturers and from Our Own Stocks

5,420 brand new suits and overcoats, just unpacked, from the leading clothing manufacturers of America; and 7,223 fancy suits and overcoats from the fine regular Wanamaker stocks---all that remain.

12,643 Men's Suits and Overcoats

This is the largest number ever set out for sale under one roof, on one floor (the street floor); a selected stock, representative of the better clothes America has produced this season; honestly-made, serviceable fabrics, fashionably cut, a very wide choice of patterns; $355,485 worth, figured on the basis of our regular prices, to be offered for $223,337.75, a total saving of $132,147.25.

Ha! Ha! Ha!

Everybody will be pleased—the men who made those fine suits and overcoats, we who offer them, and the men who get them and make the real savings that go with them. One of the hundreds of men who wait for the Annual Wanamaker Clearaway, asked us about it the other day. We told him we had broadened it; two months ago when the manufacturing tailors were busy on this winter's orders, we had gone to the best of them, looked over their fabrics, picked the ones we wanted, and said to them—"We'll take whatever you have left of these fabrics when you've filled your winter orders; make them up into suits—or overcoats—the Wanamaker way; take your time about it; only get them to us the first of the year; how they were mightily pleased to have part of their surplus so easily provided for, and we got the terms we wanted; and how our customers were to get all the benefits. He was a most tickled man when he left, vowing to be here Wednesday morning at 7:30.

There are 6,223 Suits

Young men's suits; conservative suits; hundreds of patterns; more than 3,000 made from imported fabrics.

Broadway and Ninth Street, New York

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Athletes in the local Columbus Club are anticipating the arrival of their basketball net and as soon as the equipment makes its appearance they intend to get into the court game with a vim. Plenty of material is obtainable from the club roster and there is no apparent reason why a crackerjack aggregation should not be turned out.

Inasmuch as Rahway has had pretty much its own way with the Plainfield High School athletes in all other lines of sport, followers of the indoor pastime are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the clash between the quintets of the two institutions on the Ninth street court tomorrow afternoon. Take it from us, there'll be some battle and a generous portion of the rough-house stuff will be thrown in.

The mere mention of the word "Rahway" brings to mind one "Brooks" who has gained a reputation in these parts as a "dirty" player. His slugging was conspicuous in the football encounter between these two schools a couple of months ago and he displayed some more of the rough stuff in the basketball game with the Y. M. C. A. five last year. It's up to Brooks to patch up his differences tomorrow or he will forever queer himself with a Plainfield audience.

In keeping with progress made in other sports the followers of hockey have organized a local seven and in the two contests played the Queen Cityites have given a creditable account of themselves. Years ago the ice sport was a popular favorite hereabouts, but recently interest has lagged and as a consequence the old-time enthusiasm has somewhat subsided.

What has become of that P. H. S. track team? Coach Jack Fritts had the makings of a good team here several weeks ago, but nothing has been heard from the schoolboy camp recently.

One year ago today the Hope Chapel-Y. M. C. A. controversy had reached its zenith. Today the two aggregations are plodding along apparently content to accept and take whatever comes their way. Something's missing in the way of rivalry this year.

Whether or not the war has had any effect on basketball the receipts at the various gates this year have sadly diminished from those of a year ago. Anyway, we'll charge it up to the European hostilities and if the treasuries become too low we'll have the war stopped.

A surplus has generally been reported in the Y. M. C. A. basketball treasury at this time of the year, but the finances are understood to be below level at the present time. If the fans want good attractions such as Manager Dunning has been putting on they'll have to do their part and patronize the games. It looks to us like a case of too many contests the same night. You can't hardly expect a couple of hundred at each rendezvous when the Plainfield and North Plainfield High School and the Y. M. C. A. perform on the same nights.

Alleyites are back in harness after a holiday recess. Wonder why exponents of the bowling game have to take a couple of weeks' rest at the Yuletide season when other sports count on this period as their rosiest?

Now that the new year babe has been cradled it won't be long before the baseball bug deserts the hot stove league and starts buzzing among the schoolboys. While you have lots of time just give the schoolboy roster the "once-over." Prospects look pretty bright for a big year on the diamond hereabouts.

All efforts to force the Plainfield High School athletes to take a plunge into the swimming sport have proven futile. One thing has been accomplished by the addition of the new High School pool, however, and that's the elimination of the old kick of having no tub to swim in. The P. H. S. boys have the tank, but the necessary gumption to organize the amphibians seems to be a minus quantity.

Now that the chicken show has been terminated the Rooters' Club at the Columbus Club will resume activities at the alleyside. Finding it useless to match their vocal powers against those of a thousand feathered suffragettes the rooters temporarily abandoned their meetings for a week but are now ready to dispose of stored up energy.

Hope Chapel basketeers got walloped at Newark, Saturday night, and on the way home lost the score book. Yougottahandit to somebody for being there with the strategy.

There's one place in New Jersey the boxing censors have overlooked. As far as we know Saengerbund Hall has been the scene of the only fistic combats in the Garden State during the last week. "June" Dunning says it's all right to referee these squared ring events when dum-dum bullets are used, but "use for brawny fists he has none."

A casual survey of the brilliantines on the local and borough High School basketball teams this year leads us to believe that colleges will profit little by gathering up any of the graduate stock from these diggings this year.

Several more trips, similar to the jaunt to Hasbrouck Heights, are being arranged by Manager Dunning, of the Y. M. C. A. basketball five. Good-bye, basketball team.

MASONIC BOWLING.

Jerusalem pinners, of the Masonic League, will entertain Washington, of Elizabeth, here, tomorrow night. The locals are in last place, while Washington holds fast to sixth.

HOPE'S NEXT GAME.

The Hope Chapel aggregation is scheduled to meet the Methodist Church five, of Milltown, on the local court next Saturday night.

P. H. S. AT RAHWAY.

The city High School team has its work cut out for it tomorrow afternoon, when the Rahway five will be met in the gym of the Rahway Y. M. C. A. Rahway is practically unbeatable on that court and if the locals get the large end of the score they will be going some.

SPARROWS NEAR TOP IN TEAM STANDING

Won Three From Crows Last Night and Tighten Hold on Second Place.

Standing of the Teams.

	W.	L.	P. C.	H. S.
Robins	7	2	.778	941
Sparrows	9	3	.775	962
Hawks	5	4	.555	947
Parrots	5	4	.555	918
Peacocks	4	5	.445	992
Doves	3	6	.333	885
Quail	3	6	.333	876
Crows	3	9	.250	953

The Sparrow bowling team, of the Columbus Club Five-man Tournament, made a clean sweep last night, and came within twenty-eight points of tieing the Robins for first place, while their opponents, the Crows, were lowered from seventh place tie to last position, with a record of three victories and nine defeats. The Sparrows, by taking three last night now have an average of .750 with a record of 9 victories and 3 defeats.

The first and last games were not as exciting as the second roll, which was won by a margin of five points. The Sparrows made a poor start in the initial roll, when Regan hit for a 148, and Pasch, of the Crow team, scored a 216 as a starter. Shannon made a 186 for the Sparrows and then Caulfield smashed the pins for a mark of 234 which, aided by Howe's 203, helped materially in increasing the total mark. The pinners that followed Pasch could not get higher than 169 and the team scores of the first game were 962 to 841.

All of the players made low scores in the second game, Caulfield again getting high tally with a 185. The totals of this game were 770 to 765 in favor of the Sparrows. Howe took high score honors in the last game with a score of 242, which practically put the game away for his team. The best scores turned in by the Crows in this roll were 183 by Kyle and a 162 by McAfee. Thursday night the Hawks and Parrots will play. These two teams are now tied for third place and the match should prove to be an interesting one.

The scores:

SPARROWS.
Regan	148	142	142

LOCAL ELKS MEET NEW BRUNSWICK HERE TONIGHT

The New Brunswick Senior Elks' team will play on the Watchung avenue alleys tonight. Last night the Middlesexers copped three at Hoboken and tied Paterson for the top rung and if they win as many tonight Paterson will go into second place and Plainfield to last.

Plainfield has not played a match for over a week, while New Brunswick worked hard last night.

BOROUGH TWO-MAN TOURNEY.

Two matches will be played in the borough tournament on Gates' alleys tonight. Connolly and Miller will meet the Winters-Hansen combination, and after that match Winters and Hansen will take on the Menzenbach-McGonogal team. There will also be bowling Thursday and Friday.

TWO AT ELIZABETH.

Plainfield Eagles and Junior Elk bowling teams will invade Elizabeth, Thursday night, and meet the teams of their respective leagues. The Eagles have not played for over a month and are now in last position in the league.

FIRST PLACE TIE IN ELKS' LEAGUE

By Taking Three From Hoboken, Brunswick "Bills" Tie Paterson.

Plainfield	11	19	1057
Rahway	10	20	981

New Brunswick bowlers have been able to tie the Paterson pin-knights for first place in the Elks' Senior League, each having won 19 games and lost eleven. The New Brunswick's bowled at home, last night, in a postponed league match with the Hoboken quintet and took three games in a row from their visitors. The match was a fairly close and interesting one, the feature being a total of 971 to the credit of the home five in the last game. Duffy led the visitors with 224, McCormick was there for 214 for the home five, and both Coyne and Bastedo turned in 204.

The scores:

BIG GIANT DEAL MAY AFFECT JACK MARTIN

Manager Pat Moran Planning to Relegate Local Performer to the Bench.

As a sequel to a deal put through yesterday by which Johnny McGraw, manager of the Giants, secured Hans Lobert, the third base star of the Phillies, for three players and a cash consideration, Jack Martin may once more be relegated to the bench-warmers' role. The New York players involved in the deal are Al Demaree, the veteran twirler; Milton Stock, the youngster who supplanted Tilly Shafer at third base last year, and Jack Adams, a catcher, whom the Gotham club procured in a draft last year from the New Orleans club of the Southern Association. The amount of cash involved in the deal was not given out by the parties concerned.

In an official statement to reporters, yesterday, Manager Pat Moran, of the Phillies, said that Stock would play third base and Bancroft would supplant Martin at short. He further declared that the Plainfielder would be used as the first string infield substitute.

Thus McGraw completed his first strategic move in the rejuvenation of the Giants for the coming season and it is rumored that more surprising deals are hanging fire. Lobert last year was the main prop in the Phillies' infield cast and his addition will greatly strengthen a weak spot in the New Yorkers' lineup.

P. H. S. TRACKMEN WILL MEET Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES

The Plainfield High School track team will lineup against the Y. M. C. A., in a dual meet Friday night in the High School gym. A close competition is expected in each event.

Coach Fritts has not yet announced who will be entered in the events, but regular practices have been held and he has a fine string of men to pick from.

The following events will be contested: 20-yard dash, running broad jump, standing broad jump, shotput, running high jump, standing hop, step and jump, and tug-of-war.

BASKETBALL CHALLENGE.

John R. Gates, the local basketball promoter, issues a challenge to any team in this city or State that wishes to play a fast colored combination. Games will be played on home or opponents' courts. Address all communications to John R. Gates, 615 East Third street.

Y. M. COLLEGE LEAGUE WILL BE REORGANIZED

Edward Glaentzer, the new boys' secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., who comes here from Ridgewood, assumed his duties yesterday and has already started out with new work for the boy's department. Working with Mr. Meermans, the physical director, Mr. Glaentzer is planning to re-organize the College League. Instead of having four teams, as has been the custom heretofore, there will be but two teams, one coached by Mr. Glaentzer and the other by Mr. Meermans. The re-organization meeting will be held next Saturday morning after class, when a social time will be held in the boys' rooms and the teams and captains picked.

The Indian League, in which the smallest boys compete, will be the same as before except that a new scoring system will be used. The schedule of the Indian League will start next Monday and the College League the day after. The standing of the Indian League follows:

Team	Points
Waywanda	3776
Sioux	3345
Iroquois	3337
Omaha	3284

BOROUGH BUILDING PERMITS.

Two permits for construction work were granted to Lewis Goldstein by the Borough Council, at its meeting last night. One of these was for a brick addition to a dwelling located at 196 Grove street and the other for a cement addition to a barn located at 216 Grove street. Both of the applications came within the specifications of the borough building ordinance and were unanimously granted.

WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICES.

The speakers at the week of prayer services this evening include the following: Warren chapel, George Hoagland; Monroe Avenue Methodist church, Rev. Edward F. Randolph, pastor of St. James' Methodist church, Philadelphia; Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie, topic, "Prayer for Increased Assurance of God's Power," Psalms 89, 1-8; Hope chapel, the pastor, Rev. Frederic L. Greene; union service at the First Baptist church, speaker, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, subject, "The Holy Spirit."

N. P. H. S. IN ACTION.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team will play at New Brunswick tomorrow afternoon. The trip will probably be made by trolley and a good number of rooters will accompany the team.

GEORGE WHITE DIES SUDDENLY

WAS WIDELY KNOWN

Awaiting Arrival of 8:02 Train He Is Stricken and Passes Away In a Few Minutes—Was Extensive Property Holder.

While conversing with a number of friends at the east-bound station of the New Jersey Central, awaiting the arrival of the 8:02 train this morning, George F. White, of 41 Willow avenue, was sticken with apoplexy and died shortly afterwards while first aid treatment was being administered. He was about fifty years of age.

Mr White was one of the best known and respected residents of North Plainfield and when he left home this morning he was apparently in the best of health. Those who conversed with him at the station said that he appeared to be in his usual good spirits. The first intimation of the fatal stroke came when the man's body fell forward and sank to the ground unconscious. Carried to one of the seats in the station shed everything possible was done to make him comfortable, pending the arrival of physicians who had been summoned, but he expired before medical treatment could be given.

He had for years been accustomed to taking the 8:02 train for New York city, where he was employed in the real estate department of the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and was a familiar figure among those who daily commuted on that train.

During his many years' residence in the borough he had acquired a large bulk of real estate and several extensive tracks of land were owned by him, notable among which is Cricket Field, a piece of property he donated to the Holy Cross football team each season for athletic games. He took no active part in politics but was affiliated in an indirect way with every enterprise that affected the municipality in which he resided. He was formerly the owner of the building now occupied by George Finger on West Front street, the latter having purchased it from Mr White several years ago.

Surviving him are his wife, two sisters, the Misses Nellie and Mollie White, who reside in the Madison apartments; two sons, Charles and William; and one daughter, Edna. All of the children reside at the parents' home.

Mrs White was completely overcome as the result of shock caused by the sudden announcement of her husband's death. The body was removed temporarily to Runyon's undertaking parlors, but no arrangements for the funeral services have been made as yet. The deceased was a life long member of the First Baptist church and harbored an interest in all of its activities.

HEART TROUBLE FATAL TO BENJAMIN S. HARRIS

Benjamin S. Harris died yesterday afternoon at his home, 736 Clinton avenue, following an illness of two weeks. He had been suffering from heart trouble for some time, but only recently did the ailment become acute.

Beside a wife, Mr. Harris is survived by one daughter, Miss Lillian Harris, of this city, and three sons, Albert S. and Benjamin S. Harris, of this city, and James R. Harris, of Newark. The funeral will be held at he late home Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Bound Brook.

MISS LEECH INAUGURATES "EVERY VOTER CAMPAIGN"

Miss Florence Leech, of Montana, who has been engaged by the New Jersey State Suffrage Association to conduct a special campaign in the State in the interest of the suffrage cause, will begin her work today. She will visit every city, town, village and hamlet for the purpose of reaching every voter.

The Suffragists are to conduct what has been termed an "Every Voter Campaign" leading up to the time that the Legislature will vote on the suffrage amendment.

HEARING THIS AFTERNOON.

The case of the Public Service Gas Company vs. David C. Allan, of Harrison avenue, North Plainfield, will be heard in the borough court this afternoon at 4 o'clock, before Justice Thomas H. Snape. The hearing was laid over from Tuesday of last week.

MAY REACH AN AGREEMENT SOON

Differences Between Councli, City Clerk and Stenographer Likely to Be Fixed.

While there has been no official announcement of a settlement of the differences between the Common Council and City Clerk James T. MacMurray and George B. Wean, city stenographer, as to the fixing of the salaries of the two officials, there is an indication that an amicable agreement may be reached soon so that both Mr. MacMurray and Mr. Wean may continue.

A city official in discussing the matter today, said that while he realized that Mr. MacMurray was nettled over an apparent unreasonable delay in fixing his salary, he was of the opinion that the city clerk had acted too hastily, especially presenting his resignation Monday night without first giving the Council so much as a hint as to what he proposed to do.

In support of the position taken by the Council, it is said that it proposes to abolish all fee systems, as suggested by Mayor Calkins, and in view of such a change it was almost impossible to fix the clerk's salary at the organization meeting. For this reason it was agreed that Mr. MacMurray should be re-appointed for three years and continue to draw the same salary, together with fees, as before, until such time as the Council could adjust the matter in a way satisfactory to all concerned.

Mr. MacMurray's salary has been $1,200 with fees, while Mr. Wean has been receiving $600 from the city and an additional $200 from the clerk The majority of the councilmen have felt that Mr. MacMurray should be given a straight salary commensurate with the work he does and that the city should pay all help, including Mr. Wean. This, it is believed, will be the final result.

MEETING TONIGHT TO CONSIDER UNEMPLOYED

Session to Be Held at Mayor's Office—Benefit Tomorrow at Astor Theatre.

The Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed of Plainfield and North Plainfield will meet tonight at the Mayor's office at 8:15. A full attendance of the Commission is expected, and there will be one important change in the personnel of the Commission. The Mayor is a member of the Commission, ex-officio, so this will be the first meeting at which Mr. Calkins, will, by virtue, of his office, become a member of the Commission. Ex-Mayor Stewart will be appointed a member of the finance committee.

The work of the Commission has been very successful, although funds are still badly needed, and the finance committee desires to extend to all those who have subscribed very hearty thanks for the support given, and at the same time to urge those who have not subscribed to do so. Many subscriptions of small amounts would be most welcome.

The Astor Theatre, which was one of the first to pay a license fee to the new administration, has generously offered to give the entire proceeds of its performances tomorrow to the Commission for the furtherance of the work. A very attractive program has been arranged, commencing at 2:30 p. m., and again at 7:30 p. m. and 9:30 p. m. There will be given the following moving pictures:

"The Lady of Lyons," in four parts; a comic in one part, a reel containing scenes from this country and abroad, and an Animated Weekly, including cartoons by Hy. Mayer. Concert music will be furnished by Prof. Charles P. Freligh.

Here is a fine opportunity for those who want to support the good work and at the same time to obtain amusement or diversion for themselves, as the entire proceeds of the three performances will be given to the Commission.

Y. M. C. A. PICTURES.

The remarkable Vitagraph masterpiece, "Captain Alvarez," will be shown at the motion picture entertainment in Y. M. C. A. Hall on Saturday afternoon and evening. This film, which is in six parts, is generally regarded as one of the strongest and most wholesome pictures shown during the past year. Entertainments will be given at 2:00, 3:45, 7:00 and 8:45.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

Mrs. Laura Culbertson, of 109 East Fifth street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Nina Carolyn, to Carl Henderson Burton, of Brookville, Pa. No date has been set for the wedding.

TRADE BOARD IN ANNUAL SESSION

Officers of 1914 Re-elected for Ensuing Term With Several Additions.

MAY ADVERTISE CITY

Agitation Launched by William Newcorn in Speech to Members Last Night—City Hall Question Discussed.

William Jeffery was re-elected to the presidency of the local Board of Trade at the annual meeting of the organization held in the Exempt Firemen's Hall, last night, and the following roster of officials was chosen to assist him in the administrative duties during the ensuing year: First vice-president, Herman Schwed; vice-presidents, William L. Saunders, A. D. Herr and Leslie R. Fort; secretary, Lamar VanSyckle; treasurer, Eugene Laing; all of the former officers being renamed. The board of trustees was selected as follows: A. E. Force, Gustav Meisner, William Newcorn, Henry Haurand and A. V. D. Vanderhoef. J. Henry Crane, William Newcorn, W. R. Codington, Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and Francis J. Blatz will compose the board of counselors. An approximate balance of $100 remains in the treasury for the start of the new year.

In an inpromptu talk to the Board, Mr. Newcorn launched renewed enthusiasm for an advertising campaign for the purpose of heralding Plainfield's commercial and residential advantages throughout the country, urging the Board of Trade to foster and promote the agitation. He cited instances where towns similar in size to Plainfield have ben benefitted by such work and declared that the Queen City has failed to advance as

SETTLEMENT MADE WITH LOCAL WOMAN

Miss Anna Duval Was Plaintiff in Suit to Recover $2,000 for Injuries.

The case of Anna Duval vs. James A. Francis and Ralph Cangiovanni, which was to have been tried today in the Supreme Court, at Elizabeth, has been settled. Miss Duval, who has resided in this city for a number of year, fell into an open area-way owned by James A. Francis, at 133 Bank street, Newark, on July 24, 1913.

Ralph Cangiovanni had plied paving blocks along the outer edge of the side-walk in front of the area-way preparatory to paving Bank street under a contract with the city of Newark. It was alleged that the accident, which occurred at night, was due to the joint negligence of both of the parties. Miss Duval sued to recover $2,000 damages.

C. M. Dolliver and Robert Newton Crane represented Miss Duval, and Kalisch & Kalisch and Raymond & Marsh represented the defendants.

BRING SUIT AGAINST LOCAL THEATRE PROPRIETORS

Elizabeth, Jan. 6.—Among the actions to be tried in the Circuit Court, and which is listed for an early date, is the suit of Mrs. Rachael C. Richards and her husband, William F. Richards, of 259 East Third street, Plainfield, who are seeking damages from the proprietors of a theatre in Plainfield. Mrs. Richards fell down the balcony steps of the theatre December 23, 1913, injuring herself severely. She alleges that carpet tacks, crumpled carpet and poor light caused her to fall. Her husband sues for the loss of her services. The defense is contributory negligence.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Charged with misappropriating funds belonging to the Walter Scott Printing Press Company, by whom he was employed as a clerk, Vincent Meaney was arraigned before City Judge W. G. DeMeza in the city court, yesterday afternoon, and held in $300 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The complaint, signed by David Scott, alleges that the defendant took $13.01 of the concern's money. The latter's father, Thomas J. Meaney, became his bondsman. He was represented by Francis J. Blatz, who waived examination.

SESAME CLUB.

The Sesame Club will meet tomorrow morning at the home of Miss Dunham, 327 East Sixth street, at 10:30 o'clock.

WOMAN DEAD IN SUBWAY TIE UP

MANY IN HOSPITALS

Four Manholes Blown Out in Different Sections of City—Trainload of Passengers Overcome Near Fifty-ninth Street Station.

New York, Jan. 6.—One unidentified woman died this afternoon in the Polyclinic Hospital as the result of burns received in an accident which resulted in the greatest transporatation tie-up New York has ever experienced. A total of sixty-five people were taken to that hospital alone, as a result of four explosions which occurred almost simultaneously in manholes covering main power conduits at Fifty-third street, Fourteenth street, Canal street and in Brooklyn.

First reports were that a dozen or more people had been killed at the various points, but at noon the police reported that up to that time there had been no fatalities, although many were injured. The list of injured includes Patrolmen Michael DiGiguro and Howley, who were overcome by smoke while aiding in the work of rescue at Fifty-fifth street and Broadway; Abraham Shapiro, 30; Samuel Goldberg, 30; Charles Lee, colored, 19; Vida Driscoll, 25; Rebecca Silver, 63; Dora Vedgosky, Henry Shapior, Vetto Vatteo, Charles Frank, 22; Abraham Venner, 27; Birdie Bootsefien, 17; Julia Goldstein, Joseph Saimer, 37; Arthur Peets, 26; B. ROBERT N. CRANE FOR ASSEMBLY JOB

At a special meeting of the City Republican Executive Committee held in the office of Councilman Francis J. Blatz, last night, Robert Newton Crane was endorsed for the appointment of filing clerk in the Assembly. The job pays about $500 a year and it is believed that Mr. Crane will get the appointment.

The committee also expected to make a recommendation for the appointment of chaplain, but as it was impossible to decide on anyone the matter was referred to a committee comprising Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Louis Wilson and Charles L. Kling, with power to select someone for the place. There was no other business of any importance considered by the committee.

LOCAL MAN SAVED BOY'S LIFE AT NEW MARKET

Ludwig Hefti, of West Third street, proved himself a hero on the New Market pond, yesterday afternoon, when eight-year-old Phillip Enanigh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Enanight, fell through the thin ice and nearly lost his life. The youngster had been coasting with a number of companions and wandered too near the danger point.

Mr. Hefti caught the boy by his coat collar and yanked him back on the ice. Although badly scared the boy was apparently none the worse for his experience.

CITY SANITATION ON A HIGH PLANE

SYSTEMATIC METHODS

Many Inspections Made During the Year—Recommendations for 1915 Made by Health Officer—Propose Wider Scope.

Facts gleaned from the twenty-sixth annual report of the local Board of Health indicate that the city status of sanitation is above that of the average municipality of its size and that some excellent work has been done with limited facilities in Plainfield during 1914. Last year the death rate in the city was the lowest in its history, the figures presented in the annual report of the Board seeting the total at 10.09 per thousand population. Officials of the Board are now busily engaged in revising the sanitary code of the city and this work is rapidly nearing completion.

During the year there has been a general improvement in the milk supply and the bacterial standard adopted by the Board places a maximum of 150,000 colonies per cubic centimeter. Among the new matters attempted by the department during the year were the Health Exhibit held in the Plainfield High School auditorium and the "Clean-up Week" idea, both of which proved successful in the initial undertaking. The recommendation of a contagious disease hospital is now under consideration, the municipal water supply question has been inquired into, and a recommendation is made in the report that no licenses be granted to out-door shows to continue more than

MAYOR IN SESSION WITH HEALTH BOARD

Discussed Various Phases of the Work Carried on by Department in 1914.

Preliminary to the annual meeting scheduled to be held next month, the Plainfield Board of Health convened in its headquarters, last night, with Mayor Leighton Calkins to discuss vital topics in the lengthy report for the year recently issued by the Board. The milk supply of the city, the sanitary code, special work, municipal waste, the Greenbrook question, contagious disease hospital, out-door shows and public nuisances came in for criticism by the Mayor and the members of the Board and numerous valuable suggestions were offered.

The Mayor outlined his plan for the health work during the coming year and commented on what has been done in the past. A definite understanding betwen the city executive and Health Board was arrived at and it is probable that further emphasis will be given to last night's remarks at the annual meeting.

INDEPENDENT FIFE AND DRUM CORPS ELECTS

The Independent Fife and Drum Crps, last evening, opened its new headquarters at 142 Park avenue, and elected the following officers during the course of the meeting: President, S. C. Terry; vice-president, Nelson Peterson; recording secretary, George Herman; financial secretary, Herbert Adams; treasurer, John Beekman; sergeant-at-arms, Ralph Adams; drum sergeant, David Bodine; drum corporal, Nelson Peterson; fife sergeant, Raymond Carver; fife corporal, George Herman; major, Frank Manchester; trustees, Horace G. Adams, W. H. I. Cubberley and James H. Adams.

E. E. PHILLIPS' FUNERAL.

The funeral of Edward E. Phillips, who committed suicide in his offices in the Marsh building on Monday, was held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at 200 West Second street. Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, a retired minister of this city, but formerly of Somerville, was in charge. The service was private. The burial was in Somerville.

PIANO AND VIOLIN RECITAL.

A piano and violin recital was given at he home of Mr. and Mrs. Berger, on West Third street, yesterday afternoon, by Prof. Kogan. Twenty-five pupils took part in the prgram. After the recital refreshments were served.

DEMOCRATS OPPOSE THE BURNETT BILL

Councilman R. A. Claybrook is Chosen President of Local Organization.

The Plainfield Democratic Club at its meeting, last night, beside electing officers, put itself on record as opposing the passage of the Burnett Immigration Bill, thereby upholding President Wilson and United States Senator James E. Martine. During the evening a resolution was adopted expressing the club's opposition to the bill, a copy of which will be forwarded to Washington. The club is strongly opposed to the illiteracy test as provided for in the Burnett bill, and the President is requested to veto it should it pass the Senate.

Plans were discussed for a mass meeting to be held at the High School within a short time at which Senator James E. Martine and Congressman W. E. Tuttle, Jr., will be invited to speak. Several other important matters were considered by the club, after which officers for the year were elected as follows:

President, Richard A. Claybrook; vice presidents, First ward, Theodore A. Martin; Second ward, LeRoy J. Ellis; Third ward, Percy H. Stewart, Fourth ward, Frank Cullen; secretary, James J. McCann; treasurer, William F. Taliaferro; executive committee, J. F. Zerega, Peter Flynn, Fred Endress, A. R. Parkhurst, Jr., Henry C. Rosenbaum, Daniel C. Courain. The retiring president, Howard G. Lapsley, presided at the meeting.

The club has taken on new life and with the capable officers chosen last night believes that much will be accomplished during the coming year in arousing and maintaining interest among the Democrats of the city.

EFFORTS TO INDUCE CONNORS TO CONFESS

Sentence Being Held up by Judge Connolly Pending Outcome.

Although Charles, alias "Ice-Wagon" Connors, convicted on December 19 in the Union county courts of being implicated in the looting of the home of former State Senator Ackerman in this city, was to have been sentenced two weeks ago by Judge James C. Connolly, to date nothing has been done in the matter. Various semi-official reasons have been advanced for the delay in sentencing the alleged "second-story" man and as a consequence of the postponement the reported appeal to be filed by William Newcorn, his counsel, has been held up. According to law the appeal cannot be made until after sentence has been passed.

It was stated on good authority today that the county authorities are making efforts to "draw" a complete confession from the prisoner with a view to clearing up several other mysteries. To date Connors has remained reticent and all efforts to "shake" him have proven futile. He maintains the defiant attitude assumed after his arrest in Chicago and it is the consensus of opinion among those interested that he will continue to hold a "stiff upper lip." "Honor among thieves" is a thing that has thwarted police departments before in similar matters and Connors has refused to divulge any information that will lead to the establishment of the identity of his alleged pals on the night the Plainfield burglary was committed.

Senator Ackerman's home was entered a year ago Sunday night and Connors has been an inmate of the county jail since April, when he was brought to New Jersey from Chicago by Chief Kiely.

The records of the Connors trial, which attracted country-wide attention because of the prominence of the finger-print evidence, are honeycombed, it is said, with exceptions to the admission of certain evidence and it is understood that an appeal has been prepared for presentation to the courts. The convicted man is liable to a sentence of fifteen years and it is not unlikely that the maximum penalty will be dealt out by Judge Connolly.

MORE TRENCHES TAKEN BY FRENCH

Germans Forced to Give Way For Three Hundred Yards in Argonne.

BATTERIES SILENCED

Artillery Duels Marked Fighting of Last Twenty-four Hours—Berlin Says French Are Firing at Villages Occupied by Non-Combatants.

Paris, Jan. 6.—Violent fighting in the Argonne, resulting in the capture of 300 yards of trenches by the French troops, the repulsing of infantry attacks made by the Germans in Belgium and the silencing of German batteries in the valley of the Aisne and near Rheims sum up the statement issued by the French war office at 3 o'clock this afternoon. It says:

"In Belgium the enemy has made two attacks without success in the region of the Dunes and to the southeast of St. Georges. On the west front to the north of Lys and from the Lys to the Oise there have been only artillery combats.

"In the valley of the Aisne and in the section of Rheims our batteries have gained the advantage over those of the enemy, which have been reduced to silence. Besides this our troops have advanced 100 yards northwest of Rheims.

"In the Argonne there has been a very violent fight which permitted us to take 300 yards of trenches in the woods of La Grurie, at which point a slight retirement had previously been announced.

"From Bagatelle and from Fontain Madame the Germans opened two violent attacks, each with an effective strength of one regiment. They have been repulsed. Near the ravine of Courte Chaufsfé we have blown up with artillery a trench 800 yards long, of which we half occupied.

"From the Argonne to the Vosges the bad weather, fog and sleet continued. There have been at different points on the front only very sharp artillery duels. In the forest of La Pretre, near Font A Mousson, we continue to gain ground.

"In the region of Thann, despite violent cannonade, we have maintained our gains of the day before as far as Steinbach, and in the trenches to the southwest and to the northwest of that village. The enemy succeeded in reoccupying one of his old trenches on the eastern slope of hill No. 425, of which the summit remains in our possession."

Berlin, Jan. 6 (By wireless via Sayville).—The following statement was given out today:

"In the western theatre of war the French continued yesterday a systematic bombardment of the villages behind our front. The French seem indifferent to killing their own countrymen and destroying their homes. The bombardment troubles were very little.

"At Souain, in the Argonne forest, we captured several trenches, taking two officers and 200 men. The French again obtained a foothold early yesterday upon the much fought for heights west of Senneheim. The French were driven off, however, after a strong bayonet attack. They did not care to make a fresh advance. We took 50 mountain chasseurs."

"There is no change in the eastern theatre, on the eastern frontier or northern Poland.

"Our troops west of the Weichsel (Vistula) penetrated as far as Sucha, capturing several of the enemy's points of support. We took 1,400 prisoners and nine machine guns.

"The situation on the east bank of the Pilica is unchanged."

Lausanne, Switzerland, Jan. 6.—The whole of the village of Steinbach has been destroyed and Cernay is now at the mercy of the French guns. The capture of Cernay will leave Mulhausen open to attack by the French, who are centering their advance into Alsace at this point.

Amsterdam, Jan. 6.—The Tyd states that Cardinal Mercier has been arrested by the Germans in his own palace, owing to charges brought about by a circular letter sent out by him to the Catholic clergy and people of Belgium, in which he pleaded with them to maintain their loyalty to the Belgian King and Government. Numerous Catholic priests in Belgium have also been arrested but released, although the Cardinal remains a prisoner.

London, Jan. 6.—A wireless from Berlin says a report received in the German capital from Athens states that the Dardanelles forts have begun a bombardment of the blockading Anglo-French fleets and that one torpedo boat has been slightly damaged.

CANDIDATE FOR POSTMASTER.

Former Mayor William Wyckoff has announced himself as a candidate for the postmastership of this borough which will be given up by Henry S. Garretson next year, and a petition is being circulated for the signatures of the citizens who would like to see him secure the appointment. With the petition that is being circulated for the appointment of Assessor J. H. L. Peters, the petition of Mr. Wyckoff makes the second thus far that is being presented to the citizens for their consideration. We wonder when Willard N. Apgar, who is also a candidate for the appointment, will get busy with his petition.

The Misses M. B. Mitchell and F. Campbell, of Scranton, Pa.; George Vliet, of Jersey City, and Lloyd Campbell, of Scranton, Pa., were entertained recently by C. L. Wahl, Jr., of Washington avenue.

TELLS ON THE KIDNEYS.

Plainfield People Have Found This to Be True.

The strain of overwork tells on weakened kidneys. The hurry and worry of business men, the heavy lifting and stooping of workmen, the women's household cares, tend to wear, weaken and injure the kidneys until they can no longer filter the poison from the blood and the whole body suffers from the waste matter that accumulates. Weakened kidneys need quick assistance. Doan's Kidney Pills are prepared especially for weakened kidneys; tired, worn-out backs—have proven their merit in thousands of such cases. Convincing proof of their merit in a Plainfield citizen's statement.

Mrs. C. B. Coriell, 60 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I suffered from kidney disorder for years and the principal symptom was a severe backache. Since I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I have taken them off and on and they have always acted like magic, giving me prompt relief."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Coriell had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

SCHOLASTIC HONORS FOR UNION COUNTY STUDENTS

The Rutgers College catalog for 1915, which has just been issued, shows that several Union county boys have achieved scholastic honors for the past year. Among the graduating class, Arthur H. Marshon, of Rahway, won honors in the physical department, and Eric W. Luster, of Elizabeth, received honors in electrical engineering.

William P. E. Ainsworth, of Rahway, leads the honor men in the class of 1916, while Frank H. Broome and Harold W. Faint, of Roselle Park, are on the list of 1917 scholastic leaders. Clarkson A. Cranmer, of Somerville, also achieved this distinction.

The catalog shows that the undergraduate registration at Rutgers is 436, the largest ever recorded. Seven graduate students bring the number up to 443.

There were 450 students at the summer session, while the attendance at the short course in agriculture is 204, making a total of 1,097 for the year.

Ten fellowships have been announced; one in science, one in chemistry, one in political science, and seven in agriculture. A new prize of fifty dollars has been offered for the best essay on municipal government.

STUDENTS' PRANKS MAY RESULT IN BOARD ACTION

Westfield, Jan. 6—As the result of a "spread" held by the senior class of the Westfield High School, in St. Paul's parish house, the Board of Education may take action to punish the pupils, it was learned yesterday. Two of the seniors, just previous to the "spread," were captured by the juniors and tied in a local garage, but they managed to break out and attend the "spread."

The juniors in their efforts to break up the gathering broke two windows in the parish house. Six of the juniors got into the hall and after a scuffle they were pacified and made to sit in the gallery and look on.

After the "spread" the students went to the High School where they were surprised by finding the doors locked. Those who attended the "spread" were kept out of school for the day.

CLOTHING ON CREDIT AT CASH PRICES

$1 WEEKLY TO ALL

people think that to buy clothing on credit means dowdy, ill-fitting garments, high prices and brow-beating treatment.

Maybe their reasons for thinking as they do are well founded. Maybe they have dealt with some firm which does business along the old lines which were once thought necessary by all—or nearly all—credit giving stores.

But one trial of Laurie's Credit System will open their eyes to the newer, better way.

THE BIGGEST STAGE PRODUCTION IS CALLED "BRADY—DRAMA"

WILLIAM A. BRADY'S production of "Life" at the Manhattan Opera House, New York, turns out to be all that was claimed for it in advance by its promoter—the biggest thing in drama the American stage has seen. Several of the pictorial effects are really startling in their realism, notably the boat race between Yale and Harvard, the automobile flight, in which the pursuing car smashes into a tree and explodes, and the arrival of a four horse tallyho in full swing and loaded down with pretty girls going to visit the Yale crew at their training quarters.

Added to these and other visual features of an altogether unusual character there is a dramatic story which holds the interest of the spectators and then carries them to a high pitch of excitement. During the boat race episode, in which the Yale crew is supposed at the last moment to win a desperately contested struggle, it is an almost nightly occurrence for graduates of "Old Eli" in the audience to spring to their feet and shout at the top of their lungs, "Come on, you Yale! Come on, come on!"

At the end of the third act of "Life" the principal personages in the story parade across the stage one by one in front of the curtain, and the expressions of the audience are exceedingly interesting. The hero, heroine and their adherents in the play are applauded with the utmost vehemence, while the male and female villains, respectively played by Walter Hampden and Leonore Harris, are hissed and hooted as roundly as though they were peculiarly atrocious malefactors in real life.

ONE DEAD IN SUBWAY TIE UP

Peropa, 19; David Tomalak, 58. All of the injured were reported to be out of the subway shortly after noon by the police.

The entire subway system was tied up as the result of the explosions, which caused short circuiting and completely cut off power between the generating stations of the company and the underground tubes.

Three fire alarms were turned in from Fifty-fifth street and Broadway, and the firemen took passengers from the subway through the grating in the street.

Fifteen fire companies fought the flames in the tunnel, and the work of rescuing the imprisoned passengers progressed under great difficulties. Police headquarters reported that the fire had been extinguished at 10:50, and all the engines had left. As soon as reports of the accident were received at headquarters, sixteen pulmotors, the ambulances of all nearby hospitals and all stretchers and patrol wagons in Manhattan as well as all available automobiles were rushed to the scene.

A large number of passengers had to be carried out of the subway in a partly suffocated condition brought about by the dense black smoke which prevailed. A subway train was stalled where the explosion in the manhole took place. It was in this that the people were overcome.

At 11:17 Inspector Dwyer notified police headquarters that conditions at the Fifty-fifth street subway were clearing up and all the police reserves and half of the traffic men had been sent back to their precincts. Many persons suffering from suffocation were taken out of the Fifth-ninth street station and sent to Polyclinic Hospital.

Clifton W. Wilder, electrical engineer ;Robert Ridgway, engineer in charge of subway construction, and Thomas H. Whitney, secretary of the Public Service Commission, were at the scene of the accident, but no official report was made by them.

According to the preliminary report received by the Commission from the Interborough Rapid Transit a high tension cable burned out in the subway conduit at Fifty-sixth street and Broadway and twenty cables were destroyed, shutting off the supply of power to various sub-stations. The sub-station at Ninety-sixth street was at last accounts supplying power down as far as Fifty-ninth street.

Train service on the subway has not yet been resumed. At the office of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, it was stated that the work of puting new cables for those destroyed and damaged was going on but it was impossible to say whether it would be completed in time to start service before the rush hour tonight.

WORLD CONGRESS OF NEUTRAL NATIONS

Washington, Jan. 6—The foundation for a gigantic scheme of world-wide understanding of the rights of neutral nations in time of war is expected to be laid tomorrow, when the special commission of the governing board of the Pan-American Union again meets. For it is planned to extend the scene of the earlier plans to define the neutrality laws of the Western Hemisphere, by inviting all nations of the earth not now at war to join the American republics in a huge convention at Washington, to settle for all time this most pressing question of neutral rights. And the scope does not end here, for it is planned to invite the warring nations to join in the agreements at the end of the war, and thus complete a world understanding.

This stupendous plan is proposed by the government of Venezuela, and the author of the suggestion is Gen. Ignacio Andrade, now minister of foreign affairs and formerly President of Venezuela. The proposal is the biggest and broadest that has come out of the feeling among neutral nations generally that the war in Europe points the need for a definite determination of neutral rights and a revision of the rules of international law on neutrality.

The proposal was submitted late in December, through the Venezuelan minister at Washington, Dr. Santos A. Dominici, to the governing board of the Pan-American Union. The board will refer the proposal to the special commission recently created upon motion of Dr. Romulo S. Naon, the ambassador from Argentina. The 21 nations of North, South and Central America, with the exception of Mexico, unanimously voted to establish the special commission.

Dr. Diminici, the Venezuelan minister here, has been informally consulting with the members of the diplomatic corps from all neutral nations represented in Washington, and with those of neutral European and Asiatic nations, and has acquainted them with the details of the Andrade idea for the proposed conference. As a result, diplomats have been consulting their home governments and have informed them of the plan.

WHY TURKEY ENTERED WAR.

Turkey's reasons for entering the world war are explained fully in an article by Prof. Roland G. Usher in the January World's Work. The educated Turks have an idea that they can make their country more democratic, and in the future escape from participating in alliances with the various nations of Europe, and in this they have received much encouragement from Germany. Prof. Usher says that exceeding importance can be attached to the German willingness to assist Turkey in the efforts of its people to procure self-government. The influence of the Kaiser's people in the country is declared to have deep and fundamental roots in a large part of the population of the country, and to appeal to their best and highest impulses. This is declared to explain why Turkey has joined Germany in the war. As Prof. Usher says:

The enlightened Turks see in Pan-Germanism a democratic Turkey with constitutional self-government, a Turkey developing its own resources, a Turkey gradually freeing itself from the fetters of European alliances and becoming gradually but certainly strong enough to take its place in the Pan-Germanic chain as a State of worth, integrity, and importance. They see in the victory of Pan-Germanism the effective promise of the realization of such ideals. They see in the defeat of Pan-Germanism political and national death, the annexation of Turkey by its enemies, and the subjection of the Turks to the rule of the infidel. For these reasons they joined Germany in the first place. For these deep, fundamental reasons they hold staunchly to their friend. We shall be guilty of quibbling and of shortsightedness if we look for an explanation of Turkish policy in the seizure of warships and the breach of treaties.

TEACHING JAIL PRISONERS.

Commenting on the effort of Sheriff Otto to find a method to start a school for Union county's prisoners, so as to improve their condition in anticipation of the time when they will be freed, the Trenton Times says that the plan will probably appeal to sentimentalists and uplifters, but will hardly appeal to the Board of Freeholders, who must pay the teacher. The Times editorial was written before County Attorney Codington gave an opinion that there was no State law which permitted the appropriation of money for the purpose.

The Times thinks that the plan is impracticable because the term for which a person may be imprisoned in the county jail is limited to six months by law, which is entirely too short a period for a prisoner to make any substantial progress. There is a lot of truth in the contention of the Trenton paper, but certainly some plan should be devised to keep the prisoners busy while they are confined, and Sheriff Otto's suggestion is as good as any that has been made.

The movement to consolidate the Business Men's Association and the Business Men's Credit Association is one that should be pushed until the desired result is achieved. Two organizations which represent the same interests to a large extent, and which are primarily to promote business, either through creating more, or in seeing to it that people pay their bills for past business, should not be distinct organizations. It is to be hoped that the members of the Credit Association will look upon the plan as favorably as did those in the Business Men's organization.

The Federal League is trying to have organized baseball indicted as a combination in restraint of trade. If the older organizations had been successful in keeping their men from jumping to the Feds there might be some excuse for the complaint, but the manner in which the newer organization has been taking the players into its fold would lead to the belief that there has been no restraint whatsoever.

The New Brunswick Times thinks that because Mayor Calkins made recommendations for increasing the efficiency of the Plainfield government, we are dissatisfied with conditions here. No one is dissatisfied. We have the best government in the State, but want to improve on a good thing. Certainly there is no occasion to draw a comparison between this city and New Brunswick.

Mr. MacMurray's resignation as city clerk has certainly given a peculiar twist to the tangle which started when another candidate for the job put in an appearance. It is to be hoped that the trouble will be amicably adjusted, and that any misunderstandings will be thoroughly cleared up before the Council meets again. He's too valuable an official to lose.

TRADE BOARD ANNUAL SESSION

it should during the past quarter of a century for reasons that are obvious. He stated that co-operative and systematic advertising methods have trebled the population of the town of Westfield since it was granted its charter and that Passaic had swelled its population from 15,000 to 80,000, while Plainfield was growing from 15,000 to 20,000.

The speaker dwelt on the outstanding features prevalent in Plainfield, describing its railroad facilities, geographical advantages and residential possibilities. Discussing the subject of the equalization of taxes, subsequent to the introduction of the question by President Jeffery, asserting that he was personally in favor of a higher rate and a lower assessment, thereby equalizing the local rate with the county rate. Referred to as chairman of the Union County Republican Committee and one who might have some influence with coming legislature, Mr. Newcorn was asked if he would instigate a movement to have the Legislature adopt an amendment making it lawful for this city to vote on the consolidation question at the primary election, thereby doing away with the necessity of holding special elections. He replied that the present ballot marking system was so complicated that he did not think the correct results could be obtained at the primaries in a matter of this nature.

William Harding, representing the Building Trades' Council, was present at the session and introduced the City Hall topic, in accordance with certain ideas advocated by Mayor Leighton Calkins at a recent committee meeting. Mr. Harding suggested that the present site and building being used as a police station be remodeled and converted into a municipal building to house all of the city departments. He declared that an expenditure of $75,000 would reconstruct the present headquarters into a three-story building adequate to meet the demands of the community.

Eugene Laing took exception to Mr. Harding's remarks, declaring that to rebuild the present police station for this express purpose would be impractical. He cited reasons for this stand and it was the concensus of opinion among those present that this procedure was out of the question. He stated that the present building had even been a "failure as a police headquarters" and suggested that the Board look into the facilities offered by the present Y. M. C. A. building with a view to petitioning the Common Council to purchase that structure. He said that the place could probably be bought for $60,000 and that a few thousand dollars would put it in excellent condition for a City Hall. This proposition failed to meet with any marked response, however, it being considered that previous investigation had eliminated the Y. M. C. A. from consideration. If bought it is claimed that the architecture of the structure would have to be changed completely and the expense would be enormous.

Secretary VanSyckle read a letter written by President Jeffery to the nominating committee requesting that he be retired from the official rank owing to pressure of business and certain other obstacles that made it extremely hard for him to be present at the meetings. In the communication Mr. Jeffery outlined the aims of the Board as conducted under his policy and declared that the Board of Trade was the only organization now in operation that represented the combined interests of the borough and city as a unit. Other civic bodies represent certain wards and districts and confine their work to special departments in some instances.

SANITATION ON A HIGH PLANE

a single day. The president of the Board suggests as a means of facilitating the work of the department that policemen be instructed to report all nuisances, particularly violations of the anti-spitting laws.

The treasurer's report for the year shows receipts totalling $9,710.17 and disbursements amounting to $9,364.47, leaving a balance on hand of $345.70. There was a total attendance of 3,904 children and 1,950 adults at the Health Exhibit.

During the week of cleaning up the city was laid out in seventy-nine sections and some good work was done on a co-operative basis. Frequent inspections of food supply depots, particularly those where food is not properly protected from outside contamination, were conducted with good results. All bakeries and confectionery stores have been inspected at regular intervals, the total number of inspections conducted by the Board being 920. Our ice supply continues to be of the very best obtainable and no change has been made in the source. Our one supply of artificial ice is made from a deep drilled well, the water being pumped to the receiving tank from which it flows through filters before being frozen by the can method.

A total of 627 permits were issued during the year for eleven different things. Considerable time was spent by the Board in inquiring into the subject of municipal waste, but following the presentation of a lengthy report to the Common Council, the matter remains at a standstill. It is planned to increase the equipment at the local lavatory, thereby placing the present department on a higher plane of efficiency. During 1914 598 cases of communicable diseases came to the attention of the department against 300 in 1913. In this number fifteen deaths were recorded against thirty-one in 1913.

Fifty-nine resident cases of tuberculosis were reported, eleven being among the colored populace. A total of 209 places were disinfected by the Board during the year and 10,548 inspections were made. The milk supply in Plainfield last year came from sixty-nine dealers divided as follows: Twenty retailed from wagons, forty sold from stores and nine sold a few quarts only.

In submitting the report Health Officer Chandler states that some very definite plans have been made for the work of the coming year and among the new suggestions are the following: A system of regular inspections of restaurants, hotels and large boarding houses; to make tests of the air in theatres, public schools and large stores; and to make radical changes in regards to disinfection. The health officer recommends the employment of a nurse for the Infant Welfare Work.

The medical inspector of the Board during the year conducted fifteen examinations. The registrar of vital statistics, Miss Harriet O. Mattison, makes the following report: Marriages, 192; births, 198, and deaths,

No matter how the baby squirms or moves about, its tender bones will find a restful position in a Bloch Carriage. These are all important things for the mother to consider when buying a baby carriage. The most essential feature for the comfort and care of the baby is an easy riding running gear, with plenty of spring and resistency. The Cradle Gear and the new Reversible Gear used in the Bloch Pullman Coaches has many advantages. The Cradle Gear enables the carriage to have a lateral or cradle motion; and with the Reversible Gear you can swing the body of the carriage around so that the baby faces you. With all the splendid features mentioned above, Bloch Baby Carriages do not cost any more than the ordinary kinds.

We are selling a good substantial carriage for as low as $18.50. Others at $21,50, $23.50, $25.00 and up to $39.00.

We invite steady-going people to take advantage of the Club Plan.

MODIFICATION OF QUARANTINE RULES

Interstate Shipment of Cattle is Now Permitted by Authorities.

The quarantine restrictions on the counties of Atlantic, Burlington, Camden, Cape May, Cumberland, Hunterdon, Mercer, Middlesex, Monmouth, Ocean, Sussex and Warren, in New Jersey, have been modified so as to permit interstate shipments of live stock into these counties for any purpose, and from these counties for immediate slaughter. This order also permits the shipment of dressed carcasses, hides, hay, etc., from the above counties. The order also permits interstate shipments of live stock after bureau inspection and certification for immediate slaughter to places where Federal, State, or municipal inspection is maintained from outside a five-mile radius of premises infected with foot-and-mouth disease in the following counties of New Jersey: Bergen, Essex, Gloucester, Hudson, Morris, Passaic, Salem, Somerset and Union.

An order of the State Board of Health today revokes all previous regulations adopted by the Board concerning foot-and-mouth disease, which are incinsistent with the above-mentioned order of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Order No. 2 issued by the State Board of Health today, releases from quarantine all of Hunterdon and Warren counties; all of Essex county excepting the city of Newark, Irvington township and South Orange township; all of Union county excepting the city of Elizabeth and Union township.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The Northeastern Field Conference will be held in New York city on Tuesday and Wednesday, January 12 and 13. There will be meetings in the afternoon and evening on Tuesday and all day Wednesday. About seventeen local members have already signed to attend the conference. There will be some good speakers on both days.

Special rates have been made for the gym department for the remainder of the year.

A first aid to the injured class will be started the first week in February, two classes being held every week. There will be a course of ten lessons and they will be in charge of local physicians. One class will meet every Wednesday afternoon and the other on Thursday nights.

The regular Sunday service will be held this week from 4 to 6 o'clock.

MAYOR'S OFFICE HOURS.

Mayor Leighton Calkins has arranged to be at his office in the city building on North avenue every morning from 8:30 to nearly 10 o'clock to confer with anyone wishing to see him. He will also be at the office late in the afternoon and when necessary will be there in the evening and he can also be seen by appointment.

URGE THE FEEDING OF WILD BIRDS

New Jersey Audubon Society Offers Some Timely Suggestions.

The New Jersey Audubon Society is again calling the attention of the public to the fact that winter feeding of wild birds about the homes saves many that would otherwise die from hunger and exposure and also increases their abundance about such homes, to the great advantage of property owners.

During the severe weather of the latter part of last winter, many birds were saved as a result of the publicity given to the subject by the Audubon Society and the pamphlets which were sent free to all applicants, giving directions for winter feeding of the birds. The society is now renewing the offer to send such a pamphlet to every applicant, without any charge whatsoever.

Already there has been severe, freezing weather, when suet fastened on the trees furnishes a heat and vitality food, enabling the birds to better withstand the winter. Bread crumbs, mixed bird seed, meat scrap and grain should also be provided in sheltered places, where the feeding birds will be safe both from storm and prowling cats.

Even in winter birds will not confine their diet to such artificially supplied food, but will eagerly search the bark and twigs of the trees for dormant insects and their larvae and eggs. The press of the State is heartily co-operating with the society in urging people to send to the secretary, Demarest, N. J., for a pamphlet and help the good work along.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The bill at Proctor's Theatre for the last half of the week commencing tomorrow, will be headed by Miss Camille Jersonibo, the talented singing comedienne, supported by an excellent company, presenting the tabloid musical comedy, "A Japanese Honeymoon." It was written especially for Miss Personibo, and is replete with pretty girls, catchy music and stunning costumes. The other numbers on the program are as follows: McCowan and Gordon, presenting their original skit entitled, "Two In One;" Meistio and Company, novelty juggling contortionists; Nellie Kingling and Company, in the comedy sketch, "The Devil In Pose," and Winifred and Martin, comedians, presenting "The Chinaman and the Coon." The fifth episode of the serial film, "Zudora," the fascinating young girl detective, will be shown this afternoon and tonight, and on Friday, the first episode of the new Pathe serial, "The Exploits of Elaine," will be presented. In this latter photo-play, the leading parts are taken by Miss Pearl White and Arnold Daley. The big feature film has been announced for next Monday and Tuesday, when Wilton Lackaye will be seen in his great dramatic success, "The Pit."

GREETINGS

With all good wishes for the good New Year to all our friends and the friends of our friends and their friends; hoping that health and prosperity shall attend them in the years that are to come. Thanking you for your generous patronage in past and hoping for a continuance of the same in the year to come.

The Plainfield Senior Elk bowling team was not able to stop the New Brunswick "Bills" on the local alleys, last night, and the visitor advanced to first place, by taking the odd game, passing the Paterson five. Two of the games were very close, especially the last and deciding one, which was taken by the New Brunswick aggregation with a two-pin margin. Plainfield's victory came in the first game, when they had an advantage of eighteen pins over their opponents. In this game, Coyne, pinning third for the Middlesexers, hit a score of 232, and Campbell, anchor man for the home team, went this mark two points higher.

Plainfield fell down in the second game and Vail was the only one to make a score over the two century mark, his score being 204. Bastedo's 223 and McCormack's 203 put the game away for the visitors and tied up the games, making it necessary for New Brunswick to win the third in order to take first place. The scores of this game were 957 to 885. After the teams had tied up the match both put up a remarkable fight for the odd game, the New Brunswick five, with 1,008, winning out by two pins, Plainfield's score being 1,006. Kiely was the only member of the Queen City team that fell below the 200 mark, Nash getting the highest, which was 212. Johnny Campbell scored 234 and 202 for Plainfield and Vail twice hit the 204 mark. For the New Brunswick team Bastedo turned in scores of 174, 222 and 223, while Coyne hit the wood for 232 and 215.

Boro Lassies Set up a Record High Score Against Rahway.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team copped a decisive victory yesterday afternoon, at Rahway against the High School girls of that place, the final score being 58 to 4. The game was a runaway for the North Plainfield lassies, and they had no trouble in adding basket after basket to their score, until the list showed twenty-seven field goals and four fouls, to the Rahway girls' lone basket and two free throws at the sound of the final whistle.

The team work and passing of the borough delegation was exceptionally fine and the ball was continually in the hands of the two forwards, who seemed to drop it in at every try.

In the first period of play the losers scored their one and only basket of the game and in the second half they made but two points on free throws, while the victors registered 13 baskets and two fouls in the first and 14 baskets and two fouls in the second half.

Miss Spencer and Miss Burtis played good games in the forward positions, the former scoring 14 baskets and 1 foul and the latter making 7 baskets and 3 fouls. Miss Douglas made some fine shots from the center, dropping in 5 baskets, and Miss McCullough, who played center in the first half, also made a goal from the middle of the floor. Miss Keller and Miss Debele easily held down the opposing forwards.

SPORTING NOTES

Racing at Charleston ends next Saturday.

The St. Louis Browns will train at Houston, says Hedges.

Leslie Mann, of the Braves, is coaching the Amherst College basketball team.

The Business Men's Racing Association meet at New Orleans got away to a good start Friday.

Oakland has signed a full-blooded Indian pitcher, Harry Sampson. He is cross-eyed and has terrific speed.

Wild Bill and the rejuvenated Yankees may make it interesting on the American League circuit next season.

Umpire Quigley, of the National League, is a dancing master at Kansas City this winter. We may expect "The Bottle Dodgers' Trot" next.

Clabby and Gibbons will hook up January 21 at Milwaukee. it ought to be a hot contest, for it means much to both boys.

The Braves' addition of Sherwood Magee strengthens the champs' outfield, which, by the way, was its only weak point.

The Western Association is dickering for an eight-team league, by taking in Denison, Tex.; Paris, Tex., and Bartlesville, Okla.

Hugh Chalmers will not give any autos to baseball heroes next season. He has donated 11 in 5 years.

Now that Jack Johnson is in South America, his enemies in Chicago may try to put something over on him.

CONNIE MACK LAYS CLAIM TO LAJOIE

Veteran Cleveland Manager Will Play With Athletics Next Year.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 6—Napoleon Lajoie, for thirteen years second baseman and former manager of the Cleveland American League club, yesterday was released by President Charles W. Somers to the Philadelphia Americans. Manager Connie Mack came here from Philadelphia and closed the deal. No other players were involved in the deal, Mr. Somers said.

Lajoie in 1901 jumped the Philadelphia National League club to the newly born Philadelphia American League team, where he played under Connie Mack until June, 1902. On June 4, 1902, he played his first game with the Cleveland team. He was manager of the Cleveland team from 1905 to 1909.

Mack said he was pleased with the deal, and asserted that everything was satisfactory to Jajoie. He admitted that he expected to use Lajoie at second base, a vacancy caused by the sale of Eddie Collins to the Chicago Americans.

Lajoie made his 3,000th hit in the major leagues in the last game he played with the Cleveland club, on September 27 last.

ELIZABETH ELKS WIN PAIR FROM NEW YORK

There was close competition and classy pinning in the Elks' League bowling match between the Elizabeth and New York teams, on the latter's alleys last night, the visitors getting two games out of three. Elizabeth started with 919, winning by thirty-two pins, but the New York five, with 896, was able to annex the second game by twenty-five pins. The third and deciding contest saw the Elizabeths tally 970 while the New Yorks were twenty-five pins behind. Bock led the Elizabeths with 232 and 200 and Joe Nolte was there for 210. A. Westphal twice rolled 201 for New York, Wessel was there for 222 and Starr had 212.

The scores:

PARK CLUK ELKS AGAIN.

The Park Club and Elks' Club bowling teams will play the second game of their series Friday night, on the Park Club drives. The first match was played on the Watchung avenue alleys and two of the three games ment to the "Bills." Last year the Washington avenue pinners took the series and the Elks are out to settle up. Both teams will probably use the same men that bowled in the first match, the Elks' team being composed of the regular Senior League five.

CITY B. B. SCHEDULE HAS BEEN REVISED

P. H. S. and N. P. H. S. Teams to Meet in Next Championship Match.

The Interscholastic Basketball League schedule was changed considerably yesterday afternoon, when the three managers, Nicholas Zelmas, of Plainfield; Fred Dickerson, of Leals, and Duclos VanMater, of North Plainfield, met in the Y. M. C. A. and revised the dates of the championship games. It was found necessary for all the managers to cancel dates in order to make the proposed changes and both the Leal and North Plainfield bookers put off the game with the Morristown school.

Although there was no dissatisfaction shown by any of the managers with the schedule that was first arranged, it was thought unwise to have North Plainfield and Leals meet twice before either of these teams faced Plainfield. This would have been the case as the borough and private school aggregations have already played and planned to play the second match in Saengerbund Hall one week from today

The next match for the city title will be one that draws the largest crowd of the season, the meeting between the two High School teams in Saengerbund Hall, on January 23. Instead of playing the Leal five next Wednesday, Manager VanMater has booked them for Wednesday, February 3. The third game between Plainfield and North Plainfield will be played on either the city or borough court, a flip of the coin deciding the place after the second game. The games will be played as follows:

Saturday, Jan. 23—P. H. S. at N. P. H. S.

Friday, Feb. 12—N. P. H. S. at P. H. S.

Saturday, March 6—N. P. H. S. vs. P. H. S.

NEW SCHEDULE ANNOUNCED FOR Y. M. COLLEGE LEAGUE

A schedule of events has been arranged for the new College League that will start at the Y. M. C. A. next Tuesday afternoon, and the first thing on the program is the running broad jump. Basketball games will be played once a week and game tournaments will be held, including ping-pong, checkers, pool, quoits and baseball. A re-organization meeting will be held Saturday morning after class.

The schedule follows: Jan. 12, running broad jump; Jan. 14, basketball; Jan. 19, running high jump; Jan. 21, basketball; Jan. 26, 9-potato race; Jan. 28, basketball; Feb. 2, standing broad jump; Feb. 4, basketball; Feb. 9, standing hop, step and jump; Feb. 11, basketball; Feb. 16, fence vault; Feb. 18, basketball; Feb, 23, shotput; Feb. 25, basketball; Mar. 2, running hop, step and jump; Mar. 4, basketball; Mar. 9, tug-of-war; Mar. 11, basketball.

JUNIORS CHALLENGED.

Before claiming the 90-pound midget championship of this State, the Riverside Five, of the Geothal Boys' Club, in Newark, have decided to play some local teams and issue a challenge to any local five with a home court. George Kopsho, a prominent sporting man of Newark, will personally coach and manage the team. They will travel any place in the State, providing the expenses are partly paid. The line-up includes boys of great speed as well as some accurate goal cagers, namely. Eddie McKenna, formerly with the Kiowa Five; "Yump" Beers, of the Belleville Avenue Playgrounds Juniors, Charley Kopsho, of Barringer High School; "Swat" Mulhare, of Geothal Club, and Frankie Brown, of Summer A. C. Mr. Kopsho, the manager, resides at 72 Wakeman avenue, Newark.

EAGLES' MATCH POSTPONED.

The bowling match between the Plainfield and Elizabeth Eagles, which was scheduled for tomorrow night at Elizabeth, has been postponed until the following Monday. Tomorrow night Dave Maloney and Justus Bock will compete in a twelve-hour endurance contest, starting at midnight, on Smith's alleys, New York.

EAGLES' BOWLING.

Newark and Rahway pinners of the F. O. E. League will meet on the latter's alleys tonight.

FILES A PETITION IN GAS RATE CASE

Argument on Motion for a Re-hearing to Be Made on January 14.

Jersey City, Jan. 6—All of New Jersey was vitally interested today in the move of Counsel George L. Record who filed on behalf of Paterson and Passaic, the petition to the Court of Errors and Appeals asking for the re-opening of the famous Gas Rate decision rendered last month by Justice Parker—the decision which set aside the ninety cent gas rate and which would enable the Public Service Corporation to jack up the rate to one dollar or more. The argument on this motion for a rehearing is to be made in the State House in Trenton, on January 14.

Not only Paterson and Passaic, but the municipalities of the entire State are involved in this momentous proceeding, the outcome of which is fraught with the most far-reaching consequences. Already the Mayors of Jersey City, Newark, Trenton, Paterson and Passaic have called a State conference of the municipal executive officials of all the cities of the State for the purpose of backing up Mr. Record's fight for the re-opening of the suit, and to plan new legislation providing for the adequate taxation of the franchises of the trolley, gas, water, electric companies. This State conference is to be held in the Newark City Hall, on Friday, January 15, at 11 a. m.

In his petition for the re-opening of the case Mr. Record points to the fact that the decision against ninety cent gas was handed down by six of the sixteen judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals. Four of the judges voted against the decision and six of the judges had no part in the proceedings at all. Mr. Record contends that so vital a decision rendered by a minority of the court of last resort cannot command public confidence, and that every member of this court should welcome the opportunity to have every member who is constitutionally eligible to sit in the case. It is now possible to have this case reargued before a court in which there shall be three judges who did not take part in Justice Parker's dcision.

"This case is a matter of public importance," insists Mr. Record, "it involves a new important scheme of public policies sought to be inaugurated by the Legislature, it involves also large financial interests. A decision of so much importance ought to have the attribute of stability, and a decision such as this, handed down by a minority of the court, is so uncertain and unstable that the whole question is sure to be at some time, in some other case, again raised in the court for renewed discussion."

Mr. Record also said: "The effect of the decision of the court is to nullify the whole scheme of public utility companies recently enacted by the Legislature of New Jersey. That legislation proceeded upon the theory that the public should not be left to competition between public utility corporations as a means of securing just and reasonable rates; that a regulated monopoly in such business was better for the State than competition, and that therefore the State would recognize public utility corporations as virtual monopolies, and would through a proper commission itself fix the rates to be charged by the monopoly. The effect of this decision is that these companies are confirmed in their monopoly of the public utility field and that the power of the public through the Public Utility Commission or otherwise to fix rates is in effect nullified and denied. The reason for this is that the court in its decision holds that a substantial amount must be allowed by the Public Utility Commission for the value of the company's franchises." Mr. Record holds that such a method cannot be carried out with justice to the people.

CONFLICT IS DUE TO GOVERNMENT EVIL

Washington, Jan. 6—"The present conflict between the President and the United States Senate over appointment of Federal employes in varoius States, echinates a very grave evil in our form of government," asserts Jonathan Bourne, Jr.

"When the framers of the Constitution gave the President power to appoint 'by and with the advice and consent of the Senate,' they intended that no man should hold public office in the appointive classes, except for temporary vacancies during congressional recess, unless there be mutual agreement between the President and the Senate. The members of the Constitutional convention could not foresee the vast expansion of the territory of the United States and the enlargement of the scope of its activities.

"They had not the remotest conception of the number of persons who ultimately would be employed in the civil service of the nation, now numbering over 470,000. They assumed that the President and the Senate could make personal inquiry and form personal judgment upon the qualifications of prospective appointees.

"But conditions have undergone a change they could not foresee. Today over 10,000 appointments are made by the President 'by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.' Over a thousand appointments are made by the President without confimration by the Senate. There may be a dozen candidates for each position. It is absurd to imagine that any President can intelligently select the most desirable men for over 11,000 offices out of probably a hundred thousand applicants. If he gave his entire time to the matter, he could probably not intelligently fill 500 of these positions. Neither the President, nor the Senate as a body, can pass intelligently upon the qualifications of candidates for all appointive positions.

"The result has been that the President acts upon the recommendations of his political friends and legislative supporters, while the Senate usually acts upon the recommendation of the members from the State in which the appointee is to serve, if one or both of the members from such State be of the majority party. Hence, presidents usually favor senators and congressmen who support their policies, and reject the advice of those who do not.

"Patronage, therefore, has become a means by which the executive rewards those who agree with him on legislation, and punishes those who differ and have courage to exercise the inherent right and sworn duty of independent thought and action.

"Patronage has almost destroyed Congress as a co-ordinate branch of Government and made it largely subservient to the White House.

"Important legislation is now planned and written in the executive branch of government and forced through Congress partly by the aid of patronage.

"Such a proceedure is a menace to popular and representative government. It is the beginning of dictatorship.

"Since we no longer live under conditions prevailing at the time the Constitution was adopted, the wise course is to make the Constitution meet the needs of this day and generation.

"The remedy, it seems to me, is the adoption of a Constitutional amendment divesting the President of his power to nominate postmasters, collectors of customs and internal revenue, appraisers, registers and receivers of land offices, district attorneys and United States marshals, and provide that they shall be elected by the people in their several jurisdictions. Take from the President the power of their removal, give him only the power of suspension, with the right of appeal by the suspended employe in the Civil Service Commission, which would have the power of reinstatement of removal with proper administration of government. Federal office holders would still give bonds, be subject to executive suspension, but would not be politically subservient to the executive.

"Thus only can we destroy the evil power of patronage, free Congress from subserviency to the White House, and make Congress a co-ordinate branch of government in the sense in which it was intended to be and should be.

"Congress, consisting of 531 members, can far more intelligently and unselfishly legislate for one hundred million people than can any president. The sole power of a president should be administration, not legislation—suggestion, not coercion—a veto resubmission to Congress, not the executive barter and sale of patronage for the initiation or defeat of legislation. A one-man government cannot last."

MRS. CAROLINE B. ALEXANDER A BRIDE

Jersey City, Jan. 6—Former Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn, of this city, and Mrs. Caroline B. Alexander, a members of the Stevens family, of Castle Point, Hoboken, were married this morning in the Church of the Holy Innocents, Hoboken. The announcement of the marriage was a surprise to the friends of both, as no intimation of the event had been given out. Mrs. Alexander is a sister of Colonel Edwin A. Stevens, State road commissioner.

Mrs. Alexander has been active in philanthropic work in Hudson county, and is assistant probation officer. Her brother, Richard Stevens, is chief probation officer. It was when Mr. Wittpenn was supervisor of Hudson county and Mrs. Alexander was actively engaged in an effort to improve conditions at the county institutions that they became well acquainted.

In going over the plans with Mr. Wittpenn a fast friendship developed, ripening into love to be culminated by the marriage today. The church in which they were married, which is Episcopalian, was practically the gift of the Stevens family.

Mrs. Alexander secured a divorce from her husband about twenty years ago on the gound of desertion. Although at the time she engaged detectives to search for him and a wide search was made, no trace of him could be found. It was then that Mrs. Alexander decided to sue for a divorce.

Mrs. Alexander is the mother of former Assemblyman Archibald Alexander, who died while making a campaign for the Democratic nomination to Congress. She has been actively engaged in charity work in Hudson county for years, and is well known throughout the State for her deeds.

The Stevens family, of which Mrs. Alexander is a member, is one of the oldest and most prominent socially, in the State. Mrs. Alexander has a summer home in Bernardsville.

Mr. Wittpenn is now naval officer of the Port of New York and was prominently mentioned for nomination for Governor, but withdrew before the primary.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.—Adv.

A STUBBORN ARTIST.

Mansfield Wanted a Likeness, and the Painter Gave It.

Richard Mansfield once asked Frank A. Nankiveli to make a picture of him. The actor explained that he wanted an imitation of an old Roman coin with his own profile shown instead of Caesar's.

"Do you want an absolute likeness, or shall I idealize it a bit?" asked Nankivell.

"I want an absolute likeness," replied Mr. Mansfield stiffly, and the artist made a sketch of his patron.

When the completed picture—a splendid piece of work that looks as if it were embossed—was shown to Mr. Mansfield he was not pleased.

"It looks like a prizefighter," said Mr. Mansfield.

"That is not my fault," said Nankivell. "You know that you said you wanted a likeness."

There was a further exchange of courtesies, and then Mansfield suggested that the artist try again. "Excuse me," said Nankivell. "Once will do me."

"Well, change this picture a little," said the actor. "Perhaps you can fix it up."

"Not a fix," said the artist as he rolled up the picture and prepared to go with a parting shot. "You don't want an artist to draw your picture; you want a lithographer. Good day."

A GENERAL'S BAGGAGE.

It Is No Indication of the Fighting Quality of the Man.

It may be laid down as a military axiom that a general's ability is not measured by the amount of baggage he takes to war.

It is said that when General Sir John French embarked to take command of the British forces fighting with the French against the Germans in northern France all the baggage he took was contained in a single suit case.

When "Stonewall" Jackson started out on a campaign he took along no personal baggage except a withered carpetbag of ancient pattern, and even this modest receptacle was but half filled. Both these generals bear distinguished reputations as successful leaders.

Contrariwise, when Napoleon III., emperor of France, left Paris in 1870 to take command of the armies which, he said, were going straight to Berlin he took along forty-eight trunks besides a most voluminous kitchen and bedroom equipage. The Germans got every scrap of it all at Sedan. His son, the prince imperial, escaped from Sedan and the beleaguering Germans with his personal effects, which filled a special train of five cars.—Washington Star.

The Rack, Pace and Amble.

The rack is a gait of the horse between a trot and a gallop or canter, in which the fore feet move as in a slow gallop, while the hind feet move as in a trot or pace. It is usually an artificial gait, but is sometimes hereditary or natural. There is much confusion of terms in respect to this gait, due to the fact that the gait itself is somewhat varied, according as the racker carries the one or the other fore foot foremost in the galloping motion of the fore feet; that many confound the rack with the pace, the words often being used synonymously, and that many have mistaken the use of the words "pace" and "amble." There is abundant evidence that the American pace of today is the amble of Europeans of the last century and earlier. The motion of the hind feet is the same in the trot, the pace and the rack. In the trot the diagonal hind and fore feet move nearly simultaneously. In the pace or amble the hind and fore feet of the same side move nearly simultaneously.—Boston Globe.

Ceremonial Citron.

A valuable and somewhat curious variety of citron is cultivated along the shores of Albania, western European Turkey. It is known as the "easenia" or "esrog" (Hebrew). It is a small citron, weighing not more than twenty-five drams, just large enough to be held in the hand, and is thus used in the religious ritual by the Jews all over the world during the celebration of their feast of tabernacles. Such citrons, if sufficiently small, without blemish and possessing somewhat extended nozzles, are valued at from $4 to $10 each. These citrons are mostly exported from Parga, Turkey, and not from Corfu, as is generally supposed. A few are said to grow near Diakovto, Greece.

Rhode Island's Capitals.

Rhode Island adopted a constitution in 1842, which named five capitals for the state, designating Newport, South Kingston, Bristol, East Greenwich and Providence as the places for successive honor. In 1854 an amendment restricted the meeting places of the general assembly or legislature to two places—Newport and Providence. In 1900 Providence became the only seat of the legislature.

THE MAGIC OF LIFE

Unchecked It Would Kill Everybody and Everything.

ONLY BY DEATH DO WE EXIST.

Codfish Alone, If All Were Allowed to Live and Propagate Freely, Would In a Few Years Smother the Earth and Be Dropping Off Into Space.

Suppose for a moment that the equilibrium between life and death were to cease—imagine death arrested in its work! What would happen? The number of living beings upon the surface of the earth would be so great there would be no room for them. The atmosphere would be transformed into a compact mass of birds and insects which would be impenetrable even by the rays of the sun. In its superabundance life would suffocate and crush out life itself, and then death would rule supreme all at once. In a few days all organic life would have disappeared from the earth. It would be nothing but a waste and a desert.

That microscopic animal, the rotifer or rotator, lays thirty eggs at a time and starts seventy generations every year. If all these individuals remained alive at the end of a year their total would be so enormous as to make a sphere larger than the known universe.

The cynips, which produce the galls on the oak trees, the rose lice, the phylloxera and other aphidians or insects, which extract the sugar from plants, multiply in enormous numbers. One aphidian produces twenty-five descendants in a single day; on the second day we should have 25 by 25, or 625 individuals; the third day 15,625, and so on in geometrical proportion. Ten thousand of these insects, lighter than ether, weigh one-twentieth of a gram. Ten consecutive generations would make a cube equal to 1,000,000 men weighing 200 pounds each, and this in ten days.

One fly gives birth to about 20,000,000 individuals in a single summer. At the end of five summers of free propagation we should reach a fantastic figure—32 followed by 35 zeros.

Consider the vegetables for a moment. One plant of henbane can produce no less than 10,000 seeds in a single year. In five years it would have covered the entire surface of the earth with an impenetrable layer. And what about all the mushrooms that multiply so rapidly in a few days as to make all other vegetable life almost impossible?

The destruction of life is as cruel in the depths of the ocean as it is on earth, and the same terrible things would happen if there were no death in the sea. If there were no death one cod would in six years fill the ocean solid full and running over. Of course the original codfish wouldn't do it alone, but she would be responsible for it. One cod lays about 9,000,000 eggs in the year after she is three years old.

Three years later, if there were no death, all the progeny of this first fish would each deposit 9,000,000 eggs during that year, making a total of 81,000,000,000,000. Of course these figures are so great that they mean nothing to us except perhaps a gasp of astonishment. Now, take another three years—making six in all from the time the first cod deposited her eggs—each of these cod deposits 9,000,000 eggs, making the total of six years 64,081,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000! And this from one codfish only!

If there were no death, imagine what all the codfish would do at this rate! As a matter of fact, taking codfish alone, if there were no death among them, they would smother everything to death with their numbers in the first three years and leave the old earth dripping codfish into stellar space.

Medusae are destroyed in enormous numbers by aquatic animals, but the stomach of each medusa contains more than 100,000 of those microscopic marine algae called diatoms. One whale at a single mouthful swallows billions of these marine animalculae.

From the bottom to the top of the scale the scene is the same. The greater the propagating power of specie the greater and more rapid is the work of death, so as to preserve the equilibrium, without which all life would cease. Nature seems cruel to us, but is it?

Of course such a thing as no death is a great deal like an irresistible force striking an immovable body, for in an unbelievable short time the earth would be covered with animal and vegetable matter, the air packed solid with birds and all flying things and the seas made solid by fish. The result would actually be a paradox, to the effect that if there were no death everything would promptly be smothered to death. One need but give a few minutes' thought to this before he understands why there is death, why, after all, it is only by death that we live.—New York American.

YEAR'S RESUME OF STATE WORK

Plainfield Y. M. C. A. Has Had Its Part in Wide Spread Movement.

VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS

Poor Boys Catered to State Institutions Benefitted—Local Boy on the Honor List—Other Interesting Statistics.

The Young Men's Christian Associations of New Jersey, have just closed a year of worth while achievements in work with boys which has been revealed by the report recently submitted by the State Boys' Work Committee, of which Charles T. Kilborne, of East Orange, is chairman. Pupils of High and Preparatory Schools, inmates of institutions, farm boys, colored boys, boys of the city streets and boys employed in factories, mills and offices, have been reached through the various clubs and branches of the association.

During 1914 the associations of the State have come in touch with more than 11,000 boys and 656 in 76 different communities, representing 16 denominations, have taken some forward step in accordance with the principles and plan of the association. Of this number, 200 have pledged themselves for clean speech, clean athletics and clean living and nearly 150 to give up some bad habits.

Special emphasis has been placed on work with employed boys. Many of the industries of the State have been visited, followed by conferences with foremen and employers of boys, resulting in the organization of clubs in factories and department stores. Representatives of the Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce in different cities have given their hearty co-operation. 446 of these boys have been enrolled in night school classes and 185 have secured positions through the association. More than 600 farm boys have been interested by the county work department, under the leadership of B. R. Ryall, and they have exhibited prize vegetables at the various county agricultural exhibitions. During the year the secretaries have come in touch with over 7,000 High School students. Paterson, Camden, Summit and other cities and towns have reached a large percentage of the students in weekly Life Problem Discussion Clubs, which is also true of Plainfield, where 75 of the boys have enrolled.

The association has reached out for the poor street boys. In the Dundee section of Passaic a special club has been formed for the boys of foreign parentage. Colored boys have also been influenced by the associations at Atlantic City, Montclair, Orange, Madison and other places.

The State committee has continued its work in co-operation at the State Home for Boys at Jamesburg, giving entertainments, furnishing speakers, holding personal interviews and meeting a number of boys when paroled, which has been highly endorsed by the superintendent and chaplain. Many of the students of our preparatory schools have also been interested in the work and a conference is being planned for the students, to be held at Lawrenceville, January 23 and 24.

The Sproull Cup for the highest increase in efficiency during the year was won on the percentage basis by Asbury Park with 222 per cent., and Morristown on the numerical basis with 95 points.

Wawayanda has played a very important part in the year's program, for here the different delegations have outlined their policy for the year's work and have gained inspiration for the fall and winter. Hundreds of boys have been inspired with high and moral ideas and have learned many things of practical value and have received an early religious training at the morning Bible study and chapel services, while enjoying the life of the camp.

Ralph Woodworth, who represented the Ridgewood Association for three consecutive years, took the life-saving course and passed with a high percentage. His training in this branch of the work was tested last summer. While on a church picnic, a girl was in danger of drowning. She was rescued by young Woodworth, who recently received a medal from Congress for his bravery.

Another summer camp boy is Bonsall Stover, of this city, now a cadet in the United States Military Academy, at Annapolis. Mr. Stover has made the statement that "the influence of the camp for three years had been greatly instrumental in developing Bonsall and made it possible for him to accomplish what he did."

Edwin Gaentzer, who has just taken charge of the boys' work, is also a product of the association, for he became interested as a boy at Ridgewood, was active in the committee service, attended camp for nine years and served as a leader during his four years at Syracuse University.

The Plainfield Association is represented on the State committee by William D. Murray and Howard McWilliams, and the officers are F. Wayland Ayer, chairman, Camden; William Fellowes Morgan, vice-chairman, Short Hills; Edward P. Holden, recording secretary, Madison; John T. Sproull, treasurer, Arlington, and Charles A. Coburn, State secretary.

CHAPTER III.

The New Gentleman's Man.

HALF the time the wind blew a gale and Smoke Bellew staggered against it along the lake beach. In the gray of dawn a dozen boats were being loaded with the precious outfits packed across Chilkoot. They were clumsy, home-made boats, put together by men who were not boat builders out of planks they had sawed by hand from green spruce trees. One boat, already loaded, was just starting, and Kit paused to watch.

This wind, which was fair down the lake, here blew in squarely on the beach, kicking up a nasty sea in the shallows. The men of the departing boat waded in high rubber boots as they shoved it out toward deeper water. Twice they did this. Clambering aboard and failing to row clear, the boat was swept back and grounded. Kit noticed that the spray on the sides of the boat quickly turned to ice. The third attempt was a partial success. The last two men to climb in were wet to their waists, but the boat was afloat. They struggled awkwardly at the heavy oars and slowly worked off shore. Then they hoisted a sail made of blankets, had it carried away in a gust and were swept a third time back on the freezing beach.

Kit grinned to himself and went on. This was what he must expect to encounter, for he, too, in his new role of gentleman's man was to start from the beach in a similar boat that very day.

Everywhere men were at work, and at work desperately, for the closing down of winter was so imminent that it was a gamble whether or not they would get across the great chain of lakes before the freezeup. Yet when Kit arrived at the tent of Messrs. Sprague and Stine he did not find them stirring.

By a fire, under the shelter of a tarpaulin, squatted a short, thick man. "Hello!" he said. "Are you Mr. Sprague's new man?"

Kit nodded.

"Well, I'm Doc Stine's man," the other went on. "I'm five feet two inches long, an' my name's Shorty—Jack Short, for short. Sit down an' have some grub. The bosses ain't turned out yet."

Thomas Stanley Sprague was a budding mining engineer and the son of a millionaire. Dr. Adolph Stine was also the son of a wealthy father, and through their fathers both had been backed by an investing syndicate in the Klondike adventure.

"Oh, they're sure made of money," Shorty expounded. "When they hit the beach at Dyea freight was 70 cents, but no Indians. There was a party from eastern Oregon, real miners, that'd managed to get a team of Indians together at 70 cents when along comes Sprague an' Stine. They offered 80 cents an' 90, an' at a dollar a pound the Indians jumped the contract an' took off their straps. Stine an' Sprague came through, though it cost them three thousand, an' the Oregon bunch is still on the beach. They won't get through till next year.

"Have another cup of coffee, an' take it from me that I wouldn't travel with no such outfit if I didn't want to get to Klondike so blamed bad. They ain't hearted right. Did you sign a contract?"

Kit shook his head.

"Then I'm sorry for you, pardner. They ain't no grub in the country, an' they'll drop you cold as soon as they hit Dawson. Men are going to starve there this winter. What's your name, pardner?"

"Call me Smoke," said Kit.

"Well, Smoke, you'll have a run for your verbal contract just the same. They can sure shed maxuma, but they can't work or turn out of bed in the mornin'. We should have been loaded an' started an hour ago. It's you an' me for the big work. What d'ye know about boatin' on the water? I'm a cowman an' a prospector, but I'm sure tenderfooted on water, an' they don't know punkins. What d'ye know?"

"Search me," Kit answered.

It was 8 o'clock when the call for coffee came from the tent and nearly 9 before the two employers emerged.

"Hello," said Sprague, a rosy cheeked, well fed young man of twenty-five. "Time we made a start, Shorty. You and"— Here he glanced interrogatively at Kit. "I didn't quite catch your name last evening."

"Smoke."

"Well, Shorty, you and Smoke had better begin loading the boat."

Sprague strolled away among the tents, to be followed by Dr. Stine, a slender, pallid young man.

To move 3,000 pounds on the shoulders 100 yards was no slight task, and to do it in half a gale was exhausting. Then came the loading. As the boat settled it had to be shoved farther and farther out, increasing the distance they had to wade.

By 2 o'clock it had all been accomplished, and Kit was weak with the faintness of hunger. His knees were shaking under him. Shorty, in similar predicament, foraged through the pots and pans and drew forth a big pot of cold boiled beans in which were embedded large chunks of bacon. There was only one spoon, a long handled one, and they dipped, turn and turn about, into the pot.

Sprague and Stine arrived in the midst of this pleasant occupation.

"What's the delay?" Sprague complained. "Aren't we ever going to get started?"

Shorty dipped in turn and passed the spoon to Kit. Nor did either speak till the pot was empty and the bottom scraped.

"Of course we ain't been doin' nothin'," Shorty said, wiping his mouth with the back of his hand. "We ain't been doin' nothin' at all. And of course you ain't had nothin' to eat. It was sure careless of me."

"Yes, yes," Stine said quickly. "We ate at one of the tents friends of ours. But now that you're finished let us get started."

They waded out, and the employers got on board while Kit and Shorty shoved clear. When the waves lapped the tops of their boots they clambered in. The other two men were not prepared with the oars, and the boat swept back and grounded. Half a dozen times, with a great expenditure of energy, this was repeated.

"If you'll take my clothes I'll get her off," Sprague finally said.

The attempt was well intended, but before he could climb on board he was wet to the waist.

"We've got to camp and build a fire," he said as the boat grounded again. "I'm freezing."

"Don't be afraid of a wetting," Stine sneered. "Other men have gone today wetter than you. Now I'm going to take her out."

This time it was he who got the wetting and who announced with chattering teeth the need of a fire.

"If you give me a shot at it I think I can get her off," Kit said.

"How would you go about it?" Stine snapped at him.

"Sit down and get a good rest till a lull comes in the wind and then buck in for all we're worth."

Simple as the idea was, he had been the first to evolve it. The first time it was applied it worked, and they hoisted a blanket to the mast and sped down the lake.

Before He Could Clamber on Board He Was Wet to the Waist.

Sprague struggled with the steering sweep for a quarter of an hour and then looked appealingly at Kit, who relieved him.

"My arms are fairly broken with the strain of it," Sprague muttered apologetically.

Kit steered the length of Lindeman, displaying an aptitude that caused both young men of money and disinclination for work to name him boat steerer.

Between Lindeman and Lake Bennett was a portage. The boat, lightly loaded, was lined down the small but violent connecting stream, and here Kit learned a vast deal more about boats and water. But when it came to packing the outfit Stine and Sprague disappeared, and their men spent two days of back breaking toil in getting the outfit across.

They came to the rapids—first the Box canyon and then, several miles below, the White Horse. The Box canyon was adequately named. It was a box, a trap. Once in it, the only way out was through.

On either side arose perpendicular walls of rock. The river narrowed to a fraction of its width and roared through this gloomy passage in a madness of motion that heaped the water in the center into a ridge fully eight feet higher than at the rock sides. The canyon was well feared, for it had collected its toll of dead from the passing gold rushers.

Tying to the bank above, where lay a score of other anxious boats, Kit and his companions went ahead on foot to investigate. They crept to the brink and gazed down at the swirl of water. Sprague drew back, shuddering.

"My God!" he exclaimed. "A swimmer hasn't a chance in that."

Kit scarcely heard. "We've got to ride that ridge," he said. "If we get off it we'll hit the walls."

"And never know what hit us," was Shorty's verdict.

"That's what I say," a stranger, standing alongside and peering down into the canyon, said mournfully. "And I wish I were through it. I've been here for hours. I am not a boatman, and I have with me only my nephew, who is a young boy, and my wife. If you get through safely will you run my boat through?"

Kit looked at Shorty, who delayed to answer.

"He's got his wife with him," Kit suggested.

"Sure," Shorty affirmed. "It was just what I was stoppin' to think about. I knew there was some reason I ought to do it."

Again they turned to go, but Sprague and Stine made no movement.

"Good luck, Smoke, Sprague called to him. "I'll—er—I'll just stay here and watch you."

"We need three men in the boat, two at the oars and one at the steering sweep," Kit said quietly.

Sprague looked at Stine.

"I'm cursed if I do," said that gentleman.

"We can do without them," Kit said to Shorty. "You take the bow with a paddle, and I'll handle the steering sweep. All you'll have to do is just to help keep her straight. Once we're started you won't be able to hear me, so just keep on keeping her straight."

They cast off the boat and worked out to middle in the quickening current. From the canyon came the ever growing roar. The river sucked into the entrance with the smoothness of molten glass, and here, as the darkening walls received them, Shorty took a chew of tobacco and dipped his paddle.

The boat leaped on the first crests of the ridge, and they were deafened by the uproar of wild water that reverberated from the narrow walls and multiplied itself. They were half smothered with flying spray. At times Kit could not see his comrade at the bow. It was only a matter of two minutes, in which time they rode the ridge three-quarters of a mile and emerged in safety and tied to the bank in the eddy below.

Shorty emptied his mouth of tobacco juice he had forgotten to spit and spoke. "Say, we went a few, didn't we? Smoke, I don't mind tellin' you in confidence that before we started I was the gosh dangdest scaredest man this side of the Rocky mountains. Now I'm a bear eater. Come on an we'll run that other boat through."

After running the stranger's boat through Kit and Shorty met his wife, a slender, girlish woman whose blue eyes were moist with gratitude. Breck himself tried to hand Kit $50 and then attempted it on Shorty.

"Stranger," was the latter's rejection, "I come into this country to make money outa the ground an' not outa my fellow critters."

Breck, the stranger, rummaged in his boat and produced a demijohn of whisky. Shorty's hand half went out to it and stopped abruptly. He shook his head.

"There's that blamed White Horse right below, an' they say it's worse than the Box. I reckon I don't dast tackle any lightnin'."

Several miles below they ran in to the bank, and all four walked down to look at the bad water. The river, which was a succession of rapids, was here deflected toward the right bank by a rocky reef. The whole body of water, rushing crookedly into the narrow passage, accelerated its speed frightfully and was uplung into huge waves, white and wrathful. This was the dread mane of the White Horse and here an even heavier toll of dead had been exacted. On one side of the mane was a corkscrew curl-over and suck-under, and on the opposite side was the big whirlpool. To go through the mane itself must be ridden.

As they watched a boat took the head of the rapids above. It was a large boat, fully thirty feet long, laden with several tons of outfit and handled by six men. Before it reached the mane it was plunging and leaping, at times almost hidden by the foam and spray.

Shorty shot a slow, sidelong glance at Kit and said: "She's fair smokin', an' she hasn't hit the worst. They've hauled the oars in. There she takes it now. God! She's gone! No! There she is!"

Big as the boat was, it had been buried from sight in the flying smother between crests. The next moment, in the thick of the mane, the boat leaped up a crest and into view. To Kit's amazement he saw the whole long bottom clearly outlined. The boat for the fraction of an instant was in the air, the men sitting idly in their places, all save one in the stern, who stood at the steering sweep. Then came the downward plunge into the trough and a second disappearance.

Three times the boat leaped and buried itself. Then those on the bank saw its nose take the whirlpool as it slipped off the mane. The steersman, vainly opposing with full weight on the steering gear, surrendered to the whirlpool and helped the boat to take the circle.

Three times it went around, each time so close to the rocks on which Kit and Shorty stood that either could have leaped on board. The steersman, a man with a reddish beard of recent growth, waved his hand to them.

The only way out of the whirlpool was by the mane, and on the third round the boat entered the mane obliquely at its upper end. Possibly out of fear of the draw of the whirlpool the steersman did not attempt to straighten out quickly enough. When he did it was too late. Alternately in the air and buried, the boat angled the mane and was sucked into the stiff wall of the corkscrew on the opposite side of the river.

A hundred feet below boxes and bales began to float up. Then appeared the bottom of the boat and the scattered heads of six men. Two managed to make the bank in the eddy below. The others were drawn under, and the general flotsam was lost to view, borne on by the swift current around the bend.

Of Interest to Women and the Home

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

DR. KATHARINE BEMENT DAVIS.

In her talk to the Monday Afternoon Club, Dr. Katharine Bement Davis made only one short allusion to Woman Suffrage, but her allusion indicated clearly her strong belief in the educative value of self-government for all classes of adult human beings. Dr. Davis is in point of fact a convinced Suffragists, and vice president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. In a speech at a big mass meeting in New York she told her audience that of the 40,000 prisoners who have passed through my department, only 5,000 were women. She then told of the shame she felt when she showed the Mayor of Toronto through the prisons one day after preparing him by saying, "I will show you what not to do." She pictured the prisons of New York, "probably the most mediaeval in the country," as having terrible conditions.

She spoke of the large penitentiary where cells with half-air spaces were comparable with the Black Hole of Calcutta; of how the cooking, laundry work, sewing and general work was all done by men, while the women prisoners had to twiddle their thumbs indoors for fear they would contaminate the men and of the awful clothes and shoes that the men made for them. She laid this to the fact that prisons were built for and ruled by men.

Dr. Davis emphasized the evils of housing women of immorality in rooms with young girls, or deceased women with those who were clean, as had been done in New York. She said her appointment had been an innovation, but that it would not be the last. In declaring that the home was the place to work for betterment of conditions, not the institutions of reform, she related a parable of the establishment of an ambulance in a valley below a cliff to catch the people who fell from the cliff.

"Friends," she said, "vote for women. Put a fence around that cliff instead of keeping an ambulance in the valley."

Dr. Davis is commissioner of Charities and Corrections for New York.

THE APPOINTMENT OF WOMEN TO PUBLIC POSITIONS.

It is cheering to note that our own State is keeping up with the times. We read, with increasing frequency, that in New Jersey women are appointed to certain public positions where their sex and their training make them particularly desirable public servants.

MAYOR TO APPOINT WOMAN.

Citizens of West Orange Asked to Suggest Names.

Orange, N. J., Jan. 4.—Mayor Farnham Yardley, of West Orange, has asked the public to suggest names of women possessing tact and common sense for appointment to the town Board of Education.

He will nominate at least one woman on January 15.

TWO WOMEN APPOINTED AT NEW BRUNSWICK.

Mayor Austin Scott has appointed two women to important posts in New Brunswick. Mrs. Elizabeth Deshler is a member of the Board of Health to succeed Joseph F. Ridgeway.

Mrs. Drury W. Cooper, wife of a one-time Mayor of New Brunswick, will be a member of the Board of Education, succeeding Harry Burton when his term expires on February 1.

THE PROHIBITION VOTE IN CONGRESS.

We cannot close the Votes for Women column this week without comment on the prohibition vote in Congress. The following statement from the Woman's Journal should put a stop forever to the States' Rights argument as a means of setting aside a great national issue:

"An analysis of the prohibition vote in Congress last week shows matter of vital interest. The prohibition amendment was reported by both the judiciary and rules committees at the same time as the suffrage amendment, and the two have been closely connected by the administration leaders.

"A study of the vote shows, first, that the delegation from equal suffrage States voted 27 to 10 for prohibition. Illinois, where women can vote on local option but not for Congressmen, went 11 to 14 against prohibition, although the delegation of its neighbor State, Indiana, voted solidly against prohibition. More than that, however, the Southern delegations went on record as follows: North Carolina, solidly in favor; South Carolina, solidly in favor; Oklahoma, solidly in favor; Tennessee, solidly in favor; Mississippi, 7 to 1 in favor; Arkansas, solidly in favor; Florida, solidly in favor; Virginia, 8 to 2 in favor; West Virginia, solidly in favor; Kentucky, 7 to 4 in favor; Georgia, 8 to 3 in favor. These figures apply to those members present and voting. The only Southern delegations to give a majority against prohibition were those of Louisiana, Alabama, Texas and Maryland.

"The Southern States are the ones where the doctrine of State Rights is most strongly held. Woman suffrage is no more a matter of State Rights than prohibition. Will not these Southern Congressmen take as firm a stand on the question of enfranchising their wives, sisters, daughters and mothers? They will be closely watched when the vote on suffrage comes in the House."

TEACHING MEXICANS PEACE.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 6—American customs, the rights of property and of individual liberty, the present day plans of morality, and the rules of conduct that characterize America are being taught to 115 Mexicans in this city, and the school has the aid of the Mexican consul. The principles of peace are being emphasized in the school, which is conducted by the Y. M. C. A., and has been in successful operation for a year. Religion is tabooed, but the moral code is thoroughly taught.

TEACHER RESIGNS.

Miss Bertha Spencer, domestic science instructor in the North Plainfield School, has resigned her position, but will remain here until another teacher has been secured by the teachers' committee of the Board of Education. Miss Spencer has been connected with the borough school for the past two years. Her home is in Ware, Mass.

KENTUCKY FARMERS' WEEK.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 6—A number of agricultural and livestock meetings of Kentuckians are bringing to the College of Agriculture at State University, today, many breeders and farmers. It is Farmers' Week at the university, and the lectures and practical talks will extend until Friday.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How the Cold Water Was Warmed And Comforted.

It Was Hard Enough For Boys to Jump on It.

"DID you ever hear, kiddies, how the cold water was comforted?" asked daddy. "I'll tell you about it.

"I don't know that you will consider it a real story, but it seems so to me. This water lived in a pond that was fed by springs, and a little creek led out of the pond to a larger lake farther on, so the water in the pond was always fresh and did not know about things, and the water that could have told it about things had, of course, passed on long before. So it came that on a late fall day the water then in the pond wondered what made it so cold.

"'Huh, this is nothing!' said the wind. 'You wait awhile. You'll be all hard like a stone, and boys will jump on you.'

"The water didn't believe it and didn't bother to leave any warning word for the water from the springs which was to follow it. The water just laughed and passed into the creek, and the springs bubbled and gave forth other water to replace it.

"Well, at last one night along came Jack Frost, and he laid his cold hands on that water, and it seemed to stand still, and in about two days it was hard enough for boys to jump on it."

"Oh, daddy, you mean ice!" cried Jack.

"Exactly," said daddy. "And then the water that was ice or the ice that was water, as you please, cried that it was cold and frozen stiff, but Jack Frost just laughed.

"But time went on, and one day the south wind whispered to the water. Then somehow the frozen water felt better.

"Then the south wind blew, the spring rain came, the warm sun flamed, and the ice was all warmed into water again and flowed joyously into the creek, and old Jack Frost ran away just as fast as he could, because you know Jack Frost hates the heat of the sun.

"And then one day a little boy came to the bank of the pond to play. He was a very little boy and came with his mamma. While she was gathering wild flowers the little boy fell into the pond.

"He screamed, and his mamma jumped in after him, and because the water was so warm and 'comfy' the little lad did not catch cold, and he was not so very terribly frightened.

"Then his daddy went down to the pond and taught him to swim in the nice warm water.

"Good night, kiddies."

"Good night, daddy."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Mother, I have a plan I want to try," said Bertha Sutley as she entered the sewing room.

Her mother looked up expectantly and Bertha continued: "Marjory is learning to run the house. Can't I do it, too?"

"Run the house?" questioned the mother. "I don't understand."

"Marjory is doing all the buying and planning all the meals; taking the responsibility of the work and Mrs. Amos is helping. She's second girl, in fact," laughed Bertha. "Next week the summer vacation begins and that will give me the time, and I want to learn how to do it."

"I was thinking of some such plan for this summer, but I hate to see you tied down before you are rested," replied her mother.

"Change is rest, you know," said the excited girl. "So it is settled that I am to begin next week?" and she put her arms around her mother's neck.

"Certainly, if you wish it. I think every girl should know how to manage a house," replied the mother, smiling.

"I shall give you $2.50 a week for a person and out of that you must pay for the ice, get all laundry supplies and run the table," said Mrs. Sutley the following Monday. "Let me give you a few 'don'ts' to begin with. Don't wait until half-past eleven to plan your luncheon, then chase over to the store to see what you are going to have. That is an extravagant way to do, for you are limited to a very few things, and ready cooked things at that. By getting them, you are paying for labor, and that comes high in America. Make a general plan for all your meals for the week on Monday. Knowing a long time before hand what you are going to cook will enable you to get the cheaper cuts of meats that require long cooking, as casserole dishes and pot roasts. Meats prepared that way are fine eating and are more nutritious than fries.

"Don't buy things in fancy packages. You can't eat the boxes and it costs money to make them, and again you are paying extra for labor. Unless things are to be used without washing—and I prefer to wash everything myself—I am not willing to pay for the fancy case. My grocer told me that the very same macaroni and nodles that I buy in bulk cost 4½c more a pound in the boxes, and then you do not get a pound net, either.

"Don't let your butcher weigh the heavy paper with your meat, nor allow him to touch the scales before the needle ceases to vibrate.

"Go to market or to the huckster's wagon and select your own fruit and vegetables. You know what you are getting then."

"Thank you, mother," said the girl. "I will try to remember all you tell me. I am going to market now," and she put on her hat.

"When the egg man comes, order our winter supply of eggs. I will lend you the money to pay for them. Of course you would not have enough in one week's money, but gradually out of your weekly allowance you can pay it back. Tell the man to be sure the eggs are fresh and sterile. I preserve them with water glass. I can show you how, or the druggist will tell you when you buy the water glass. You can get eggs for 22c a dozen now and eggs were 50c part of the time last winter, and we had fine eggs. After soaking them overnight in fresh water you could not tell them from fresh eggs."

"My, that was a saving," said Bertha. "I hope I can learn to manage as well as you do," and she closed the door behind her.

CONFERS WITH NEW Y. M. C. A. BOYS' SECRETARY

Charles R. Scott, of Newark, State secretary of Y. M. C. A. boys' work, visited the local association yesterday afternoon, and conferred with Edward Glaentzer, the new boys' secretary, who took up his work here Monday. Mr. Scott is already making plans for the annual summer encampment at Wawayanda Lake. Mr. Scott stated that all the ice for the summer supply had been put in the houses from the lake. He said that wild animals have been seen in the vicinity of the lodge recently.

The State boys' work committee will meet some time during the first of February to decide on a date for camp opening. A large number of local boys will undoubtedly attend the camp this year as in the past.

NATIONAL MISSIONARY OFFICERS TO VISIT HERE

One of the important missionary gatherings in this city in several years will be held at the First Baptist church on Wednesday, February 17, at which time the national officers of the Baptist Missionary Society, of Boston, will be here. The national officers have planned to visit all important centres throughout the country this year.

The Women's Missionary Circle, of the First Baptist church, which has arranged for the meeting, will invite the women of all Baptist churches in Plainfield and vicinity, as well as of the other churches of the city and borough. The meeting will be held for the purpose of arousing a deeper interest in missions, both foreign and home, and addresses will be made by the national officers. An attractive program is being prepared.

WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICES.

Week of prayer services scheduled for this evening at various local churches are as follows: Union service at the First Presbyterian church, speaker, Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, subject, "The New Birth;" Hope chapel, speaker, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel; Monroe Avenue Methodist church, Rev. Dr. Edward F. Randolph, of St. James' church, Philadelphia; Warren chapel, Rev. Frederic L. Greene, pastor of Hope chapel; Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, subject, "Prayer for Spiritual Preparation for the New Year," Proverbs 16:1-7 and Galatians 1:11-17.

PRAYER SERVICE TOPICS.

The week of prayer is being observed in the Congregational church this week. The first meeting was held last night. The subject tonight will be "Praper for Spiritual Preparation for the New Year," and the subject for the Friday night meeting, the last of the week, will be "Prayer for Practice of Christian Love and Our Young People for Christian Service." The Friday night meeting will be a preparatory service and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed on Sunday.

Y. W. C. A. SWIMMING CLASS.

A swimming course is to be started for members of the local Y. W. C. A. and the pool of the High School will be used. The class will meet every Monday night from 8 to 9 o'clock and will be under the instruction of Miss Wetherell, the association physical director. Any girls who are interested in learning to swim can get any information at the association building.

NOVEL DOG SHOW TO BE HELD HERE

ONE OF TWO EXHIBITS

Will Precede Annual Bench Show—A. C. Wilmerding Again Elected President at Annual Meeting Held Last Night—Other Officers.

An innovation in local sporting circles, arranged primarily for the benefit of lovers of fine canines, will be introduced here this winter in the form of an Indoor Dog Show under the auspices of the Plainfield Kennel Club. This decision was arrived at during the annual meeting of the club held last night in the Queen City Hotel, when A. C. Wilmerding, of Belvidere avenue, was re-elected to the presidency. The other officers chosen for the ensuing year follow: Vice president, R. F. Smith, secretary, F. N. Anderson; treasurer, R. W. K. Anderson. J. J. O'Donohue, owner of Donnybrook Farms, was elected to the board of governors, which consists of the club's officers and one other member.

The indoor event promises to attract country-wide prominence among breeders of fine dogs and the entry list will probably include the choicest specimens of the canine world. Considerable enthusiasm was awakened among the members regarding the proposed event and although the date has not been definitely decided upon active work toward preparing for the show will start at once. This will be one of two big shows to be conducted by the club during the coming year, the other being the annual outdoor bench exhibit.

Plainfield has many dog fanciers and special inducements will probably be offered as an incentive to local competition. In keeping with the other shows held under the Queen City club's auspices those held during the coming year will offer many valuable prizes.

Reports submitted by various committees of work accomplished during 1914 indicate that an especially active year has been completed and keen interest has been aroused in all branches of work.

MRS. MARY ELLEN RYNO DIES AT MT. PLEASANT

Mrs. Mary Ellen Ryno, aged 73 years, wife of the late Andrew J. Ryno, of Mt. Pleasant, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Mellick. Her husband died several years ago. Mrs. Ryno is survived by eight children, three daughters and five sons. They are Mrs. Alexander Frazee, of Plainfield Mrs. William Mellick, of Mt. Pleasant and Mrs. Frank Pfister, of Rhode Island, and Jesse, Hezekiah, Joel, Henry and Walter Ryno, all of Plainfield.

The funeral will be held at the home of Mrs. Mellick, Mt. Pleasant, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock and the burial will be in the Baptist cemetery at Scotch Plains.

SPEAKERS FOR TONIGHT'S WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICES

Week of prayer services will be continued this evening. The union service will be held at Trinity Reformed church, with Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, in charge. Dr. Strong's sermon will be on the subject, "Growth in Grace."

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, will again conduct the service at that church, speaking on the subject, "Prayer for Christian Progress in the World, for Missionary Effort and Social Betterment." Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, pastor of the First Methodist church, will conduct the service at the Monroe Avenue Methodist church, while Rev. Evarts C. Conover, pastor of the Temple Baptist church, will be in charge at the Park Avenue Baptist church. William D. Murray is the leader scheduled for the service at Warren chapel, while Emerson E. Parvin will speak at Hope chapel.

ISIDORE KUNZMAN CHOSEN PRESIDENT

Y. M. H. A. at Annual Meeting Plan for Active Season.

The Plainfield Young Men's Hebrew Association held its annual meeting last evening, receiving the reports of the various officers and committees, and electing the officers for the ensuing year. Plans were completed for the lecture by Rabbi Charles J. Friend, of Harrisburg, Pa., on "Mormonism from the Jewish Standpoint," to be delivered at the Lyric Theatre, Sunday, January 17, at 8 o'clock. The lecture is to be illustrated by a number of stereopticon slides, showing many views in and about Utah. Rabbi Friend has delivered this lecture in many of the larger cities, and has always been well received by those of the Hebrew faith.

Announcement was also made of the debate between the local association and the Morris County Y. M. H. A., to be held February 7. Further particulars of this event will be announced later. Henry Hurwitz, chancellor of the Intercollegiate Menorah Association, will lecture before the Plainfield Association, February 10, on the subject, "Jewish Ideals."

The following were elected to the board of directors: Six months term, I. Kunzman, Abe Schwartz, M. Olinger, Dr. Ellis Campus, S. Krauthamer and Dr. Meyer Moledezky; one year term, A. H. Richards, Samuel Rothberg, Louis Rothberg, Henry Rosenbaum and M. Block. After the conclusion of the meeting the new board met and organized as follows: President, Isaac Kunzman, first vice-president, Samuel Rothberg; second vice-president, Dr. Ellis Campus; secretary, Benjamin Markowitz; treasurer, Abe Schwartz; council of education, Dr. Meyer Moledezky, chairman; Gustave Lang, secretary; Samuel Rothberg and M. Markowitz; house committee, H. Schwartz, Dr. Ellis Campus, Victor Miron, Gustave Lang, H. H. Richards and S. Krauthamer. The board will meet next Wednesday evening to complete organization.

AN APPEAL FOR SEWING MACHINES AND CHAIRS

Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, who has undertaken to provide work for twenty-five women in the garage at her home on West Eighth street, makes an appeal for the use of several sewing machines and kitchen chairs. The women employed by Mrs. Stewart are engaged in making garments for the sick, wounded and convalescent soldiers in the European war as well as the Belgian refugees.

A large room on the second floor of the garage is being used for the work at present and it is expected soon to open a second room ver the stable. The hours of work are from 8 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

FIRE IN ELIZABETH STORE.

Auctioner Robert Murray, of West Front street, received a telephone message late Tuesday night from Elizabeth that his store at 51 West Jersey street, that place, was on fire caused by the upsetting of an oil stove on the second floor of the building. Owing to the promptness of the firemen in responding to the alarm, most of Mr. Murray's goods were saved. The loss has not yet been adjusted as Mr. Murray has been detained at home several days by illness and was unable to go to Elizabeth.

INJURED HIS HAND.

Thomas Gough, of Grandview avenue, the borough, is detained from work by a badly crushed hand, the result of an accident in the foundry at Pond's. He was caught unawares by the fall of a ton-and-a-half weight, miraculously escaping the loss of his entire arm. He was given treatment by Dr. Raphael Yood and will be unable to use the hand for several weeks.

POSTPONED AGAIN.

Another postponement of the case of the Public Service Gas Company vs. David C. Allen, of Harrison avenue, the borough, which was to have been heard yesterday before Justice Thomas H. Snape, occurred. The hearing has been set for next Wednesday afternoon at the borough police court.

CLOSET FIRE.

A closet fire occurred last evening about 6 o'clock at the home of William McCarthy, 649 East Sixth street. An alarm sounded from box No. 63 brought the department to the scene, where the blaze was extinguished by chemicals. Damage amounted to $50.

CITY TREASURER ARNOLD PRESENTS HIS REPORT

Attention is called to the annual report of City Treasurer William F. Arnold which appears in another part of the Daily Press today. It covers in a clear and comprehensive way every department of the city, showing at a glance the various amounts apportioned to each one, what has been expended and the balance on hand. It also includes the school account.

Another feature of this year's report is the publication of a bond table, showing the bond issues on account of sewer, schools, police headquarters and brick pavement. The statement is prepared in such detail that interested citizens can easily gain any desired information as to the city's finances.

SETTLES WITH ABRAMS AND DREIER FOR FIRE

The Frederick A. Martin Company has settled with Morris Abrams and Harry Dreier for the damage done by fire to the building owned by them and occupied by the Eames hat store and Warnock's bakery. The amount of settlement was $700.

The Abrams and Drier property was damaged by flames on Sunday morning, December 27, the contents of that store being totally destroyed and fixtures and stock in the Warnock store damaged by smoke.

SEVENTEEN PATIENTS ARE RECEIVED DURING DECEMBER

There were 77 patients at Bonnie Burn Sanitorium on December 1, according to the report of Dr. J. F. Runnels, superintendent. Seventeen patients were admitted during the month, twelve men and five women. Ten patients were discharged, five men and five women, in which number is included seven deaths, four men and three women. The largest number present at any time has been 86, the smallest 78, the daily average being 81.6.

The admissions are classified as to the stage of the disease as follows: Moderately advanced, two men and one woman; far advanced, ten men and four women, making the total number seventeen.

AWARD CONTRACTS FOR NEW SCHOOL

New York Firm Gets General Work After Much Deliberation.

At a meeting of the Board of Education held last night, the Board acted on a report of the building committee which has been investigating the bids submitted at the meeting of December 9 for the erection of the Evergreen Avenue School and made the awards.

The general contract was awarded to John Lamdy, of New York, whose figure was the lowest submitted. After due consideration was given, the alternates contained in his bid and in the bid of the Berry-Goodwin, Company, of Philadelphia, the next lowest bidder, it was decided that the New York bid was the lowest. It was found possible to accept an alternate offered by Mr. Lowry for floor construction, which reduced his bid by $1,200; this being alternate No. 10 of the bids submitted.

So close was the figuring of the bidders on the general contract that there was less than $200 difference on the two low bidders. The Board also awarded the three subsidiary contracts for the plumbing, the electrical work and the heating and ventilating wark as follows; Plumbing contract, George J. Tobin, of Plainfield; electrical contract, Commercial Construction Co.; heating and ventilating, George J. Tobin, of Plainfield. In each case the award was to the lowest bidder.

Official notice was received of the appointment by the Mayor of Frank J. Hubbard as a member of the Board of Education to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of William S. Tyler.

MINOR CHANGE IN TRUNK LINE ROUTE

Detail Work Occupied Time of Commission at Last Night's Session.

Members of the Plainfield Common Council and Dunellen and North Plainfield Councils forming the Joint Sewerage Commission, met in the city building last night and disposed of a bulk of detail work that has been brought to their attention recently. Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, the Newark law firm that has charge of the legal matters connected with the proposed construction work, were represented at the meeting, and several matters were referred to that firm for disposition after being considered by the Commission.

As a means of avoiding certain conflicting conditions that have arisen over the proposed route of the sewer trunk line to the Darling farm, a change in the original route was suggested and definite action in the matter is pending. The route at the present extends along North avenue, Dunellen, and it is proposed to cut through a corner of the Voorhees property at Dunellen if this can be done without entailing legal difficulties. It is not known whether or not the present form of contract will have to be changed in order to effect this shift, but the subject was referred to the legal advisers.

Ulysses Tingley, of the North Plainfield Council, was appointed a member of the auditing committee of the Commission to succeed Edmund Rushmore, whose term as a councilman expired at the last meeting of the body. The attorneys reported that the research work they had been instructed to do on properties involved in the trunk line route had been completed. Several outstanding bills were ordered paid.

RELIEF WORK IS PROGRESSING

Citizens Committee Has Been Able to Keep Many Men Employed.

JANUARY NEEDS $1,000

Mrs. Percy H. Stewart is Employing a Number of Women to Make Garments for the Belgians—Woodbrook Farm Being Cleared.

Relief work for the unemployed in Plainfield is progressing satisfactorily under the direction of the citizens committee which was formed early last month to solve the problem. A meeting was held in the Mayor's office last night, and gratifying reports were received, indicating that it will be possible to find employment of some kind for nearly every man in need of it.

After the meeting had been called to order by William M. Wherry, Jr., chairman, Mayor Calkins, who becomes a member by virtue of his office, was welcomed by the Commission and in a short speech expressed his appreciation of what the Commission had accomplished and his desire to help in the work in every possible way.

A resolution was passed thanking former Mayor tSewart for his services to the cause, and Mr. Stewart was made a members of the employment committee.

S. T. Carter, Jr., chairman of the relief committee, reported expenditures of about $800 for the month of December. He emphasized the fact that all of the money paid out by the Commission for relief has been in

ELKS PLAN FOR FOURTH SOCIAL EVENT IN CLUB

The fourth of a series of winter social events planned by members of the local lodge of Elks will be held in the Watchung avenue clubhouse Thursday night, January 14, a fine program having been arranged by the committee in charge. Dancing, as usual, will be the leading attraction during the evening and various forms of entertainment will be provided for those who do not indulge in the terpischorean art.

The former affairs have been well patronized by members and their invited guests and the one next week gives promise of being replete with new features.

BURNED IN ATTEMPT TO PUT OUT CLOSET BLAZE

In an attempt to put out a blaze that had started in the clothes closet of her apartment at 308 East Front street, Mrs. Charles Shantz was badly burned about the face and hands this morning, medical attention being required. The fire was discovered shortly after 9 o'clock and a telephone alarm was sent into fire headquarters, followed closely by a call from box No. 15.

When the firemen arrived they found the flames in the corner of the room near the closet and managed to extinguish them with chemicals. Dr. Pittis attended Mrs. Shantz. The damage amounted to about $75.

PETER A. VAN FLEET IS GIVEN BIRTHDAY SURPRISE

Peter A. VanFleet, of East Front Front street, was seventy years old yesterday and last night he was given a surprise party at his home, the affair being arranged by his daughter, Miss May VanFleet. The evening was spent playing "500" and enjoying a program of vocal and instrumental music furnished by the guests. Later in the evening supper was served.

Miss Teresa Snyder and Mrs. Charles D. Clark received the first and second prizes for the women in the game of "500," while William N. Tier and Charles D. Clark won the honors for the men. The home was attractively decorated for the occasion with Christmas greens and flowers.

SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY.

William Wright will, this evening, observe the seventh anniversary of his conversion, at Rescue Mission, the service being held at 8 o'clock. Special music has been planned for the occasion.

DEMOCRATS PLAN FOR MASS MEETING

Prominent Speakers to Be Heard in Opposition to Burnett Bill.

For the purpose of arousing interest in opposition to the Burnett bill, the Plainfield Democratic Club is planning to hold a mass meeting possibly in the High School some night next week. The committee in charge of the details hopes to have as speakers for the meeting Rabbi Wise, of New York city, who is familiar with the immigration question, and United States Senator James E. Martine and Congressman William E. Tuttle, Jr., both of whom are supporting President Wilson in his opposition to the bill.

The one important feature which is so strongly objected to by many is the clause which provides for an illiteracy test. The Plainfield Democratic Club at its meeting Tuesday night adopted a resolution opposing the Burnett bill and a copy of the resolution will be forwarded to Washington with a request to President Wilson that he veto the bill in case it is passed by the United States Senate.

The committee arranging for the meeting is anxious to secure good speakers and it was understood today that it had been given its choice of several prominent men including two former Congressman. The idea is to obtain a strong public protest against the bill with the idea of influencing Congress in its action regarding the bill.

EIGHT INVESTIGATIONS OF SUBWAY ACCIDENT

New York, Jan. 7.—Eight investigations are underway today into the subway accident yesterday, which caused the death of a woman and injury to 204 persons, of whom 77 are still in hospitals.

All of those injured, when they were trapped in two trains, motionless in an underground tunnel filled with deadly fumes from the short-circuiting of high-powered electrical current cables, are reported doing well, and will recover sufficiently to be discharged within two or three days.

The Interborough reported this morning that subway trains were running on normal schedules after a lapse of twenty-two hours, the longest since the subway was opened in 1903.

The inquiries into the various phases of the accident will be undertaken by Governor Whitman, District Attorney Perkins, Public Service Commission, Mayor Mitchel, Coroner Riordan, Police Commissioner Woods, Fire Commissioner Adamson and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company.

The only fatality was that of Miss Ellen Grady, thirty-nine, a stenographer, living at 879 Crotona parkway, Bronx. She had been revived after being rescued unconscious from the southbound express stalled near Fifty-third street, but died on her way to Polyclinic Hospital. Her brother, William Grady, identified the body.

Of the several investigations which are either under way, or will be, that to be undertaken by a legislative committee under the direction of Governor Whitman is likely to prove the most far reaching in effect.

MRS. T. A. ABBOTT DIES SUDDENLY AT MARTINSVILLE

The funeral of Mrs. Kate C. Abbott, wife of Theodore A. Abbott, who died suddenly Tuesday morning at her home in Martinsville, will be held Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the late home and the burial will be in the Coontown cemetery.

Mrs. Abbott died while alone in her home, suffering an acute attack of heart trouble. When members of the family returned they found her dead on a lounge in the dining-room. She was a native of Morris county and had been a resident of Martinsville for the past twenty years. She was a member of the Congregational church at Coontown. There survives a husband, three brothers and one sister. Two of the brothers, Freeholder George Kirch and J. D. Kirch live in the borough, and the third one is William Kirch, of Mt. Bethel.

MRS. HANNAH E. STONE.

Mrs. Hannah E. Stone, aged 75 years, widow of the late Stephen N. Stone, died at her home, 610 Liberty street, this morning, after a lingering illness. Mrs. Stone was a native of Whitely's Point, N. Y., but has been a resident of this city for the past thirty years. Mrs. Stone was a member of the Episcopal church of her native town. Mrs. Alfred W. Stone, with whom she lived, survives. The funeral services will be private.

SAY FRENCH FIRE AT OWN VILLAGES

Germans Claim That Allies Are Firing at Houses of Non-Combatants.

AIR RAIDS ON DUNKIRK

French Statement Says German Aviators Have Been Put to Flight—Report Zeppelins Going to England—New Russian Army.

Berlin, Jan. 7 (By wireless via Sayville).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war English and French forces continue to destroy by bombardment Belgian and French villages behind our front. North of Arras severe fighting continues for the trenches which we stormed and took yesterday. We have made further progress in the western part of the Argonne forest.

"Attacks were made all day Tuesday in the eastern Argonne. Near Coute Chausse the enemy advanced as far as our trenches when he was driven back all along the line with heavy losses. Our losses were comparatively small.

"The situation in the eastern theatre of war is unchanged. The continuation of our operations has been affected by most unfavorable weather. Nevertheless our attacks are progressing slowly."

Paris, Jan. 7.—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"From the sea to the Lys there were during day of January 6 only artillery duets in which we have the advantage almost constantly. Our batteries put to flight German aviators who were flying toward Dunkirk, and extinguished the fire of mine throwers.

"In the region of Zillebeke the enemy violently bombarded the head of the Belgium bridge, to the south of Dixmude.

"In the region of Lille we successfully repulsed the violent attacks by the Germans upon one of our trenches. This trench, after it had been lost by us, was retaken in a very brilliant action and we blew up with mines parts of the German works.

"To the east of Rheims, at the Alger Farm, the explosion of the mines which we set off last night arrested the works of the enemy.

"In the Argonne the enemy showed little activity in the Woevre. The progress made by us to the northwest of Flirey is more important than had been previously announced. A persistent rain and the condition of the terin make all movements very difficult. We have maintained ourselves in all the positions conquered on preceding days. We have advanced in the direction on Altkirch, occupying the woods located four kilometres to the west of that town. Our heavy artillery has reduced to silence that of the enemy. The German artillery during the whole daye bombarded the hospital at Thann."

London, Jan. 7.—A correspondent of the "Daily Mail" in France reports that a Zeppelin airship skirted the French seacoast near Gravelines, twelve miles southwest of Dunkirk, yesterday morning, and then turned westward toward England. It is rumored that two other Zeppelins preceded it.

"Thereafter throughout the whole day," the correspondent adds, "Dunkirk was subjected to German aeroplane raids and attempts to drop bombs; but owing to the vigorous fire of the town's guns but few bombs fell.

"At one moment six aeroplanes were hovering over the town, but were compelled to retreat. Apparently no damage was done.

The "Times" says there were three Zeppelins. It continues:

"Five times the aviators came into sight. Once a shell from anti-aircraft guns at Firminy burst within fifty feet of a German machine, upset its balance and sent it away down the wind into safety.

"Twice airmen of the Allied forces, first Commander Samson and afterward a Frenchman, were up and chased the intruders away. One of the German airmen dropped two bombs in the suburbs, but they did no damage."

Today a new Russian army is reported to have moved out from the north to take the offensive against the German position at Mlawa, on the east Prussian frontier. Already the capture, after a bayonet fight, of a village on the road to that town is announced.

The Germans are still hammering at the Russian line, drawn directly across the roads to Warsaw from the west, but, with less force behind them. In western Galicia, however, where they have reinforced the Austrians, they have held up the Rus-

DUNELLEN COUPLE WEDDED 50 YEARS

Celebrated Golden Anniversary in a Quiet Way at Their Home.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Giles, of 421 North avenue, quietly observed the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on Tuesday. A number of friends and relatives dropped into the home during the evening and paid their respects to Mr. and Mrs. Giles. There was no special celebration on account of the serious condition of Mr. Giles' brother, Samuel Giles, of Plainfield, who is afflicted with cancer of the throat.

Mr. and Mrs. Giles were married at the home of Mrs. Giles' parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lowrie, on the old Rice farm. They commenced housekeeping on the Morse farm at New Market, where they lived for two years. They then moved to the Smith farm at Raritan Landing, where they remained another two years. The house in New Market, where the Widow Fulton lives, was then purchased from Peter Dunn. Mr. and Mrs. Giles resided there for ten years, when the place was traded for a farm at Weston.

During the ten years' stay in New Market, Mr. Giles engaged in teaming, and later in the ice and ice cream business. He has the distinction of being the first to enter the ice business in New Market. After a two years' residence the farm at Weston was traded by Mr. Giles for the Van Arsdale property on North avenue, which has been the home ever since. During the first twelve years of Mr. Giles' thirty-four years of residence to date in the borough, he was engaged in the timber business. He then took up plumbing, the business which he is at present following, learning the trade, peculiar as it may sound, from his son, A. S. Giles, now of Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Giles have three children, Mrs. Clifford Fenner, Mrs. Berkheiser and A. S. Giles, of Plainfield. They lost their oldest daughter, Mrs. Frank Tinsman, who died in the twenty-sixth year of her life. Mr. and Mrs. Giles have eight grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

BOARD OF EDUCATION INSURES ITS EMPLOYES

The monthly meeting of the Dunellen Board of Education, with President Augustus F. Todd presiding, was held in the Lincoln School, last night. The president and district clerk were authorized to take out liability insurance covering teachers and janitors. It is estimated that the rates of the insurance will be in the neighborhood of seven cents a hundred for the teachers and ninety cents a hundred, on account of the additional risk, for the janitors.

A communication was received from the State department announcing an educational meeting in New Brunswick on Monday and Tuesday of next week and Supervising Principal Rentschler was asked by the Board to attend.

Mr. Rentschler, in his monthly report, recommended that the following rules and regulations governing: (1) teachers and pupils, (2) testing in promotion, (3) teachers' professional circle meetings, be adopted, which was done. The percentage of attendance dropped a number of points to 89%, owing to the prevalence of chicken-pox during the forepart of the month.

The Waldron case was not reached by the Grand Jury yesterday, and those interested in the case were obliged to return to New Brunswick today.

Mayor E. B. Latham was a business visitor in Philadelphia today.

COUNCIL ELECTS OFFICERS.

At the regular weekly meeting of the W. G. Holton Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., held in W. G. Holton Hall, Tuesday evening, the following officers were elected for the coming six months: Elwood Gary, councilor; Edgar Shively, vice councilor; Fred Gary, conductor; Roland Twining, warden; Henry Kirchner, junior past councilor; Lewis Schneider, inside sentinel; John Peters, Jr., outside sentinel; William Shively, trustee. These officers will be installed next Tuesday evening. One new member, William Sherman, of North Plainfield, was initiated at the meeting.

Mrs. J. H. Wolseiffer, of Vineland, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. T. H. Platt, Jr., since Sunday, returned home, yesterday afternoon.

DEATH OF RELATIVE.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. G. Kinney, of First street, received a letter yesterday morning, apprising them of the death of Mrs. Mathew Kinney, of Phillipsburg, who was the wife of Mr. Kinney's brother. The cause of the death was not mentioned in the letter, but it is believed that it was caused by a stroke of paralysis as the deceased suffered a stroke last May. Mr. and Mrs. Kinney are attending the funeral today.

Emerson Platt, son of Dr. and Mrs. T. H. Platt, has returned from a visit to Vineland.

Edwin G. Lewis, of Front street, is somewhat indisposed with a severe cold.

James H. Ryan, of First street, was a visitor in New York, yesterday.

The Edgar Shively house on Lincoln avenue is rapidly nearing completion.

WILL CONDUCT STRAWRIDE.

A party of local young men, among whom are Frank Day, Edward Hannon, Jules Margentino, Jackson Rinehart and Sylvester Rinehart, have made arrangements for a strawride to New Providence on Saturday evening. They will attend a dance at that place and partake of a sumptuous supper.

Frank R. Wynkoop, of Front street, who has been ill since the latter part of last week, was able to resume his duties as engineer on train number 204, yesterday.

Mrs. Jacob Fisher, of Washington avenue, is now able to be up and about her home.

Today is Greek Christmas. About fifty of the borough's inhabitants are celebrating the event.

FORMER BORO GIRL MARRIED.

Miss Ethel Jamison, of Bloomsbury, daughter of a former pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, was married on Monday to Lewis Fay, of Texas. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mrs. Fay's sister, Mrs. Fred DeHart, of Newark. Mr. Fay travels for a large advertising house and he and Mrs. Fay will make their home on the road. Among those from this place who attended the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. J. F. G. Kinney, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Gise and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Krinic.

Mrs. John Tinsman, of Front street, entertained Mrs. E. H. Tinsman, of Plainfield, yesterday.

Although able to attend to his business, Tax Collector Isaac J. Stites has been far from a well man for the past ten days or so.

The force of Contractor F. H. Gise completed the foundation of the new Treichler house on Lincoln avenue, yesterday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sheridan, of Somerville, has been assisting about the home of her sister, Mrs. Christopher Russ, of Grove street, since Mrs. Russ was taken ill about two weeks ago.

BOY SCOUT PLANS.

The members of the local organization of Boy Scouts held a meeting in the Baraca room of the Presbyterian church, Tuesday evening, at which it was decided to divide the troop formed by the Crow and Rooster patrols into two troops on account of the rapid growth of the troop. The troops will be known as troops number one and troop number two, and each troop will be divided into two patrols. Other business constituted the resignation of Scoutmaster Henry D. Williams, which was accepted with regrets; the election of C. T. Voorhees as scoutmaster to succeed Mr. Williams and the election of the following officers: Troop No. 1, Adam Dealaman, assistant scoutmaster; Harold Seal, secretary; Montgomery Carpenter, treasurer; troop no. 2, Clarence Eder, assistant scoutmaster; Edwin LaRue, secretary; John Grinday, treasurer.

NEW TEACHER REPORTS.

Miss Bessie Outterson, of Stroudsburg, Pa., the new teacher secured by the Board of Education to fill the vacancy made in the teaching staff by the resignation of Miss Elizabeth Herder, who is to be married, is boarding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wrage, on Washington avenue.

DEATH OF DAVID ADAMS.

The many friends and schoolmates of David Adams will be sorry to learn of his death January 2, at Toledo, Ohio, where he had gone in hope of benefitting his failing health. At his bedside when he passed away, were his father, sister and grandmother, who had been with him for sometime awaiting the end. The funeral was held at Toledo, Tuesday, and was in charge of the Boy Scouts, of which he became a member while living here, and wearing their uniform and honor badge was laid to rest with all scout honors. While living in Dunellen he endeared himself to all who knew him by his pleasing personality.

Democratic Committeeman Willard N. Apgar, who was confined to his bed last week with bronchitis, suffered a relapse as a result of working out in the inclement weather of yesterday.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Charles Sheelen, recorder of Fanwood borough, submitted his annual report to the Borough Council, last evening. It shows an increase of approximately a thousand dollars in the receipts and expenditures of the borough over the preceding year. The delinquent list is the largest in over fifteen years, while the taxes on land owned by corporations has lowered in two cases and ascended in two. The receipts were: From taxes, $12,131.44; franchise taxes, $504.51; miscellaneous, $838.54. The expenditures were: To the Public Service Electric Co., $1,244.93; Fanwood Public Library, $200; Plainfield-Union Water Co., $382.89; Board of Health, $106.86; printing and stationery, $54.88; labor on streets, $749.65; material on streets, $917.05; salaries of officers, $554.80; county and school tax, $6,301.29; police, $975; county road bonds, $1,000; rent of Council rooms, $50; poor account, $35, and miscellaneous, $442.01. A summary follows: Balance December 31, 1913, $3,842.12; amounts collected from all sources, $11,626.57; delinquent list, $1,848.02; expenditures, $12,856.76; cash on hand December 31, 1914, $2,611.93, in all making a total of $17,316.71.

Charged with peddling beer without a license, Ralph Venizio, an Italian liquor dealer, of Fanwood, was held under $500 bail by Recorder Springstead, of Westfield, for his appearance in court next week to answer the charge. Venizio was arrested on Tuesday by Chief O'Neil as he was in the act of delivering beer to a private residence. He will probably be held for the Grand Jury, as has been the case in previous instances.

Officers of the Bible school of the Baptist church have been elected for 1915 as follows: General superintendent, Martin A. Korff; associate superintendents, Herbert Saunders and Willard Marston; secretary, Fred Saunders; assistant secretary, Horace Daniels; treasurer, Edward Hetfield; department superintendents: primary, Miss Hannah Hayes; home and cradle roll, Mrs. John Z. Hatfield; missionary, Miss Lydia Hayes; temperance, Mrs. William Archibald; pianist, Miss Ivy Hardgraves. The treasurer reports that $300 has been expended in the last year, mostly to missions, and a balance is still left in the treasury. The enrollment of the school numbers two hundred and fifty, being a substantial increase over the preceding year.

Isaac B. Burgess, State superintendent of Sunday-schools, has accepted the invitation of the Fanwood Township Sunday-school Association to speak at an open meeting to be held in All Saints' Episcopal church on the evening of January 18. "The Sunday-school Bringing in the Kingdom" will be the subject of his talk. It is probable that Dr. Murray, of Plainfield, besides several other speakers, will be on hand to speak. Acting on the request of Mr. Burgess the five Sunday-schools in the township comprising the association will prepare reports to be read at the meeting.

TOO MUCH AND TOO LITTLE.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 7—The convention of the Massachusetts Association of Weights and Measures, which opened here today, developed that the weight testers of the State had found many cases of over-weight as well as short weight in their tests. Thure Hansen, State commissioner, says that of 3,781 pound packages reweighed by his agents in Bay State cities and towns, there were 1,811 of full weight, 1,289 of light or short weight, and 681 over weight. These were butter packages, and the butter jobbers have promised their aid in securing a more uniform package.

THE MERCHANT AND HIS CREDITS.

A travelling salesman was remarking the other day that he had sold the usual quantity of goods the past few months, in spite of the war and other depressing causes. But he had found many of his customers hard up because of the unusual number of requests for credit. It was his opinion that in both good and bad times the American people are getting in too easy going habits about payment of bills.

It is not always the hard pressed workingman on short time who dodges the bill collector the most actively. Many of the well to do are habitually slow pay. They make requests for further accommodation with the air of conferring a lordly favor.

When the victim of ill health or other misfortune asks for a bill of goods on trust, it is often practically a request for charity. The merchant fails to see why he should carry the whole burden of the community's misfortunes. So he charges up to his whole trade the expense of bad debts. Thus the frugal and thrifty, who may live even parsimoniously, are compelled to pay for luxuries for the extravagant.

There are of course some applications for credit that are legitimate. People have to take risks, start out on new ventures with small capital, seek better positions, or industry would stagnate. If fortune goes wrong, creditors must wait a reasonable time. But when people on wages or salary bank on their dreams, they commonly go broke.

Many people, finding a ten dollar bill in their pockets, feel sanguine, step high, and send the tradesmen's wagons hustling with deliveries to their homes. The fact that old accounts are due is forgotten.

"The best New Year's resolution is to pay every debt you possibly can even if you have to wear your old clothes to church." Thus concluded the salesman whose remarks suggested these reflections, and he was right.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Only one large problem confronts the members of the new Legislature, which convenes at Trenton next Tuesday. That is the question of reducing the running expenses of the State, so that they will not exceed the income, as was the case during the past fiscal year. According to State Treasurer Grosscup's statement submitted to Governor Fielder yesterday the net receipts for the last fiscal year were $9,036,340, and the net expenditures $9,678,727, making the excess of disbursements $642,387. The economy and efficiency commission has recommended the abolition of many offices and the combining of others, and the legislators have declared that they are going to make big slashes in the salaried positions, including among others things the abolition of the county tax boards, which cost the State $96,000 a year.

Aside from the economy program it is to be hoped that there will be a short session, with a minimum of new laws. In view of the campaign promises of the Republicans the eyes of the citizens of the State will be turned to Trenton with great interest. What measure of success is apt to meet the economy plans can better be judged after the House and Senate have been in session for a few weeks, and there has been an opportunity given to learn whether the talk of reducing expenses is mere talk, not to be followed by performance.

Certainly it is to be hoped that there will be few new laws. There are so many on the statute books now which are conflicting that government becomes more complicated each year. If the Republican leaders have profited by their experiences in the past they will appreciate the fact that the people of the State will not stand for any of the tactics which prevailed prior to Governor Wilson's election, and it will be well to carry out campaign pledges.

It is extremely gratifying to learn that Plainfield people have responded so willingly and generously to assist the commission which has been formed to aid the unemployed in this city. The reports made public last night show that while not enough money has been procured to carry on the work until April, there have been liberal contributions, and there is every reason to believe that necessary funds will be forthcoming. The credit for starting this good work goes to the local Building Trades Council, and it is pleasing to know that the working men take such an active interest in local affairs.

One hundred and fifty letters were sent to members of the Board of Trade, asking their opinion as to the advisability of holding a banquet this year when there are so many unusual demands on the people. Eighty replies were received, and of those eighty it is said that only twenty favored proceeding with the banquet. That is another gratifying indication that the majority of Plainfielders are cutting out all unnecessary pleasures this winter, and by so doing are thus able to do more to relieve those in want.

Although he has been out of office for nearly a week, it is not too late to pay a belated tribute to Percy H. Stewart for the faithful and conscientious work he did as Mayor during his two years' incumbency. The people of the city as a whole do not realize how much of his time Mr. Stewart gave to the city, often making sacrifices which the average unpaid official would not think of making. There was not a citizen, rich or poor who could not approach him and receive attention.

For an organization which was declared but a few weeks ago to be dead, the Plainfield Democratic Club has developed into a mighty lively corpse. Certainly it never had a liver set of officers than the new group elected this week.

BOUNDARY LINE DISPUTED

ed before the Council to present facts over the exact boundary line between the borough and township in the Graceland section. The township has but recently had new tax maps made and shows the land in question to be in the township which has heretofore been assessed in the borough. The new borough tax maps also show the same land to be in the borough and as a result Albert Horakh has been assessed by both collectors and not knowing to which to pay, his land was advertised for sale by the township and it was on the suggestion of Charles Sheelen that the matter was held up until things could be straightened out. Both Engineer F. A. Dunham, maker of the borough maps, and H. C. Van Emburgh, who made those of the township, are equally sure they are right.

A communication was received from Frank A. Dunham asking that he be allowed until the first of February to finish the new tax maps as illness prevented him from having them completed by the first of the year as called for in the contract. His request was granted. A letter was read from the Mosquito Commission asking if the Council approved of the work of the Commission in exterminating the pests and expenditure of money for same. Mayor Hoar replied that the Council would like the work to continue for another year. A petition was received from the residents of South avenue asking for a hydrant and this, with one from F. A. Manikin, asking for one on Martine avenue, near King street, were referred to the proper committee. Bills aggregating $299.32 were ordered paid.

Frank G. Urner, as chairman of the library board, made his annual report. Nineteen books were donated during the year and thirteen purchased, which with the others on the shelves make a total of 1,301 books in the library. The number of books in circulation through the year was 870 and the receipts from various sources was $62.63. The expenses were $159.30. The receipt of $200 appropriation from the Council was also acknowledged.

Recorder Sheelen's yearly report showed that he had tried eighteen cases in 1914 and of these five received jail sentences, four were fined, six suspended and three held for the grand jury. The fines amounted to $14.

ALL NORTH AVENUE RECEIVES A SHOCK

News That Dennis O'Brien is to Buy Taxi-cab Creates a Sensation.

Dennis O'Brien, the veteran cabman and dean of the Jehus in the North avenue "yard," is going to abandon his horse-drawn vehicle for an up-to-date taxi. Yes, sir, he is, honest to goodness, unbelievable as it may seem. All North avenue was quickly alive with excitement when the news broke out, last night, and it has been the topic of conversation since the venerable old driver officially declared the first wild rumors to be correct. It came as a distinct shock to scores of noctural hack users, while many others in a half-dazed condition are muttering almost incoherently that the book of Revelation is right, the end is almost here.

Mr. O'Brien and his deep-seagoing cab—drawn by the fast, brown mare, have been looked upon as one of Plainfield's impregnable institutions. For thirty-five years the sphinx-like driver has plodded along in his own quiet, unassuming way, apparently oblivious to the passage of time. New style glass hacks came and went, but he clung to his beloved barouche. Easy-riding rubber tires forced out the bumpty-bump steel rims on all but Dennis' carryall. Then came the swift taxis and as one by one his younger contemporaries adopted the idea Mr. O'Brien sniffed scornfully. The old mare and the "get-there-and-get-back" hack were good enough for him, he said, and the best part of it is that all of his cash customers backed him up. He had the cream of the owl trade that wanted forgetfulness and a reliable pilot more than easy cushions and acceleration, so he should worry and be bothered by garage bills like Mike Higgins.

Nevertheless, on three successive mornings after the 2:08 had discharged is customary quota of passengers, Mr. O'Brien was discovered on the front seat of a taxi, taking instructions from a demonstrator. They kept to back streets, where friendly shadows were supposed to baffle prying eyes, but it was all to no purpose. The startling news spread like wildfire from one end of the city and borough. Dennis evaded reporters until last evening, when one of the ilk cornered him in Melvin's restaurant. In a rather apologetical tone he admitted the truth, then fled to the forward seat of his time-honored craft—and hurriedly drove away.

"Well," remarked a Jehu who had been in the business for ten years, as he saw the rig disappear, "when that horse and wagon vanishes from the North avenue stand nobody need be surprised to wake up some fine morning and discover a German fort where the Quaker Meeting-house has stood since 1788."

MULFORD AGENCY REPORT SEVERAL REALTY DEALS

The Mulford Real Estate Agency on North avenue report bright prospects in realty deals for the coming year. Among the recent sales made by this agency is that of the residential property on West Front street owned by the Misses Sarah and Harriet Manning, which was purchased by Andrew McCardell. Possession will be taken April 1. There has also been sold to William Moore, of West Front street, a lot on Evergreen avenue near Kensington avenue, which was owned by William T. Sharp.

Through this agency, Carl Grosswent, of Nutley, has leased Thomas Melick's house at 612 East Second street. Mr. Grosswent is associated with the Ingersoll-Rand Company, of which W. L. Saunders is the president.

PERSONAL.

George Bishop, the local photographer, who has been in the South for the past three months, is now located at St. Petersburg, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Themaine, of West Fifth street, are entertaining relatives from Reading, Pa.

Thomas Harding, of John street, has returned home from Muhlenberg Hospital, where he underwent treatment for an infected foot.

Edward Carty, of Orchard place, left yesterday for an extended business trip to the South and West, Louisville, Ky., being the first stop.

Clarence Shillinger, of Albany, N. Y., returned home Tuesday after a holiday visit at the home of his father, Herbert Shillinger, of Church street.

Miss Lucille Ewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Ewart, of Fairview avenue, returned to Genesso, this morning, after a two weeks visit with her parents. Miss Ewart is a student in the Genesso Normal School.

Miss Ruth Stauffer, of Westfield, has returned to her duties in the Somerset School, after a short period of illness.

BLOCH PULLMAN BABY COACHES

We direct special attention to our large showing of 1915 models of the famous Bloch Pullman Reed Baby Coaches, sold exclusively in this city by us. The name Bloch and Baby Carriage have been allied words for nearly fifty years. Bloch quality is known the country over, a Bloch name plate on a baby carriage is a sign of perfection, excellence, greatest value and superior quality. Bloch Baby Carriages are built along the newest approved scientific lines for the sole comfort, ease and safety of the baby.

Every Bloch Baby Carriage is built to safeguard the baby's back, the spine, the head and the limbs. No matter how the baby squirms or moves about, its tender bones will find a restful position in a Bloch Carriage. These are all important things for the mother to consider when buying a baby carriage. The most essential feature for the comfort and care of the baby is an easy riding running gear, with plenty of spring and resistency. The Cradle Gear and the new Reversible Gear used in the Bloch Pullman Coaches has many advantages. The Cradle Gear enables the carriage to have a lateral or cradle motion, and with the Reversible Gear you can swing the body of the carriage around so that the baby faces you. With all the splendid features mentioned above, Bloch Baby Carriages do not cost any more than the ordinary kinds.

We are selling a good substantial carriage for as low as $18.50. Others at $21,50, $23.50, $25.00 and up to $39.00.

We invite steady-going people to take advantage of the Club Plan.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The first episode of what is declared to be the most intensely interesting serial photo-play yet produced, "The Exploits of Elaine," will be shown at Proctor's Theatre, tomorrow afternoon and night. It will be seen thereafter in regular weekly installments on each Friday and patrons of the "movies" who wish to follow the thrilling experiences of the young heroine through ordeals never before shown on the screen should make certain to see the opening action. The leading roles have been posed by Miss Pearl White, Pathe's feature star, and Arnold Daley, one of the latest recruits drafted by the picture producers of the legitimate stage. Plainfielders have a personal interest in Miss White through her excellent work in "The Perils of Pauline," and by her personal appearance in Proctor's Theatre several weeks ago, when she delivered a monologue before capacity audiences. Her charming personality is plainly apparent in every episode of "The Exploits of Elaine," and she is the authority for the statement herself that this latest serial is the most gripping she has undertook. Mr. Daley is well known to Plainfielders, having appeared her in "My Mamie Rose," "You Never Can Tell," "Candida" and several other plays. He has always been considered one of America's foremost dramatic actors. The story of "The Exploits of Elaine" is being published in the Hearst newspapers throughout the United States, and Mr. Hearst has taken a personal interest in its exploitation. The story may be followed by Plainfielders through the medium of the New York Journal.

OPENING OF ART INSTITUTE.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 7.—The dedication of the Minnesota Institute of Art took place today. The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra opened the exercises this afternoon. John R. Van Derlip, president of the Minneapolis Society of Fine Arts, made the introductory address and presided. Among the speakers were James J. Hill, the railroad magnate; Charles L. Hutchinson, president of the Chicago Art Institute; Governor Hammond, Mayor Nye, and Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota.

TO WELCOME PRESIDENT.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 7.—Great preparations have been made for the reception tomorrow to President Woodrow Wilson, who will attend the Jackson Day celebration. The city is decorated, and tomorrow will be given over to a holiday. The President is expected to answer his critics regarding his foreign policy, and reports from the White House indicate a forceful address in support of his attitude toward the belligerent nations.

CHAPLAINS OF ALL CREEDS.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 7—The State Senate of Illinois has decided to abandon the ancient custom of a regular chaplain to open its deliberations each day, and to substitute the more liberal custom of selecting ministers from all the different denominations to act in turn. A Jewish rabbi will serve for one week, for the first time in the history of the State. Rev. Preston Bradley, of the People's church, is chaplain for this week, and he will be succeeded by Rev. Father J. P. Kiely, of the Catholic church. The Baptist week will begin January 20, and the Presbyterians will have their innings beginning February 3. Lieut.-Governor O'Hara has invited interested members of the various denominations to attend the Senate openings.

VINCENT DOYLE.

Vincent Doyle, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doyle, of Rock avenue and West Fourth street, died yesterday. The funeral service will be held this afternoon, and the burial will be made at St. Mary's cemetery.

LOCAL TALENT IN NEWARK CLUB'S ANNUAL FUNCTION

Alfred B. Wilson, local manager for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, is one of the stars in a play entitled "His Last Night Out," to be presented in Krueger's auditorium, Newark, Friday night, January 15. Edgar Kiefer, a favorite with local football followers who has been the brilliant performer at quarterback each time the Franklin A. A. eleven made its appearance on Cricket Field against Holy Cross, is another amateur footlight notable who comes in for his share of the laurels in the production which is staged under the auspices of the Tuscarora Canoe Club. Both Mr. Wilson and Mr. Kiefer, as well as William H. Schooley, formerly of this city, are active members in the Newark Club, which last year cleaned up on sufficient water events at Asbury Park to land the New Jersey club title.

The affair is an annual one and many Plainfielders were present at the function last year. Dancing will follow the entertainment and will continue until 2 o'clock in the morning. The show will be in the form of a musical comedy. A young sportsman is about to become a benedict. His sweetheart grants him the privilege to go out "with the boys" for his last good time as a bachelor. The mix-up he gets into while celebrating his final round with his old companions furnishes plenty of humorous features.

TO GIVE A DINNER IN HONOR OF NEW BISHOP

Arrangements for the dinner to be given Rev. Dr. Paul Matthews, January 26, in the Trinity parish house, Elizabeth, have been completed by the Men's Club. Rev. Dr. Matthews is to be consecrated Bishop of New Jersey at St. Mary's Episcopal church, Burlington, on January 25. His first official duties will be performed at a convocation in Trinity church the following day and he will remain over to be the honored guest at the dinner.

All of the Episcopal parishes of Elizabeth, Grace, Christ, St. John's and Trinity, and St. Luke's, of Roselle, will participate, and tickets will be apportioned to secure an equitable representation. There will be a public reception from 6 to 7 preceding the dinner. The Parish Aid Society will assist by having charge of the service and preparation of the courses. Special efforts are to be made to make the affair fitting to the position of the guest.

RELIEF WORK PROGRESSING

the form of wages. Applicants, as far as work could be provided for them, have been set at work and payment has in most cases been made in the form of orders for food or coal or clothing, so as to insure the proper spending of the money earned. The function of this committee is to furnish "relief work" rather than mere distribution of alms, which would undoubtedly tend to encourage dependency.

Duncan W. Taylor, chairman of the employment committee, reported that through zealous efforts and efficient work of J. D. Loizeaux, and the generosity of C. B. and W. S. Tyler, it had been possible to arrange for the employment of thirty men a day for the next two months at clearing a large tract of timberland on the Woodbrook Farm. The Messrs. Tyler had agreed to pay for the supervision of the work and to give the wood to the Commission to be sold. Mr. Loizeaux has arranged with Frank Mobus to take over the entire proposition, both the supervision of the work and the disposal of the wood, so that the plan should carry itself financially and provide emergency employment for a considerable number of men. Temporary work for a considerable number at ice-cutting is also in sight in the near future, and the committee has two or three other possibilities in view. The office of the Commission was able to find work for the day for 55 men yesterday.

A. M. Harris, chairman of the finance committee, was unable to be present through illness, and Mr. Wherry reported for him that about $2,300 had so far been pledged. While this is a generous response, this amount is by no means enough to continue the work until April 1, and the committee is now working up plans for further appeals which will induce a more general response from the community. Joseph M. Coven, proprietor of the Astor Theatre, had offered the entire receipts of his theatre for today. Debevoise & Anderson had also given four barrels of coke to be tested as fuel, in the belief that it would prove more economical than coal.

Resolutions of thanks were passed, to Mr. Loizeaux for his unflagging interest and his ability in handling the Woodbrook plan, to C. B. and W. S. Tyler, for offering the tract and paying for the supervision; to the Astor Theatre for its benefit performance, and to Debevoise & Anderson.

Mr. Wherry, chairman of the survey committee, reported that the probable requirements for January employment were good, and that the Commission expects to be able to care for all applicants, who are deserving, this month if the funds are sufficient. A larger number of small contributions is urgently asked for.

Mr. Stewart described the work which is being done under the direction of Mrs. Stewart. A large loft in the stable at the rear of their home on West Eighth street, has been fitted up as a work-room, the machines being loaned by the Singer Sewing Machine Company, of Elizabeth. Here a number of needy women of the city are employed making stockings, scarfs, garments, bandages, etc., to be used in the Belgian Relief work. These goods are paid for by the Belgian Relief Committee in New York, and thus the unemployed in Plainfield are benefitting as well as the suffering ones in Belgium.

ANNUAL TURKEY SUPPER.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society, of the Trinity Reformed church, has completed arrangements for its annual turkey supper to be held in the lecture room of the church, Thursday and Friday evening, January 28 and 29. Supper will be served on these evenings from 5 to 8:30.

New Brunswick	8	7	925
Paterson	7	8	946
Newark	6	9	1001
Jersey City	4	11	952

Paterson Junior Elk pinners copped the odd game with Newark, last night, on the Paterson alleys, dropping the middle roll by 17 pins. The first game was won by the home players, the scores being 851 to 821. Barrett getting high score when he hit for 202. Paterson rolled poorly in the second game, but came back in the last and totalled 946 against its opponents' 924.

O'Gorman, of Paterson, made high score of the match, getting a 234, while Keppler went the highest for the Newark five, his mark being 231, made in the last game. Haggerty made a score of 223.

N. P. H. S. JUNIORS NOW LOOK LIKE CHAMPIONS

The Sophomore team has forfeited two games within the last two days in the Inter-class Basketball League of North Plainfield High School. They forfeited a game to the Freshmen on Tuesday, and another to the Juniors, yesterday, which drops them from the league, leaving only the Juniors and Freshmen to fight it out for the title.

The Sophs have been showing poor spirit all the way through and this makes the third game which they have forfeited, only two games having been played. In these two games they won one from the Freshmen and lost the other to the Juniors.

The Juniors are practically sure of the title now, as they have won every game they have played, and the Freshmen only have one game to their credit so far, which they gained by a forfeit.

POOR SHOOTING LOST ANOTHER FOR P. H. S.

Local Players Play Speedy Passing Game, But Points Are Missing.

Although the Plainfield High School boys' basketball team was defeated yesterday afternoon, at Rahway, by the fast Rahway High School quintet, the local team played its best game of the season. The game was fast from beginning to end and, although Rahway led most of the way, its lead was but a small one. The final score was 39 to 23.

Each man on the Rahway team chimed in with at least one basket to help boost the score, and Rurand and A. Armstrong tossed in seven and five goals respectively. The Plainfield boys all played a fine passing game and followed the ball in fine style, but a slight improvement could be made in guarding and shooting, which was not up to the standard.

The Queen City quintet took the aggressive part of the game at the start and got the jump on Rahway before they became warmed up. The first half inded with Rahway leading by the score of 15 to 11.

Rahway played a much better shooting game in the second period than the first. Durand seemed glued to the basket, and whenever Wheelan left him for a second he would drop the ball in for a two-point score. Plainfield played much the same in both halves, scoring eleven points in the first and twelve in the second. Their opponents doubled the score in the second half, rolling up twenty-four points to the local's twelve.

RATTLING THE SKELETON FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY.

Plainfield High School basketball team went to Adelphi College, Brooklyn, and lost to the team of that institution by the score of 63 to 19. The local team lined up as follows: Forwards, Morris, Woodhull and Clarke; centre, Lidgate; guards, Allan Overton and Clyde Doane. Morris played the best game for Plainfield.

Physical Director George E. Listman, of the Y. M. C. A., submitted his plans for the new athletic field that was to cost $10,000. The site was next to Crescent Oval, and the plans included a gridiron, baseball field and track. (It is now Parker Field.)

The Bible class of William N. Runyon, of Hope Chapel, organized a basketball team. Among those who played were Jack Martin, Norman Barnes, Adam Schott, Cliff Randolph and Allan Snyder. Russell Randolph was the manager.

A scheduled game between the North Plainfield High School and Business Men's class basketball teams was not played because of a misunderstanding, but the Y. M. C. A. boys team defeated the N. P. H. S. seconds by the score of 30 to 9.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL SECONDS ARE WALLOPED

PLATT ADAMS' HEARING POSTPONED ONE WEEK

The case of Platt Adams, the great athlete and Olympic hero, who formerly lived in this city, was brought up at a special meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union, last night, but hearing and action were postponed until next Wednesday night, when the charges against him will be heard. Adams is accused of selling some of the trophies won at athletic meets.

It is expected that everything will be thrashed out at this meeting and that Adams will either be exonerated of the charges preferred against him or be declared a profession. The accused emphatically denies all charges.

N. P. H. S. BROUGHT HOME THE BACON

New Brunswick High School Players the Victims This Time.

With every member of the team playing a good all around game, the North Plainfield High School basketball five succeeded in defeating the team of New Brunswick High School, yesterday afternoon, by a score of 28 to 16. The game was an interesting one throughout, but the borough delegation always managed to hold a good lead, and to set a pace which the opponents were never able to catch. The long floor on which the contest was played was rather an advantage to the visitors and enabled them to display some of the best team work of the season.

The first half ended 16 to 7 in favor of the North Plainfield players. The second period was more even and the winners outscored their opponents by only three points. The boroughites registered five goals and two fouls against their opponents' three baskets and the same number of fouls in this half.

Conroy and Townley played good games in the forward positions and made some fine shots at different times of the contest. Van Mater also showed some good work at centre, easily outjumping his opponent. Hebert and Abrams did some good passing and both played good all around games. For the New Brunswick team, Troffe was the main scorer, registering three goals and three fouls.

After the game the players were invited to take supper as the guests of the Delta Kappa Epsilon, a secret society of Rutgers College, and afterwards enjoyed a very pleasant evening in their company.

Two matches will be played in the borough tournament tonight, when Lutz and Bimble meet Howe and Lowrie and Clemons and Thorn meet the Smalley-Kunzman team.

ROSELLE SWAMPED BY WESTFIELDERS

First Athletic Meeting in Five Years Between These Teams.

The Westfield High School basketball team defeated the Roselle High School five on the Westfield court, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 43 to 13. This was the first meeting of these two teams in five years, athletic relations being cut off at that time. The Roselle boys were completely outclassed in the game. The score at the end of the first half was 25 to 7 in favor of the home team.

Ewing, Traynor and Davies were the main scorers for Westfield, while Benedict and Davies played well for the visiting aggregation. The next game for the Westfield crew will be against North Plainfield High School in Saengerbund Hall tomorrow night.

FRANK BRUGGY SIGNED UP WITH JERSEY CITY FIVE

Although Frank Bruggy lost his job on the Gloversville basketball team with the disbanding of the New York State Basketball League, of which this club was a member, he was not out of a position long as the manager of the St. Alden's, of Jersey City, quickly signed up this player.

Bruggy, who plays guard, is one of the best in the court league and the Jersey City manager realized the value of his services.

The New York State League disbanded because of lack of support, with the Utica Club in the lead. A large number of the players of the league will find places with other fast quintets, but will get no such high salaries as they received in the dead league.

SHOTS AND MISSES

Rahway's victory over the Plainfield High School athletes yesterday afternoon, was to be expected. Once more we will have to warn those red and blue warriors that passing without shooting is useless. Our High School scribe informs us each time that the locals perform that "fine passing was the feature." That fine passing, however, will not take the place of goal shooting when the Plainfielders lineup against the boroughites two weeks hence.

Postponement of the Park Club-Elks' series on the borough alleys reminds us of the fact that the bowlers were winding up their competition last year when the roses were breaking into bloom. It might be well to get this matter off our hands a little earlier this time.

When the N. P. H. S. and Westfield quintets meet on the Saengerbund court tomorrow, it is one safe bet that the fur will fly. These two squads have always harbored a little personal rivalry and it is just about due to crop out in this engagement.

Basketball at the Columbus Club will become a reality within the next couple of days. The net has arrived and all that remains now is to organize a quitet. The West Front street athletes claim this is the easiest task that confronts them.

Something will be doing along the bowling line at the Columbus drives tonight. Two rivals will hit the maples to decide the third rung right and a rally meeting of the Rooters' Club has been called for the occasion.

HOPE VS. MILLTOWN FIVE.

The Hope Chapel basketball team will meet the team representing the M. E. church, of Milltown, on the Fourth street court, Saturday night.

INSIDE THE TIRE

as well as outside quality is rigidly enforced in the making of our tires. Autoists of experience want tires of the best and their other auto supplies must be of the same character. The wisest come here, and for many excellent reasons. Ask us about them.

SPORTING NOTES

Utica, N. Y., is entertaining the curlers of the U. S. and Canada. The championship club match was played yesterday.

Chick Gandil is reported to have an injured wing, which may add greatly to Griffith's many troubles.

Kid Williams, the bantam champ, takes on Eddie O'Keefe at Philadelphia for six rounds next Wednesday night.

The amateur wrestlers will get busy in Chicago on the sixteenth, and the mat events will be continued on February 6.

The Boston Athletic Association celebrated last week its twenty-sixth anniversary, with the exclusiveness that makes it but a name in athletics.

The three-string fire-men candlepin record was broken last week at Boston. The new figure is 1747, and only one string fell below 100.

Tennis fans are interested to know that Anthony Wilding, of New Zealand, hero of 26 Davis Cup matches, is a motorcyclist at the front.

The Minneapolis Athletic Club will open in May. It promises to be a record breaker, for $400,000 from memberships alone has been raised.

Olga Nelson, a cousin of our old friend Bat, will enter the ring at Newport, Ky., next Tuesday night. Olga is not a female, boys.

Cincinnati has a corking ring battle scheduled for next Friday night, when "Goo" Stewart meets K. O. Mars.

The rules of conduct laid down last week by the highbrows at Chicago define an amateur as an unfeeling, unthinking boob.

Mike Gibbons has two fights ahead this month. On the 18th he tackles Eddie McGoorty at Hudson, Wis., and three days later Jimmy Clabby at Milwaukee.

New Yorkers are planning to charter the steamer Finland, which carried the Olympic athletes, and sail through the Canal for the Frisco games next summer.

REVISED SCHEDULED ISSUED FOR LEAL SCHOOL QUINTET

After postponing several games and cancelling several others to satisfy the dates of the Interscholastic League, Manager Fred Dickerson, of the Leal School five, has a list made up which he hopes to keep straight for the rest of the season. There are thirteen games yet to be played by the private school aggregation and a game with Morristown, at that place, is pending.

The complete schedule follows:

January.

Wed., 13—Morristown at Morristown (pending).
Mon., 18—Upsala at Y. M. C. A.
Wed., 20—Morristown at Y. M. C. A.
Sat., 23—Carteret at Carteret.
Wed., 27—P. H. C. at Y. M. C. A.
Sat., 30—Columbia Grammar school at New York.

February.

Mon., 1—Bernardsville at Y. M. C. A.
Wed., 3—N. P. H. S., at Saengerbund Hall.
Wed., 10—Carteret at Y. M. C. A.
Mon., 15—Westfield at Y. M. C. A.
Sat., 20—P. H. S. at P. H. S.
Wed., 24—Col. Grammar School at Y. M. C. A.
Sat., 27—N. P. H. S., undecided.

PICKS Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES TO COMPETE AT P. H. S.

Physical Director Robert Meermans, of the Y. M. C. A., has picked out eighteen members of the senior class of the association to compete in the dual athletic meet to be held with the Plainfield High School track team in the High School gym tomorrow night. Mr. Meermans has not yet classed his men in the events that are to be contested, but will probably put about five men in each event.

Coach John Fritts, of the school team, has his men in good condition and the meet should be an interesting one. Those who will compete for the Y. M. C. A. are J. S. Karlberg, Gus Engler, O. Mogenson, Henry V. Kinney, Oscar Phillipson, Erick VanOrden, P. Caruso, W. Phillipson, Benny Berse, Bert Hansen, J. Dunlap, Dave Clarin, Noble Ricketts, R. Campbell, Norman Bohl and Harry Moulton.

Y. M. C. A. OUT OF TOWN.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will not perform on the local association court Saturday night, but will take its first week-end out of town trip. The game will be played with the Washington Heights Y. M. C. A. five at that place. The locals will probably leave on the 6:25 train. The local gym will be occupied that night by the teams of the Color and Employed Boys' Leagues.

WILL HANG B. B. NET.

The basketball net that is to be placed in the auditorium of the Columbus Club so that the floor may be used as a basketball court, will be hung tonight by the members, and practice will probably begin in the near future. The court will be of good size and will be one of the best in the city.

ANCHOR VS. ORIENT.

The Anchor bowling team, of the Masonic League, will play the Orient five on the local alleys tonight. The games will probably take place on the Elks' alleys, on Watchung avenue.

FUNERAL OF GEORGE WHITE.

The funeral services of George F. White, of 41 Willow avenue, the borough, who died suddenly, yesterday morning of apoplexy, will be held at 2:30 Saturday afternoon, at the First Baptist church, of which he was a life-long member.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

Tells Rheumatism Sufferers to Eat Less Meat and Take Salts.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grape and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

SOLVING THE GREAT AMERICAN PROBLEM

New York, Jan. 7—From all sections of America reports have been received here showing an alarming condition in employment. Millions are out of work, and many of them have exhausted their savings and are added to the army of the distressed.

The charities bureaus in nearly every city and town are burdened more than ever this winter. Municipal lodging houses are filled to overflowing wherever they exist. Churches everywhere realize the serious conditions and their organizations are doing what they can for immediate relief. Many cities have put married men to work to stem the tide of distress, private aid is being furnished to untold thousands, soup kitchens are in operation, and every form of charitable aid is being overtaxed to care for the idle.

Besides the great body of inefficient, who are always in distress, and are ever a burden on every community, the American cities are filled with real producers who seek to earn their living. Skilled mechanics of all kinds find it nearly as difficult to find jobs as do common laborers. With this class of efficient American workers in distress, and the reports show vast numbers of them everywhere out of work, a condition rivaling the distress of the Belgians has been reached.

In this city one hundred workmen have offered their blood to hospitals for transfusion, and those accepted were termed fortunate. Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont is opening up free soup kitchens for women and girls out of work. 1,000 churches are aiding the distressed. The city government is furnishing food and beds, for which applicants are put to work. A donation of 600 pairs of shoes was held up because of red tape.

In St. Louis, there are 80,000 out of work, or 40 per cent. of the workers, according to a committee appointed to investigate. The jobless there are swamping the free soup line and are in serious straits.

Dayton, O., reports 10,000 jobless, through its Mayor, who has sought the aid of the city government and employers' organizations.

Milwaukee's army of unemployed is estimated at 30,000 by Frank J. Weber, business agent of the Federated Trades Council. 25 out of 300 applicants at the State employment agency obtained jobs at 18 cents an hour cutting ice. That result in one day shows the scarcity of work.

Congress has been asked to rush construction on public works in Washington, where the associated charities and the churches are aroused by the seriousness of the unemployment situation.

In Philadelphia the relief of the destitute is calling for heavy appropriations. The city is responding nobly, and many are employed on public works.

A despatch from Sacramento warns unemployed away from California, which is hard hit. San Francisco and Oakland are overflowing with unemployed, and all buildings available for housing them are filled. State and municipal authorities are joining hands for relief work.

In Seattle there have been food riots, the headquarters of the Salvation Army being raided for food and clothing by desperate men.

In Calgary, the city is putting its idle to work on sewer construction, and the government is asked to build houses at this time to aid the back to the farm movement. At Ottawa, the Canadian government has been asked to establish government farms. Serious conditions are reported here from all over the Dominion. Montreal jobless run into many thousands, and the public works are being extended to give employment. Toronto is overrun with unemployed, and distress is serious. Aid is given to those who will work, but steady jobs are scarce.

In Atlanta, city jobs for one thousand men have been supplied by appropriations, and there are many more thousands idle. Cincinnati is employing 600 on public works. Kansas City reports many out of work, and a rock quarry has been opened up as a partial relief. Richmond has added 500 to the city's payroll, but this does not meet the emergency there. Nashville churches are aiding a big number of unemployed, and many are to be employed in clearing timber land. Of the first 1,000 jobless who registered, only 150 secured work, and the registering stopped.

Chicago has many thousands of idle workmen. The serious situation among the women workers has been relieved by the Woman's Club.

Dallas has 5,000 unemployed, and the city authorities are working with the churches to affect relief.

DEATH OF VETERAN RAILROAD FLAGMAN

Pierce Powers, aged about 75 years, one of the best known residents of this city, died last night at the home of his son, Maurice Powers, 763 East Second street, following a long illness. Mr. Powers had lived in Plainfield and vicinity for forty years. At one time he owned a farm near Scotch Plains, removing to Plainfield a few years later.

For some time he was employed by the New Jersey Central as flagman at the Fanwood "cut" prior to the introduction of the block signal system. His last place of employment was at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he did odd jobs. He leaves one son, Maurice Powers, who is employed by the Welsh Farms Dairy. The funeral will be held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's church and the burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Springfield, Ill.—Mrs. Althea F Grimsby, of this city, has been appointed deputy sheriff of Sangamon county, the first woman to fill the office in the county's history.

Andover, Mass.—Madame Pararetoff, wife of the new minister from Bulgaria, was formerly Miss Lydia Gile, of Andover, and met her husband while teaching school in Constantinople.

Vancouver, B. C.—Miss Kathleen Dunsmuir, 20 years old, daughter of James Dunsmuir, former lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, and millionaire mine owner, has sailed for France to offer her services to the Red Cross as an ambulance motor driver.

Cincinnati, O.—Miss Anna E. Logan has been appointed assistant superintendent of the Cincinnati public schools. She is the first woman to get the appointment in the city's history.

Boston, Mass.—Miss Phyllis Sears, Boston's richest heiress, worth $3,500,000 in her own right, is reported engaged to "Wallie" Trumbull, Harvard athlete and a comparatively poor boy. Miss Sears is a cousin of Miss Eleonora Sears, famed society athlete.

New York—Miss Anne Morgan is one of the five Americans to be decorated on January 15 with the gold medal of the National Institute of Social Science, which is called by some the American equivalent of the grand cross of the French Legion of Honor. Eugene Brieux, Luther Burbank, Andrew Carnegie and Myron T. Herrick are to receive similar honors.

Upon the retirement of Miss Sadie American, its inspirer and virtual founder, the National Council of Jewish Women has chosen as its new head Mrs. Nathan Harris, of Bradford, Pa. The council does extensive work among immigrant Jewish girls, 16,000 of whom came into this country last year.

Annette Kellerman, the famous swimmer and perfect woman, has given a cup for swimming events for women at the auto show this week, and is herself to act as judge.

Kansas City—The Women's Commercial Club, of this city, will soon begin the erection of a 10-story building devoted to business women. No man will be allowed to rent space, and female help only will be employed by the tenants.

Chicago—The women of the Municipal Art League, of Chicago, have begun an extended movement for fostering of art in handiwork among women in the home as well as in the commercial world. Lace-making, weaving, crocheting, basketry and embroidery will be taught by lecturers, and exhibits will be held.

Prescott, Ariz.—Mrs. Frances W. Munds, the first woman elected State Senator in the history of Arizona, has been offered the presidency of the Arizona Senate. Mrs. Munds expects to be a member of the next Democratic National Convention.

San Francisco—First steps for providing pensions for California mothers have been taken by Governor H. W. Johnson. Miss Katherine Felton, secretary of the Associated Charities, of this city; Mrs. Frances Noll, of Los Angeles, and Dr. Flora W. Smith, of Kingsburg, are members of the commission appointed.

Pinehurst, N. C.—Society women from all over the country have entered their names for the golf tournament of the Silver Foils, Pinehurst's club of women golfers, which opened this week, to close in April.

Newport—Miss Henrietta Thaw's engagement to Lawrence Slade, manager of the Equitable Bank and Trust Company, of Paris and London, was society's most interesting bit of gossip this week. William Thaw, a brother of the bride-to-be, is an aviator in the French army.

Newark—Mrs. Margaret Brydon Laird, a graduate nurse and the wife of a druggist, has been appointed a member of the local Board of Health.

Atlantic City—A vigorous plea for better collegiate education for New Jersey girls was made at the 60th convention of the New Jersey Teachers' Association this week. All the States excepting Maryland, Virginia and New Jersey have made their State institutions co-educational, it was claimed.

The Dunbar Club will hold its usual social evening of music and dancing in the Washington School tomorrow evening.

The Italian Athletic and Dramatic Clubs will meet tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the Lincoln School.

FEEDING AN ARMY.

Method of Supplying Food to Troops on the Battlefield.

How an army in the field gets its food from day to day is told in the Scientific American, from which the following extracts are taken:

The supply train of an infantry division carries two days' field and grain rations. In the late afternoon or at the end of a march or close of a combat the division commander directs the field trains to move up immediately in the rear of the troops and informs the commanding officers of organizations that one day's rations have been ordered to a designated place. An orderly is sent to that place to conduct the wagons to the organization. After being unloaded they return immediately and join the grouped portion of the ration section. That same night or early the following morning the empty wagons are refilled from the supply train, and this latter secures a renewal of its supplies from a designated point on the line of communications or is reloaded from a train pertaining to the line of communications if the distance from the end of that line of the zone occupied by the troops is so great as to warrant the use of a train.

There are two methods of supplying an army in the field:

First.—By consignments of supplies forwarded by the service of the line of communications and distributed as above indicated.

Second.—By utilizing the resources of the country.

It is generally necessary to utilize to the fullest extent the food, especially the forage, available in the theater of operations. In former times the invader possessed the right of booty and pillage, the resort to which was most unfortunate for the army, as it embittered the population and compromised the safety of the troops in an enemy's country, and in the event of any real or imagined injury being done them it gave rise to redress and reprisals.

GOOD NATURAL TEETH.

What They Mean to the Man Over Fifty Years of Age.

"Few factors conduce to jolly age as does pride in personal appearance," writes Dr. John Philip Erwin of Perkasie, Pa., in Oral Hygiene. "A well groomed person never grows old. Especially essential are well cared for teeth. At no time in life are teeth more valuable than when a man has passed fifty. They double in worth every year after the half century year stone has been reached.

"It is a sad fact," he continues, "that all the dental parlors and powers, past, present and to come, combined and concentrated, cannot restore the normal form of a face destroyed by extraction. It is a blessed truth that modern dentistry can prevent this calamity.

"But the greatest blessing of natural teeth in declining years is derived from the assistance they give to the boiler of the body, the stomach, throughout that period when digestion is on the wane. In youth the stomach stood for beer, Dutch lunches, rabbits and lodge banquets. It seldom kicked back. Not so in maturity. The teeth must now arbitrate many health questions. When the disgruntled stomach is tandemed with dental deficiency the remaining members of the alimentary canal join in a rebellion against food oppression which culminates in a revolution that proves a revelation to the victim. Dyspepsia may be conquered in youth, but never in age. The most pessimistic stomach, coupled with dental efficiency, will develop a fair degree of optimism, possibly a continuous life of sunshine.

"Good teeth at fifty proclaim family character, conserve facial contour and insure food comfort."

Now the BOYS Have Their Turn—

4,350 Boys' Wash Suits In the January Sale

Manufacturers welcome the opportunity afforded by this annual Wanamaker sale of Boys' Suits. It is the opportunity which allows them to keep their workrooms going during a dull season. The merchandise in the sale is the equal of our regular year-round stocks. Every suit was newly purchased.

The styles are those that are most popular with boys and in a large variety—Oliver Twist, vestee, Russian, Balkan middy, Norfolk, sailor, etc. The materials cover an equally comprehensive range—linen, galatea, ratine, madras, rep, English twill, silk and linen mixtures, chambray, percale, cheviot, khaki and linen.

The majority of the materials in the suits at $2.25 are imported.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the messy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.—Adv.

CHAPTER IV.

The Yukon Surrenders.

THERE was a long minute of silence. Shorty was the first to speak.

"Come on," he said. "We might as well tackle it. My feet 'll get cold if I stay here any longer."

Shorty and Kit tramped back through a foot of snow to the head of the rapids and cast off the boat.

"You've sure got to keep the top of the ridge," Shorty shouted at him as the boat quickened in the quickening current and took the head of the rapids.

Kit nodded, swayed his strength and weight tentatively on the steering gear and headed the boat for the plunge.

Several minutes later, half swamped and lying against the bank in the eddy below the White Horse, Shorty spat out a mouthful of tobacco juice and shook Kit's hand.

At the top of the bank they met Breck. His wife stood at a little distance. Kit shook his hand.

"I'm afraid your boat can't make it," he said. "It is smaller than ours and a bit cranky."

The man pulled out a roll of bills. "I'll give you each a hundred if you run it through."

Kit looked out and up the tossing mane of the White Horse. A long, gray twilight was falling, it was turning colder, and the landscape seemed taking on a savage bleakness.

"It ain't that," Shorty was saying. "We don't want your money. But my pardner is the real meat with boats, an' when he says yourn ain't safe I reckon he knows what he's talkin' about."

Kit nodded affirmation and chanced to glance at Mrs. Breck. Her eyes were fixed upon him, and he knew that if ever he had seen prayer in a woman's eyes he was seeing it then. Shorty followed his gaze and saw what he saw. They looked at each other in confusion and did not speak. Moved by the common impulse, they nodded to each other and turned to the trail that led to the head of the rapids.

Barely had they shoved Breck's boat out from the bank and caught the first rough water when the waves began to lap aboard. They were small waves, but it was an earnest of what was to come.

The rapids grew stiffer, and the spray began to fly. In the gathering darkness Kit glimpsed the mane and the crooked fling of the current into it. He worked into this crooked current and felt a glow of satisfaction as the boat hit the head of the mane squarely in the middle. After that, in the smother, leaping and burying and swamping, he had no clear impression of anything save that he swung his weight on the steering oar.

They emerged breathless, wet through, the boat filled with water almost to the gunwale. Lighter pieces of baggage and outfit were floating inside the boat. A few careful strokes on Shorty's part worked the boat into the draw of the eddy, and the eddy did the rest till the boat softly touched the bank.

Looking down from above was Mrs Breck. Her prayer had been answered, and the tears were streaming down her cheeks.

"You boys have simply got to take the money," Breck called down to them.

Shorty stood up, slipped and sat down in the water, while the boat dipped one gunwale under and righted again.

"Dern the money," said Shorty. "Fetch out that whisky. Now that it's over I'm gettin' cold feet, an' I'm sure likely to have a chill."

The trail by water crossed Lake Labarge. Here was no fast current, but a tideless stretch of forty miles which must be rowed unless a fair wind blew. But the time for fair wind was past, and an icy gale blew in their teeth out of the north. This made a rough sea, against which it was almost impossible to pull the boat. Added to their troubles was driving snow; also the freezing of the water on their oar blades kept one man occupied in chopping it off with a hatchet. Compelled to take their turn at the oars, Sprague and Stine patiently loafed.

At the end of three hours Sprague pulled his oar in and said they would run back into the mouth of the river for shelter. Stine seconded him, and the several hard won miles were lost. A second day, and a third, the same fruitless attempt was made. The freezeup was very imminent.

"We could make it if they had the souls of clams," Kit told Shorty as they dried their moccasins by the fire on the evening of the third day. "We could have made it today if they hadn't turned back. Another hour's work would have fetched that west shore. They're—they're babes in the woods."

Shorty debated a moment. "Look here, Smoke. It's hundreds of miles to Dawson. If we don't want to freeze in here we've got to do somethin'. If we're goin' to Dawson we got to take charge of this here outfit."

They looked at each other.

"It's a go," said Kit as his hand went out in ratification.

"I'll give you each a hundred if you run it through."

In the morning, long before daylight, Shorty issued his call. "Come on," he roared, "tumble out, you sleepers. Here's your coffee! Kick into it. We're goin' to make a start!"

Grumbling and complaining, Stine and Sprague were forced to get underway two hours earlier than ever before. If anything, the gale was stiffer, and in a short time every man's face was iced up, while the oars were heavy with ice.

Three hours they struggled, and four one man steering, one chopping ice two toiling at the oars and each taking his various turns. The northwest shore loomed nearer and nearer. The gale blew ever harder, and at last Sprague pulled in his oar in token of surrender. Shorty sprang to it, though his relief had only begun.

"Chop ice," he said, handing Sprague the hatchet.

"But what's the use?" the other whined. "We can't make it. We're going to turn back."

"We're goin' on," said Shorty. "Chop ice. An' when you feel better you can spell me."

It was heartbreaking toil, but they gained the shore, only to find it composed of surge beaten rocks and cliffs with no place to land.

Nobody spoke, and Kit held the boat into the seas as they skirted the forbidding shore. Sometimes they gained no more than a foot to the stroke, and there were times when two or three strokes no more than enabled them to hold their own. Another hour they labored and a second.

A few minutes later Sprague drew in his oar again. "I'm finished," he said, and there were tears in his voice.

Stine had ceased rowing, and the boat was drifting backward.

"Turn around, Smoke," Sprague ordered.

And Kit, who never in his life had cursed any man, astonished himself. "I'll see you in h— first," he replied. "Take hold of that oar and pull."

Sprague jerked off a mitten, drew his revolver and turned it on his steersman. This was a new experience to Kit. He had never had a gun presented at him in his life. And now, to his surprise, it seemed to mean nothing at all.

"If you don't put that gun up," he said, "I'll take it away and rap you over the knuckles with it."

"If you don't turn the boat around I'll shoot you," Sprague threatened.

Then Shorty took a hand. He ceased chopping ice and stood up behind Sprague. "Go on an' shoot," said Shorty, wiggling the hatchet. "I'm just achin' for a chance to brain you. Go on an' start the festivities."

"Sprague," Kit said, "I'll give you just thirty seconds to put away that gun and get that oar out."

Sprague hesitated, gave a short hysterical laugh, put the revolver away and bent his back to the work.

For two hours more, inch by inch, they fought their way along the edge of the foaming rocks until Kit feared he had made a mistake. And then, when on the verge of himself turning back, they came abreast of a narrow opening not twenty feet wide, which led into a landlocked inclosure where the fiercest gusts scarcely flawed the surface. It was the haven gained by the boats of previous days. They landed on a shelving beach, and the two employers lay in collapse in the boat, while Kit and Shorty pitched the tent, built a fire and started the cooking.

A cup of coffee, set aside to cool and forgotten, a few minutes later was found coated with half an inch of ice. At 8 o'clock, when Sprague and Stine, already rolled in their blankets, were sleeping the sleep of exhaustion, Kit came back from a look at the boat.

"It's the freezeup, Shorty," he announced. "There's a skin of ice over the whole pond already. The rapid current of the river may keep it open for days. This time tomorrow any boat caught in Lake Labarge remains there until next year."

"You mean we got to get out tonight? Now?"

Kit nodded.

"Tumble out, you sleepers," was Shorty's answer, couched in a roar, as he began casting off the guy ropes of the tent.

They broke their way through the thin ice in the little harbor and came out on the lake, where the water, heavy and glassy, froze on their oars with every stroke. The water soon became like mush, clogging the stroke of the oars and freezing in the air even as it dipped. Later the surface began to form a skin, and the boat proceeded slower and slower.

Often afterward, when Kit tried to remember that night and failed to bring up aught but nightmare recollections, he wondered what must have been the sufferings of Stine and Sprague. His one impression of himself was that he struggled through biting frost and intolerable exertion for a thousand years, more or less.

Morning found them stationary. Stine complained of frosted fingers, and Sprague of his nose, while the pain in Kit's cheeks and nose told him that he, too, had been touched. With each accretion of daylight they could see farther, and as far as they could see was icy surface. The water of the lake was gone.

A hundred yards away was the shore of the north end. Shorty insisted that it was the opening of the river and that he could see water. He and Kit alone were able to work, and with their oars they broke the ice and forced the boat along. And at the last gasp of their strength they made the suck of the rapid river. One look back showed them several boats which had fought through the night and were hopelessly frozen in; then they whirled around a bend in a current running six miles an hour.

Day by day they floated down the swift river, and day by day the shore ice extended farther out. When they made camp at nightfall they chopped a space in the ice in which to lay the boat and carried the camp outfit hundreds of feet to shore. In the morning they chopped the boat out through the new ice and caught the current. Shorty set up the sheet iron stove in the boat, and over this Stine and Sprague hung through the long drifting hours. They had surrendered, no longer gave orders, and their one desire was to gain Dawson.

The last night ashore was spent between the mouths of the White river and the Stewart. At daylight they found the Yukon, half a mile wide, running white from ice rimmed bank to ice rimmed bank.

"We'll be the last boat this year to make Dawson," Kit said.

"But they ain't no water, Smoke."

"Then we'll ride the ice down. Come on."

Futilely protesting, Sprague and Stine were bundled on board. For half an hour with axes Kit and Shorty struggled to cut a way into the swift but solid stream. When they did succeed in clearing the shore ice the floating ice forced the boat along the edge for a hundred yards, tearing away half of one gunwale and making a partial wreck of it. Then at the lower end of the bend they caught the current that flung off shore.

They proceeded to work farther toward the middle. The stream was no longer composed of mush ice, but of hard cakes. In between the cakes only was mush ice that froze solidly as they looked at it. Shoving with the oars against the cakes, sometimes climbing out on the cakes in order to force the boat along, after an hour they gained the middle.

Five minutes after they ceased their exertions the boat was frozen in. The whole river was coagulating as it ran. Cake froze to cake until at last the boat was the center of a cake seventy five feet in diameter. Sometimes they floated sidewise, sometimes stern first, while gravity tore asunder the forming fetters in the moving mass, only to be manacled by faster forming ones.

Night came, and after many efforts they gave up the attempt to force the boat to shore, and through the darkness they swept helplessly onward.

Their speed began to diminish and cakes of ice to upend and crash and smash about them. The river was jamming. One cake, forced upward, slid across their cake and carried one side of the boat away. It did not sink, for its own cake still upbore it, but in a whirl they saw dark water show for an instant within a foot of them. Then all movement ceased.

At the end of half an hour the whole river picked itself up and began to move. This continued for an hour, when again it was brought to rest by a jam. Once again it started, running swiftly and savagely, with a great grinding. Then they saw lights ashore, and when abreast gravity and the Yukon surrendered, and the river ceased for six months.

For three days Kit and Shorty labored carrying the ton and a half outfit from the middle of the river to the log cabin Stine and Sprague had bought on the hill overlooking Dawson. This work finished, in the warm cabin as twilight was falling Sprague motioned Kit to him. Outside the thermometer registered 65 below zero.

"Your full month isn't up, Smoke," Sprague said. "But here it is in full. I wish you luck."

"How about the agreement?" Kit asked. "You know there's a famine here. You agreed"—

"I know of no agreement," Sprague interrupted. "Do you, Stine? We engaged you by the month. There's your pay. Will you sign the receipt?"

Kit's hands clinched, and for the moment he saw red. Both men shrank away from him. Shorty saw his trouble and interposed.

"Look here, Smoke. I ain't travelin' no more with a onery outfit like this. Right here's where I sure jump it. You an' me stick together. Savvy? Now, you take your blankets and hike down to the Elkhorn. Wait for me. I'll settle up, collect what's comin' an' give them what's comin'. I ain't no good on the water, but my feet's on terry firmy now, an' I'm goin' to make smoke."

Half an hour afterward Shorty appeared at the Elkhorn. From his bleeding knuckles and the skin off one cheek it was evident that he had given Stine and Sprague what was coming.

"You ought to see that cabin," he chuckled as they stood at the bar. "Roughhouse ain't no name for it. Dollars to doughnuts nary one of 'em shows up on the street for a week.

"An' now it's all figgered out for you an' me. Grub's a dollar an' a half a pound. They ain't no work for wages without you have your own grub. Moose meat's sellin' for $2 a pound, an' they ain't none. We got enough money for a month's grub an' ammunition, an' we hike up the Klondike to the back country. If they ain't no moose we go an' live with the Indians. But if we ain't got 5,000 pounds of meat six weeks from now I'll—I'll sure go back an' apologize to our bosses. Is it a go?"

Kit's hand went out, and they shook. Then he faltered. "I don't know anything about hunting," he said.

Shorty lifted his glass. "But you're a sure meat eater, an' I'll learn you."

Daddy's Bedtime Story—The Funny Antics of Prudence Prim.

She Clipped Off Their Nails.

"PRUDENCE PRIM is very queer," said daddy as Jack and Evelyn cuddled down for the evening story. "She always wants everything different from what they naturally would be.

"She lives in a tiny cottage in Queer street, and she has all sorts of pets and barnyard fowls and animals. When she first got her pussy cat and her little dog they used to run in and out of the house just like any other pussy cat and little dog. But Prudence Prim didn't like that, so she set about to train them to wipe their feet on the doormat.

"Her ducks loved to swim, and when Miss Prudence first got them they used to swim in the little pond down by the barn. But Miss Prudence soon stopped that sort of thing. She didn't like to see them wet their feathers, so she tied up their feet in little socks that she made out of white cloth.

"Then her chickens, which she bought of a farmer, used to scratch in the dirt. But Prudence Prim didn't like that, either. She thought the farmer hadn't brought them up to be very neat. Their toe nails would get full of grit, and their feathers would get all full of dirt. So what does Miss Prudence Prim do but catch all her hens one by one and clip off their nails. Then she put them under the hose and washed them. They squawked a good deal, and they limped around forlornly afterward, but Miss Prudence had her way.

"Her sheep grew the loveliest winter coats you ever saw, all woolly and thick. But when Miss Prudence tried to brush the wool flat the wool refused to lie flat, much to her dismay. So she took a pair of big sharp shears, and she cut off all the wool that the poor sheep had grown for their protection from the cold during the winter, and she rigged them out in the most amazing red flannel suits. They buttoned down the front, and then she made big starched frills to go around their necks and around each leg. Just think of what Miss Prudence Prim's laundry bills must be, for she insists upon each frill being immaculate.

"But one of the funniest things she does is to dust her apples, pears and peaches while they are ripening on the trees, and she put mosquito netting over her vines and potatoes in the garden.

"If you should go to visit Miss Prudence Prim she would meet you at the door and greet you very cordially, but before she would permit you to enter she would ask you to take off your shoes."

"She must be a Japanese, daddy!" cried Evelyn.

"No; Miss Prudence Prim is American, and there are a heap of people just like her, only they don't know it."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Did you notice that little woman that we just passed?" asked Mrs. Bryson.

"No; what about her?" replied her friend, looking back.

"She has an interesting story. You see that trim little shop built on the side of that good-looking house? That's where she lives, and she runs that shop."

"Left a widow, I suppose," remarked her friend. "Did she have the shop built?"

"Yes. When her husband died her two children were mere babies. All they had in the world had been put into that house and it was not paid for. Times were dull, so she was not sure even that she could sell it. The company that built the house was very kind to her. Told her that as long as the interest was kept up it would make her no trouble. But she had absolutely no income, and she could not take a position for there was no one to take care of the babies."

"She surely had her hands and heart full," murmured her companion.

"She told me she sat up one whole night trying desperately to figure out a way to keep her children with her, and she succeeded," resumed Mrs. Bryson. "The next day she got a neighbor girl to stay with the babies and she went to the public library and asked for a book telling about chicle."

"Chicle," repeated her friend. "What's that?"

"It's the principal ingredient in all the chewing gum on the market. In the books she found the recipes for making gum and copied them out. She bought the ingredients and the different flavorings. She also got some pink and white tissue and a hundred mottos, such as are wrapped in some candies. Then she went to work on the gum. You may have noticed that her house is near a school building. The next morning a placard on the front door announced fresh home-made chewing gum for sale, six sticks for five cents. Some children came in. She had her wares on a table in the hall. The fringed tissue wrappers and mottos made a hit with them and before night every stick of gum was sold."

"Good for her!" exclaimed her friend.

"The next day she made double the quantity in all the different flavorings and again was sold out before night. Thus encouraged she made gum by the quantity and tried some home-made candies. Her gum and candies became the vogue. Everybody in town patronized her; they admired her pluck. Well, do you know at the end of the second month she was able to make a payment on the house, and presently she finished paying for it.

"Being right at home she could care for the children and make their clothes. I tell you she is a manager. In a few years she built that neat little shop off of her dining room," and Mrs. Bryson beamed with pride over her neighbor.

"Where are the children now?" asked her friend.

"In the university, and both of them are doing well. The boy graduates this year. She is all alone except for a roomer."

"How happy she must be to feel that she has been able to do so much for her children," said her friend, as they stopped in front of Mrs. Bryson's house.

CLOTHING ON CREDIT AT CASH PRICES
$1 WEEKLY TO ALL
A FEW
people think that to buy clothing on credit means dowdy, ill-fitting garments, high prices and brow-beating treatment.
Maybe their reasons for thinking as they do are well founded. Maybe they have dealt with some firm, which does business along the old lines which were once thought necessary by all—or nearly all—credit giving stores.
But one trial of Laurie's Credit System will open their eyes to the newer, better way.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — THIS ONE HAD SCOOP GUESSING — BY "HOP"

LITERARY

A LOVE FOOTING FOR THE POWERS.

Love is the key to the recovery of unity and harmony in the family, in the social order, and among nations. And it is the only key.

As one reads the diplomatic correspondence between nations, he is struck by the lovelessness of their inter-relations. Even "mobilization" is no menace to nations that love their neighbors. Somehow the international love of each other has still not been created after all these centuries of Christianity. The "Powers" have never tried being on a "love" footing with each other. Perhaps the relations of Great Britain and the United States, with a border undefended extending over thousands of miles, most nearly reach that condition. It is truly a footing of mutual confidence and trust; and we venture to say that the present trials of the mother country are making it much nearer a footing of love than it has ever been before. Today the United States is trying to develop a love footing with all the world. But we need not look away from our own people to discover how slowly that feeling really permeates a whole nation. There has been much in the recent foreign relations of the United States to indicate that the whole American people was not willing to be on strictly love relations with all the world. And in Europe that system—the only Christian system—has never been tried. International relations among nations of Christian people have slowly developed from deliberate duplicity to something resembling Christian honor, so that many of the nations—perhaps not all—honestly try to deal justly with their neighbors. For that great advance the Christian religion is to be credited. But that they should love one another, and base their foreign relations on love, is yet untried. What power ever said, "We love each of you, the other powers, therefore let us all cut down to a minimum these armaments that threaten our peace?"—The Living Church.

Freeholders Learn That $32,000 is Appropriated for Mosquito Extermination Work—Director Cady Appoints New Committees.

Elizabeth, Jan. 8—The board of managers of Bonnie Burn Sanitorium at Scotch Plains, submitted a lengthy report at the January meeting of the Board of Freeholders, yesterday, going over the work of the institution for the past year and making several recommendations. Among the latter was a request for an automobile ambulance, an appeal for a $10,000 power house appropriation and also a suggestion that new outhouses replace the old ones. The number of patients cared for during the year was given and the cost of individual maintenance placed at $11.50. Total receipts of $53,147.12 were reported, of which there is a balance on hand of $1,516.42.

County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt reported the matter pending regarding the failure of the stockholders of the City National Bank, Plainfield, to pay their State bank tax to the county and it was referred to County Attorney William R. Codington.

Jacob G. Lipman, of the State Experimental Station, at New Brunswick, reported that he had approved a budget of expenses of the Union County Mosquito Commission for the ensuing year, and which called for an appropriation of $32,000. His report was referred to the new mosquito extermination committee, consisting of Freeholders Wilbur, Randolph and Hennessy.

The jail committee reported the reappointment of Dr. Horace R. Livengood as jail physician at a salary of $400 per year. The jail housed 1,063 prisoners during the year and the cost of each one was $31.30. The administration of the jail was commended by the committee and reference was made to the praise bestowed on it by the State Charities Aid Society.

Auditing—Wilbur, Smith, Jones; jail—Perry, Marsh, Bourdon; discharge of prisoners—McMane, Wilbur, Hennessy; lunacy—Meisel Doane, Trembly; widows' pensions—Teller, Marsh, Trembly; grounds and buildings—Krouse, Smith, Bourdon; publication—Thompson, Darby, Meyerholtz; stationery—Darby, Teller, Jones; county roads—Krouse, Wilbur, Smith, Meisel, Bourdon; miscellaneous—Darby, Thompson, J. RATE FIXING LAW CHANGE SUGGESTED Public Utility Commission Make Recommendation to Legislators.

Trenton, Jan. 8—To offset the recent decision of the Court of Errors and Appeals setting aside its 90 cent gas rate order, the Board of Public Utility Commissioners, yesterday recommended to the Legislature the passage of a law specifically providing that franchises of public utilities shall not be given valuation in excess of the legitimate cost of obtaining them in the fixing of rates.

The Board pointed out that unless the law is amended or the decision of the Court of Errors modified, the Board has no alternative in future rate cases, but to give to franchises a substantial value, indicated by the court as being the difference between the value of a company's tangible property and the market value of its securities.

In its perusal of the opinion handed down by Justice Parker, the Board found no declaration questioning the right of the Legislature to declare a State policy different from that now in effect. Individual members of the Legislature have already considered the advisability of introducing such a bill as that suggested by the Board. Caucus action on the subject, however, has been deferred by the Republican majority pending the court's decision on an application for a reargument of the gas case.

Formal application for the reargument and briefs of counsel were distributed to the court yesterday, having been filed with the clerk Wednesday. Oral arguments on the application will be heard today, when the Public Service Gas Company will have opportunity to present its contentions against re-opening the case.

ALLEGED TO HAVE ALLOWED HORSE TO STARVE TO DEATH

Patrolman Charles Wicht reported to the local police department, last night, that a horse owned by Ralph DeLiebro was found lying in the road on Watson avenue. A blanket was placed over the beast at the time and this morning the equine was found dead. It is the opinion of the police that the horse was suffering from want of food and death was due to starvation.

Efforts to locate the owner proving futile the police notified the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and it is probable that steps will be taken to have the owner of the horse severely dealt with by the authorities.

MR. O'BRIEN SURPRISED BY FRIENDS ON BIRTHDAY

Thomas O'Brien, of 729 West Third street, was given a pleasant surprise party at his home, last night, in honor of his birthday. Forty friends were in attendance and the gathering included a large delegation from the Plainfield Association Football Club, of which he is a member. The hours were passed in an informal way, music being a feature. Refreshments were served at midnight.

Among those in attendance, who rendered solos were the following: Charles Hallowell, Edward Stewart, John Sloan, Denns Sloan, Albert Marsh, Joseph Gardner, William Braywood, Alex Campbell, John Donaldson, Fred Bolster, Mrs. Philbin, Mrs. Hodgson, Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Levans, Miss Philban and Miss Hannigan.

A coincidence in connection with the party was the discovery that two others of the partcipants were also having birthdays at the same time. These were Mrs. Ernest Hodgson and William Braywood. The information was received with prolonged applause and congratulations were showered on all three celebrants. Mr. Hodgson was called upon to sing, but owing to the fact that he has a broken arm was unable to respond, but replied with a neatly worded speech.

WHIST PARTY AND DANCE.

The Men's Club, of St. Marks' Mission, is planning for a progressive whist party and dance to be held at the Nonpareil Clubhouse on the evening of Thursday, January 21. The committee in charge is composed of A. J. Lambert, chairman; E. J. Mackoy, Thomas H. Jones and Eugene Johnson. The officers of the club include J. W. Maury, president; J. F. Garrett, secretary, and Charles L. Williams, treasurer.

Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., of the borough, who has been confined to the house during the past week, is rapidly recovering, and will probably return to his duties Monday morning.

SELECT CHAPLAIN FOR LEGISLATURE

City G. O. P. Committee Endorses Rev. Dr. E. G. Read for Place.

ACCEPTANCE RECEIVED

Appointment of Plainfielder Will be Made at Opening Session of Legislature on Tuesday—Salary is $300 Per Annum.

Announcement was made today that Rev. Dr. Edward G. Read, of Second street, had been selected for the appointment of chaplain in the State Senate and it is expected that he will be named when the Legislature convenes at Trenton on Tuesday. Dr. Read, following a conference this morning, agreed to accept the appointment if it was made by the Legislature.

Heretofore, ministers from various parts of the State have from time to time been invited to open the legislative sessions, being paid $10, which amount was intended to cover traveling expenses. This year it was decided to appoint a regular chaplain, fixing the salary at $300 for the session. The matter of selecting a minister for the position was assigned to this part of Union county as a part of the patronage given to the county. Consequently the City Republican Executive Committee will endorse Dr. Read as it endorsed Robert Newton Crane for the position of filing clerk in the Assembly and both will undoubtedly be named Tuesday.

Rev. Dr. Read, being a retired clergyman, is especially well qualified for the new position, which is considered quite an honor, and his friends are much pleased over his selection. Dr. Read was born at Sharon, Conn., November 3, 1844, being the son of Rev. and Mrs. Hollis Read. His father was a pastor at the latter place and was also a missionary to India. Dr. Read was graduated from Princeton University in the Class of '61 and from Princeton Seminary in the Class of '65. He was licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Passaic in 1864.

The first pastorate held by Dr. Read was of the Presbyterian church of Madison, Wis., from 1865-1868. From there he went to the Third Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, where he remained from 1868-1875, when he accepted a call to the Congregational church, of Bennington, Vermont, where he continued until 1882. In that year he became the pastor of the Second Reformed church, of Somerville, remaining there until 1908. Upon his retirement in that year he removed to Plainfield, where he has continued to reside, living in retirement.

Although not now holding any regular pastorate, Dr. Read is frequently called upon to preach in the local churches and he has always evidenced great interest in civic affairs. He is a scholarly gentleman and will undoubtedly lend much dignity to the office he is about to fill in the Legislature.

BIOGRAPHY OF MISS LOUISE ANDREWS' LIFE

Robert E. Speer has just written a little book which many people will wish to have, for it is the story of Louise Andrews' Christian life. It is called "One Girl's Influence." After briefly telling about her early years, most of the book is devoted to bringing out the wonderful influence she had upon her friends, young and old.

Besides her letters and poems, the book contains many of the beautful and helpful sayings and prayers which she had copied in her Bible. It would seem as if through this little volume her influence would continue to be exerted for years to come, so that she being dead would still be speaking for the Master she loved and served so faithfully.

Y. M. C. A. PICTURES.

The Vitagraph Company's motion picture masterpiece, "Captain Alvarez," will be shown at the Y. M. C. A. motion picture entertainments tomorrow afternoon and evening. PLAINFIELDERS TO ATTEND CONFERENCE

Y. W. C. A. to Be Well Represented at Two Days' Session in New York.

The Plainfield Y. W. C. A. will be represented at the annual Northeastern Field Conference which is to be held at national headquarters, 600 Lexington avenue, New York city, by a large delegation of members. The conference will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, January 12 and 13. Eighteen members have already planned to attend at least one of the meetings and others will do so before the conference ends.

There will be two meetings on Tuesday, one in the afternoon and the other in the evening. Miss Louise Brooks and Miss Louise Hilmquist will be among the speakers. There will be three sessions on Wednesday and among the speakers will be Miss Pauline Sage, Miss Emma Hayes, Miss Anna Clark, Miss Anna Rice, Miss Mary Bingham and Miss Lena Farrar, who was here last winter and is known by a large number of the local girls. All of the speakers are actively interested in association work.

Among the Plainfield delegation will be Miss Katharine Aller, Miss Elizabeth Wetherell and Miss Sarah Kadoo, of the association, and Mrs. F. G. Mead, Mrs. Boardman Tyler, Mrs. W. D. Murray, Mrs. F. M. Masker, Mrs. William C. O'Donnell, Mrs. E T. Barrows, Mrs. Frank Hyde and Ethel L. Titsworth, Emily Coriell, E. P. Wickett, Margaret Hawkins, Lillain Fordham, Margaret Mead and Ethel Colton.

WILL VISIT TEXAS AND PANAMA EXPOSITION

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Woodruff, of East Second street, and their granddaughter, Miss Helen Woodruff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff, of the borough, will leave here on January 19 for a two months' vacation trip, part of which will be spent in El Paso, Texas, where Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff's daughter, Mrs. H. S. Potter, lives. They will return by the way of California and will visit the Panama Exposition before coming home.

This will be Mr. Woodruff's first vacation from his real estate and insurance business, and the trip is in the nature of a graduation present to Miss Woodruff, who was a member of the '14 class of the Borough High School.

NOAH DOVE INSTALLS.

District Deputy Otto Ulbrick, of Elizabeth, paid an official visit to Noah Dove Encampment, No. 28, I. O. O. F., last night, for the purpose of installing the recently elected officers. A large number of visiting brothers were in attendance, among them a delegation of State officers. The installation ceremonies were followed by a collation and an informal session, during which addresses were made by Deputy Ulbrick and others.

BOY SUSTAINED INJURY.

While on his way to school yesterday, John Cox, son of E. V. Cox, of East Seventh street, collided with a carriage owner by Isaac Rushmore, of Seventh street and Park avenue. He was attended by Dr. Frederick M. Hughes and after cuts on his head and face had been dressed he was removed to his home. The injuries were not of a serious nature.

COMMISSIONERS ORGANIZE.

Owing to pressure of business and his interest in the State Riparian Commission, President Newton B. Smalley refused to accept renomination as the head of the Chamber of Commerce at the annual meeting last night, and Paul H. Burns, one of the foremost workers in the organization, and a former president, was elected to fill the vacancy. The other officers for the ensuing year were chosen as follows: First vice president, Peter J. McDonough; second vice president, John J. Varley, treasurer, Daniel W. Littell; secretary, Garret A. Keating; assistant secretary, Irving Kunzman; counsel, Winfield S. Angleman; directors, Newton B. Smalley, George L. Babcock, J. E. Curtis, Charles H. Hand, James C. Hansen, D. F. Dugan, C. B. Repp, H. N. McMenimen, J. A. Greene and Winfield S. Angleman. C. B. Repp was re-elected to the office of national counsellor.

An invitation from the West End Civic Association, requesting the presence of a committee from the Chamber of Commerce at the meeting of that organization to be held in the Washington School tonight, was received, and Newton B. Smalley, Paul E. Burns and Winfield S. Angleman were given authority to represent the Commerce Chamber at the session. The question of Plainfield taxes will be discussed at that time and some united action will probably be approved.

The data relative to the ways and means employed by other cities of Plainfield's size in the disposition of garbage and refuse has been collected and it will be put into form to be presented to the public in the near future. The committee in charge of the research has made an exhuastive investigation and the details cited are both interesting and instructive to those who are heading the movement for a public system of garbage removal.

The usual yearly reports of committees and officers were received last night and these proved to be most gratifying. During the year the membership has greatly increased and several new phases of civic improvement have come up for discussion. During the coming year the question of taxation will receive special attention and several other current topics were brought up to be taken care of this term.

In retiring from the rank of an official, President Smalley declared that he hoped to see a consolidation of the various civic bodies during the coming year, declaring that concentrated action in civic matters was what was needed here. At the present time the numerous organizations are split up and represent the four quarters of the city in their individual way.

MRS. LAURA FRANCES BROKAW PASSES AWAY

Mrs. Laura Frances Brokaw, aged sixty years, widow of the late William Brokaw, for many years a local contracting builder, died at her home, 661 West Front street, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Brokaw was a native of this city, and had lived here all her life. She was a member of Trinity Reformed church. Mrs. Brokaw had been in poor health for the past four years, and since the death of her husband and son, Clarence, had failed rapidly.

Her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Chapin, who lived with her, and one son, Morris, survives. The funeral services will be held at the late home Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. John Y. Broak, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will officiate, assisted by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church. Burial will be made at Hillside cemetery.

Y. M. C. A. ANNUAL.

The annual meeting and dinner of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held on Thursday evening, January 21. A report of the past year's work will be presented by President William D. Murray and an address on some phase of the association's many-sided work by one of the secretaries of the International Committee.

SOCIETY TO GIVE DANCE FOR HOSPITAL

Second Affair in Series Will Be Held at High School February 11.

The second dance of the season to be given for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, will take place in the High School Auditorium, on Thursday night, February 11. As was the case before, Mrs. William B. Tyler is the chairman of the committee on arrangements, assisted by Mrs. Daniel Runkle, Mrs. Lewis E. Waring and Mrs. R. Story Rowland. A special feature of the dance next month will be made of the music. The supper will be in charge of Mrs. Runkle and Mrs. Waring.

It is planned to start dancing at 9 o'clock and have it continue until 1. Tickets may be obtained in advance at Randolph's drug store or from members of the committee, as well as at the door on the night of the dance. As the hospital is doing valuable work in the community, and the expenses of conducting it are large, it is hoped that there will be a large turnout of Plainfielders. The floor committee will consist of C. Ames Brooks, Henry W. Brower, J. M. Charles, Arthur M. Collens, Robert H. Cox, Thomas M. Day, Jr., C. L. Dana, Jr., Harvey Fisk, Walter L. Righter, Henry T. Eaton, J. Hartley Mellick, Daniel Runkle, Murray Rushmore, R. S. Rowland, W. B. Tyler, Mellick Tweedy, John Valiant and Lewis E. Waring.

DEFENDANT TOLD TO GET TOGETHER WITH ACCUSER

Alleged to have committed a violation of the city health ordinances, William Winklehoss, a garbage collector, was hailed to the city court, this morning, by Health Officer Randolph Chandler. Mr. Chandler gave evidence which was corroborated by his assistant, Miss Harriet O. Mattison, to the effect that Winklehoss neglected to provide proper covering for his collecting cans.

According to the defendant he had all cans, with the exception of those which were empty and which had been recently scoured, covered, and he objected to being hailed before Judge DeMeza. The court reviewed the case and instructed the complainant and defendant to get together and decide what changes were necessary to bring Winklehoss' equipment up to the Health Board's requirements. Sentence was suspended.

STATE ENGINEERS' CLUB HELD ITS ANNUAL DINNER

State Supervisor of Roads Robert A. Meeker, of Belvidere avenue, was one of the guests at a dinner of the Engineers' Club of New Jersey held in Trenton, last night. The affair was of a "get-together" nature and was largely attended by those interested in the State's constructural work.

Unique menu cards, arranged by Marvin A. Riley, were a feature of the occasion. These took the form of specifications, it being agreed that each one of the guests had an "excavation" to fill with the choicest of body building materials. The products to be used were provided during the courses and were of the highest and most approved calibre, according to the diners.

SIX ACTS AT PROCTOR'S.

The bill at Proctor's Theatre today contains an extra attraction in the Crawford-Walker Company, three young women presenting a high class singing and dancing number. The program for the last half of the week comprises six acts in all, making the best show for the money that Plainfield has ever had. Another added attraction today is the opening episode of the latest serial film, "The Exploits of Elaine."

COMPLAINT DISMISSED.

Charged with having committed a serious offense, John Koshen, of West Third street, was arraigned in the city court, this morning. Owing to a technicality, the complaint was dismissed by Judge DeMeza. The defendant was represented by J. Henry Crane. The prisoner was arrested in Westfield by Sergeant Maurice Higgins following an investigation of the charges.

VISITED POLICE COURT.

Mayor Leighton Calkins attended the session of the city court in police headquarters this morning. Mayor Calkins was last year a member of the councilmanic police committee and has taken an active interest in the routine of this department.

FIGHT INTENSE IN LOWER ALSACE

Frequent Bayonet Encounters With Heavy Losses for Both Sides.

ROUMANIA GETS READY

Said to be Procuring $10,000,000 Worth of War Munitions in U. S.—Germans Say French Losses Have Been 1,000,000 Killed and Wounded

Geneva (via Paris), Jan. 8—Fighting in lower Alsace is daily growing in intensity around Steinbach, Cernay and Thann. Villages, houses and trenches are taken and retaken at the bayonet point, and the casualties on both sides have been extremely heavy.

About 250,000 in all are engaged, and both sides are using heavy guns. The Germans are continuously hurrying reinforcements from the Rhine forts.

General Pau, it is stated, commands the French forces, which have made progress despite fierce German resistance.

French aviators from Belfort are assisting the artillery, the booming of which is heard day and night in the neighborhood of the frontier.

Amsterdam, Jan. 8.—The German estimate of the losses by the French killed, wounded and prisoners up to December 20 is given as 1,000,000 in a despatch from Brussels to the Berlin Kreuz Zeitung. Twenty thousand of these were officers, says the report.

Washington, Jan. 8.—A commission composed of delegates of the Roumanian government is now in the United States. This commission is charged with the purchase of arms and ammunition, cotton and sanitary supplies amounting to at least $10,000,000.

Paris, Jan. 8.—The French war office statement this afternoon says:

"The enemy's artillery showed during the day of January 7 great activity at Otyuwlz and in the region of Arras. The French artillery responded sharply and effectively. Our infantry realized some progress near Lombaertzyde, where we captured 500 yards in front of our trenches, and a mill occupied by the enemy."

Fighting has been resumed on the Servian front, according to an official communication issued at Nish, Servia. Fighting in which the Servians were victors occurred near Belgrade. The communication follows:

"Strong forces of the enemy occupied the small island of Ada Tziglia, near Belgrade, on January 3. Small detachments of our troops surprised and routed the Austrians during the night of January 4, capturing forty-five soldiers, a sergeant-major and two sergeants. Our loss was insignificant."

A Madrid "L'Information" dispatch states the German auxiliary cruiser Otavi has been interned at Las Palmas, Canary Islands.

London, Jan. 8.—A "Post" Paris dispatch says: "It is learned from a private source, but one worthy of credence, arrangements whereby the interests of Roumania in Berlin and Vienna will be attended to by the United States diplomatic service have been definitely made. This can mean but one thing.

"The opinion of the Roumanian legation is they would prefer to wait until the Russian operations through Bukowina have developed further across the Carpathians. Roumania is a small country, though she is ready to place half a million troops in the fighting line immediately, and she is not wealthy enough to face unmoved the prospect of a long war.

"Every month that has been passing has been reducing the possible continuation of hostilities, so it is not any change in the political feeling of the country, but cold, practical fact that have kept Roumania aloof."

Military men are taking great interest in the Russian invasion of Hungary through the Uzsok pass in the Carpathians and their rapid advance on Transylvania throukh Bukowina simultaneously with their movement toward Cracow. The combined operations are the most gigantic undertaken in the war.

In the meantime the Russians are held by the Austro-Germans in western Galicia, and Rield Marshal von Hindenburg, the German commander in northern Poland, can move but slowly because of the mud in his offensive operations against Warsaw.

A Petrograd dispatch says that aviators have observed German artillery at the frontier railway stations which cannot be moved on account of the softness of the roads.

An "Express" dispatch says:

"The Germans are continuing their attack to the southeast of Ypres,

APPOLLO QUARTET GAVE AN EXCELLENT PROGRAM

Presented in connection with the free public entertainment course being conducted under the auspices of the local Board of Education, the musical program by the Appollo Quartet in the Plainfield High School Auditorium last night, was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. Owing to the increased interest manifested in these affairs the educational authorities have deemed it advisable to use the spacious High School Auditorium in preference to the one formerly used at the Washington School and the innovation proved an entire success.

An excellent program was given by the metropolitan entertainers and the applause accorded the musicians was evidence in itself of the manner in which the evening was enjoyed.

M. A. EISMAN GUEST OF HONOR AT BANQUET

Moris A. Eiseman, of New Market, was the guest of honor at a banquet tendered by eighteen of his friends in Hotel Nelson, last night, the affair being a thoroughly enjoyable one. Mr. Eiseman is a member of the California Wine Association, of New York, and is well known throughout Piscataway township.

During the course of the evening, a number of informal speeches were made by William McHarg, special agent of the New York Telephone Company; George Viehman, former Mayor of New Brunswick; William P. Deering, borough clerk of Dunellen; Charles S. Day and F. Percy Vail, of New Market. At the conclusion of the affair, Charles E. Kelley presented the guest of honor wth a gold mounted Masonic emblem.

The elaborate menu and the extensive decorations of ferns and flowers were planned and prepared by Rudolph Kampf. Before the departure, each of the guests were presented with souvenirs, each being appropriate to the calling or the vocation of the recipient.

F. T. WOODHULL AND ARCHIBALD COX NAMED

The Plainfield Board of Education has named Floyd T. Woodhull and Archibald Cox as the Board's representatives on the Board of School Estimate, which is also composed of two members of the Common Council and Mayor Leighton Calkins.

It is the duty of the Board to fix and determine the amount of money needed for the maintenance of the public schools of the city and after the budget is made up it is submitted to the Council for approval.

REV. DR. MARTIN'S THEME.

Rev. Dr. Herman Martin, pastor of Temple Shalem, will preach tonight on the subject, "The Bush Is Burning, or Israel Still a Living Force." There will be special music, including a solo by Miss Edna Cohen. She will be accompanied on the organ by Miss Rae Prager. There will also be music by a professional choir.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Jackson Smith & Jackson, described in their billing as being a trio that entertain in more ways than one, made an instantaneous hit when they at Proctor's Theatre yesterday afternoon for the first time. The description fits them to a T, as they not only offer excellent comedy and character impersonations, but sing and dance as well. Their harmony is the best that has been heard at Proctor's in many weeks and brought the act to a close amid a whirlwind of applause. The other acts on the bill for the last half of the week are in keeping with the feature, all four of them receiving the approval of the audiences. They consisted of Crawford, Johnson & Company, novelty musicians; McGowan & Gordon, in a distinctly different skit which included vocal and instrumental music; Nellie Kingsberg & Company, in a comedy sketch, and Mastro, a juggling contortionist, who performs amazing feats of acrobatic and juggling dexterity intermingled with splashes of comedy. The first episode of "The Exploits of Elaine" will be shown at the theatre this afternoon and tonight, and the next big feature picture in the latest series secured by Messrs. Proctor & Sanderson will be the dramatic sensation, "The Pit," with Wilton Lackaye in the leading role. It will be presented next Monday and Tuesday.

POLISH CATHOLICS IN SCHISM.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 8—Rev. Valentyn Cichy, formerly a teacher in the Polish Seminary in Detroit, will be ordained this month a bishop of the Polish National Independent Catholic church. Some 18 months ago, Father Cichy and Bishop Schrembs had a dispute which ended in the removal of the Polish priest. The latter has been writing for a Polish newspaper, and the breach between him and his superiors was never healed. Early this year a schismatic parish was formed in Toledo, and Father Cichy was placed in charge. He will be one of the five bishops of the new hierarchy of the Independent church, which has the services and doctrines of the Roman church, but yields no allegiance to the Pope.

ITALIAN QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

Rome, Jan. 8.—The birthday of Queen Helena of Italy was quietly celebrated in the royal family today, and despite the war excitement that extends all over the country, the anniversary of their beloved queen was not passed unobserved by her people. The unassuming, quiet, domestic ways of Queen Helena have endeared her to the masses. She recently received congratulations on the birth of her fourth daughter. A tinge of sadness marked the observances of today, for the Queen is reported to be suffering from an incurable malady, and King Victor Emmanuel is said to be deeply affected. The birthday of Queen Helena was usually celebrated by a picnic in the woods, but this year, all the members of the royal family remained at the royal castle.

LIQUOR LAW ENFORCEMENT.

Evidence of the trouble to which the authorities are put in cities which are supposed to be "dry" in order to enforce the liquor law is to be found in the case of Asbury Park. Always a no-license city, the police have continually been compelled to bend all their energies, both winter and summer, to arresting the little fellows who sell bad rum in the poorer sections of the city, because that is where the most harm has been done. They have given up trying to enforce the law in the big hotels because they have neither the men or the money to secure evidence to convict the wealthy malefactors. Last week eighteen persons were indicted at one term of court for illegal sale.

Under a license system, such as we have in Plainfield for instance, where there are enough places to supply all the demand for strong drink, the existence of so many illicit places would be both impossible and unnecessary. The city, instead of being put to great expense to enforce the law in an indifferent sort of a way would derive a large sum from license money to help support the government, and the police expense would not be increased in the slightest. Certainly the only way to properly handle the liquor traffic is to have high license and make the liquor dealers obey the law.

They have re-elected as director of the Board of Freeholders in Ocean county for the seventh or eighth time a man who some years ago was convicted of malfeasance in the same office, and who candidly admitted that he had charged the county for thirty-three days in one month. Is there a better argument needed in favor of having small boards of freeholders made mandatory by legislation? Such a man probably could not get a small fraction of the vote of the people of the whole county, but can be re-elected for local reasons in a small community.

Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed is the contributing editor for tomorrow's Daily Press. He has some extremely interesting things to say about the tax rate, and shows by figures how it has advanced systematically during the last eight years. His article is one of the most comprehensive that it has been our pleasure to print regarding the tax situation in Plainfield, and the proportionate increase from year to year is shown. The article is one which will draw attention from every taxpayer in Plainfield.

The need of a street corner fire tapper at Second street and Park avenue was again shown yesterday morning, when the department was called out to a fire on Front street. It was only by the most skillful driving on the part of the chauffeur of the automobile apparatus that several people narrowly avoided being hit. The traffic post should never have been placed at that corner, and now that the fire whistle has been discontinued some warning signal should be immediately set up.

That new fire engine has been "on the way" so many times in the last two months that it seems to us that it should be almost here by this time. Chief Doane is unable to explain why the makers have not done as was expected, and all the satisfaction he can get is that it will be shipped at a future date. It might be a good plan hereafter to demand a forfeit when the city contracts for delivery of articles and they do not materialize on time.

A Camden judge has had a list of all discharged convicts prepared and sent to the liquor dealers of the county with instructions that they are not to sell intoxicants to anyone on the list. Aside from the brewers and saloon men the action of the official will meet with the approval of citizens generally, and might well be tried in other counties.

In the awarding of the bids for the new Evergreen Avenue School, it is pleasing to learn that a local contractor got part of the work. It is to be hoped that the contract will be undertaken at once, and that some of the men now unemployed in this city will be put to work

Here it is a whole week since the first of the New Year, and not a person has been around with one of those old-fashioned almanacs, decorated with a picture of a fellow who looks as if the physicians have been using his stomach for demonstration purposes in a medical school.

They are planning a third campaign to bring about commission government in New Brunswick. Keeping everlastingly at it brings success, and the Middlesex county seat people will eventually win if they are persistent.

Billy Sunday made a remark in Philadelphia the other day about being "seven weeks from hell." The Paterson Call hopes that he had no reference to his future engagement in that city.

There's a story that the wind on Wednesday night and early Thursday morning blew a baby out of bed in Watchung. While we doubt it, it certainly was "some" gale.

With eight investigations in progress of the accident in the subway in New York on Wednesday, it is safe to predict that the reason for it will be found.

Certainly we had an early enough winter this time. Can it be that yesterday was the advance agent of an early spring?

WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICES TO CLOSE THIS EVENING

The week of prayer which has been observed in the churches throughout the city will be brought to a close with the services this evening. The meetings thus far have been well attended.

The union service this evening will be held at the First Methodist church, with Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of the Trinity Reformed church, as the preacher, who is to preach on the subject, "A Spiritual Church." The service at the Monroe Avenue Methodist church will be in charge of the officers and teachers of the Sunday-school. John Leal, principal of Leal's School, will speak at the last service of the week at Hope chapel, while the week at Warren chapel will close with Joseph W. Gavett as the leader. The services at the Park Avenue Baptist church will be in charge of Rev. J. Madison Hare, of Scotch Plains.

INSPIRING ADDRESS AT WEEK OF PRAYER SERVICE

There was a large attendance at the week of prayer service at the Park Avenue Baptist church, last evening, and the meeting was especially helpful and inspiring. The speaker, Rev. E. C. Conover, of the Temple Baptist church, selected as his text Phil. 2-5: "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus," and with marked power and tenderness urged his hearers to allow the will of God to dominate their lives, which is the true secret of every successful life.

The meeting was filled with the Holy Spirit, and the closing part of the service, led by the pastor, Rev. Birney S. Hudson, was especially impressive. This evening the speaker will be Rev. S. Madison Hare, of Scotch Plains.

MISS MARCELLUS GUEST OF HONOR AT RECEPTION

Miss Elveta S. Marcellus, of East Third street, was given a surprise party by members of the Nonpareil Club in their headquarters on St. Mary's avenue, last night, the event being well attended and highly enjoyable. The merry-makers met at the home of William Mayse and proceeded in a body to the clubhouse, where they met Miss Marcellus.

During the evening a collation was served and the guest of honor was presented with a tennis racquet by Dr. Wormley on behalf of the Plainfield Tennis Club. Those who arranged the affair included Charles Mann, William Mayse, Jack Hegeman, Edward Yetman, J. D. Smith and John R. Gates. Dancing was the principal feature in the evening's entertainment.

PERSONAL.

Miss Marion Williams, of Park avenue, has gone to Palmer, Mass., to remain with relatives for several weeks.

Edward Schroppe, of Spooner avenue, who has been seriously ill for several months, shows no signs of improvement.

John Dent, steward at the Elks' Club, is confined to his home on East Third street by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert T. Rockland, of West Seventh street, have gone to Grand Rapids, Mich, for a visit with relatives.

Thomas Kilbride, of West Fourth street, who recently returned from Hartford, Conn., where he had been employed, because of an injury to his hand, is recovering slowly and may possibly not secure the full use of the member. The injury was sustained when the hand became caught in a machine.

Mrs. Charles G. Ross, of East Seventh street, is entertaining Mrs. William Blackmore and daughter, Garnet, of Brooklyn, for a few days.

Mrs. Benjamin Fritts, of Camden, has been the guest of Patrolman and Mrs. John Fritts, of West Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hoff, of East Sixth street, have been entertaining friends from Califon.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Creiger, of Stelle avenue, have left town to spend the remainder of the winter at Old Point Comfort, Va.

Mrs. Edward Gerholdt, of Newark, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. William Jennings, of Steiner place.

Mrs. E. C. Searing, of Park avenue, who has been seriously ill for the past month with pluro-pneumonia, is now convalescing and able to be about the house.

Mrs. Francis Levy, of Washington, is visiting her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rothstein, of 90 Grove street.

Mrs. Henry Johnson, of Washington avenue, who underwent an operation for an abscess on her ear last Monday, is improving at her home

James McCrea, of this city, has returned to Tuskegee Institute, at Tuskegee, Ala., where he is a student.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

With the opening of the new term next month a class in first aid to the injured will be started. Local physicians will give the demonstrations and there will be two classes every week. One will be on Wednesday afternoon and the other Thursday nights.

Members may join the class in basketry at any time. Several lessons have already been given, but more members will be taken.

Several exhibitions of the work of the association will be held during this month and February, but no definite dates have been set for them.

The High School pool has been secured for every Monday night and a swimming class for members will be started Monday, January 18. Miss Elizabeth Wetherell will be the instructor and all who wish to enter this class should enter at the association immediately, as there will be a limited number in the class.

ANOTHER SHORT CIRCUIT IN SUBWAY THIS MORNING

New York, Jan. 8.—The fourth short circuit within forty-eight hours today tied up the subway. The accident occurred at Fourteenth street on the downtown local track. Traffic on this track was suspended for more than ten minutes.

The accident occurred at 9:30 a. m., and before the local service was resumed crowds jammed all stations between Fourteenth street and Grand Central.

At the Interborough offices it was said the latest short circuit was caused by the dropping of a shoe beam across the third rail. This caused a short circuit which was of sufficient power to throw the automatic circuit breakers at power sub-station 12, which in turn cut off all motive power from the local tracks between Grand Central and Fourteenth streets.

Considerable smoke arose from the car on which the short circuit occurred, but subway employes said there was no fire. All passengers were quickly gotten out of the train.

Two blow-outs in the subway last night, following the fatal accident at Fifty-third street, and the admission by General Manager Frank E. Hedley that there are ten points in the subway where Wednesday's short circuit might be repeated with even more serious results, today spurred on official investigations.

VISITED AUTO SHOW.

A number of local automobile owners have attended the Automobile Show now being held in Grand Central Palace, New York city. Several are planning to make the trip tonight or tomorrow, when the event comes to a close.

where their heavy artillery has been steadily bombarding the Allies' trenches.

"There is a steady rainfall in most Flanders, and the floors are increasing. In the Dixmude area the Germans' infantry reinforcements in some places are advancing ankle deep in mud.

"The troops have been forced to sleep in the open for the last few days awaiting orders for the next counter attacks, and they are suffering severaly in health."

Vienna (via London), Jan. 8.—An official statement on the progress of the war was given out in Vienna today. It follows:

"In the Carpathian forest lands and in the southern part of the crownland of Bukowina regard for the safety of our advance troops obliged us to fall back to the mountain passes before an enemy numerically superior to ourselves.

"On the Hungarian-Galician front everything is quiet; in the higher districts there is some frost and snow.

"On the Dunajec River and in Russian Poland there have here and there been some artillery exchanges."

Rome, Jan. 8.—Cardinal Pietro Gaspart, papal secretary of State, and Prince Von Buelow, head of the German Embassy here, held a conference this morning, which lasted for three-quarters of an hour. It is understood the reported arrest or detainment of Cardinal Mercier, archbishop of Malines, was the subject of their discussion.

BOROUGH P.-T. A. MEETING.

The Parent-Teacher Association, of North Plainfield, will hold a meeting in the Somerset School next Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

There is no excuse for your not knowing whether you get good milk or not.

The Board of Health makes regular reports on the seventeen kinds sold in Plainfield.

These reports show Wood Brook milk to be the purest and most wholesome.

Parents, the use of Wood Brook milk is health insurance.

POSITION NOT FILLED.

Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst, of the North Plainfield schools, has not yet selected a successor for Miss Bertha Spencer, the domestic science teacher, who resigned her position recently. Mr. Aungst has received several applications and hopes to fill the position by the end of this month to relieve Miss Spencer.

FRIENDS TO ENTERTAIN.

The Young Friends' Association will entertain the Quakerism class of New York, at the meeting-house, at its regular meeting this evening. There will be a discussion, refreshments and a social hour.

NOTES FROM LABOR FIELD

Sydney, Australia, will soon have a 4-page daily labor newspaper. Publication will begin in February.

Chicago unionists ask for the abolition of the city's efficiency board which they charge is being used against them.

Thirty-four per cent. of Kansas shop girls are getting less than $6 per week, according to the State inspector.

Elbert H. Gary is right on the job in New York investigating unemployment and its causes.

Philadelphia unions will march next Thursday night, to show their support for rapid transit for the city.

The United Mine Workers are standing by the Ohio strikers, and some $225,000 a month is being used for benefits.

"Every man is dishonest who lives upon the unpaid labor of others, no matter if he occupies a throne."—Ingersoll.

The new year breaks with a goodly outlook for improvement of labor conditions; but the early days are filled with unemployment.

1,200 Atlanta cotton workers are sheltered in tents, and their strike is being backed up. They are fighting the holding up of a part of their wages.

The Washington State Minimum Wage Commission has set $10 as the minimum wage for women, to become effective February 20 in that State.

Racine, Wis., unionists have protested the rate of wages paid laborers on the sewers. 17½ cents an hour is being paid.

Owners of newspapers in New Orleans have gotten together to fight for an open shop. Millionaires setting type made an attractive story.

At a murder trial at Canon City, Col., witnesses denied the plot charged to the mine workers' officials of inspiring an attack on the Chandler mine.

Sixteen thousand families are affected by the order of the Ohio mining companies to strikers to vacate their homes.

A garment workers strike is a possibility in New York, the employers refusing to accede to conditions that have worked out well in Chicago.

Indiana workers are opening a long chain of co-operative stores to reduce the cost of living and secure clean goods.

An aftermath of the lessons from the Lawrence strike comes in the admission that the Massachusetts State bureau sent strike breakers into Lawrence.

Billy Sunday's religious campaign in Philadelphia starts off by offending union labor. The big tabernacle erected for the revival was put up by unfair contractors.

"When Carnegie wept as he talked of the heroes of the war in Europe, it is not recorded that he did any weeping over the horrors of the Homestead riots years ago."—Louisville Post.

Dr. Eliot, of Harvard, who is getting into religious and war disputes, has extricated himself partially from his union troubles. The educator who once called a scab a hero declares, "I do not advocate the ceasing of unions."

ARMOUR-CONDON WEDDING.

New York, Jan. 8—Philip D. Armour, grandson of the late Chicago millionaire of the same name, was married here today to Miss Gwendolin Condon. Lester Armour, of Chicago, was best man, and the matron of honor was Mrs. Edmund S. Twining. Rev. Herbert Shipman and Rev. Dr. William G. Thayer officaited.

MESSAGES FROM VIRGINIA.

E. F. Lowe's wireless apparatus which has been out of commission at his home on Fairview avenue due to a bad storm, is again working, and today he picked up messages from Arlington, Va., where the Government sends out the official time at 10 o'clock each day. The apparatus is a powerful one and is capable of receiving messages at long distances.

TO FORM A UNION.

THREE MATCHES TO BE PLAYED BY LOCAL ELKS

Three teams are scheduled to play tonight in the Elks' House Tourney. The Townley-Waldorf and C. Woolston teams will get into action. This will be the first match for the Townley aggregation, while Woolston and Waldorf have each won and lost one.

By taking two games the Townley team could get among the leaders, as there is now a triple tie for first place.

ARMY TEAM TROUNCED P. H. S. MIDSHIPMEN

The Army basketball team of the Plainfield High School Boys' League, defeated the Navy team, yesterday afternoon, by the overwhelming score of 43 to 7. O'Donnell and Venable starred for the Army, each caging seven field goals. The teams lined up as follows:

Army		Navy
O'Donnell	forwards	Hutchcroft
Venable	forwards	Snyder
Blimm	center	Jackson
Butler	guards	Henwood
Newell	guards	Peterson
Goldberg	guards	Dobson, Paterson

Score by periods:

Army	23	20—43
Navy	3	4— 7

Referee, Crone; scorer, Kline.

FITZ MADE GOOD.

Bob Fitzsimmons, the greatest fighter in all the history of the ring, had his own theory of a knockout.

"It doesn't hurt anybody to be knocked out," Fitz used to say. "I like to be gentle and considerate and knock 'em out in a hurry. I put it over as soon as I can instead of beating them down gradually. The gentlest way is to land a clean one-punch knockout. It doesn't even leave a headache."

Fitzsimmons once met a man who took a number of hard knockdowns and still struggled to his feet, at last standing in a nearly helpless condition and refusing to give up. This was Jack Dempsey, who was losing the world's middleweight championship. Fitzsimmons appealed to the referee to stop it, and when that official declined, because it was a championship fight, turned to Dempsey and said: "Jack, you've done all a game man can do. I dont' want to hit you again. Give it up."

"You'll have to knock me out," muttered Dempsey.

And Fitz did.

Paterson bowlers have slipped back into first place in the Elks' League, having passed the New Brunswicks by winning three games in a row on their own alleys last night, from the representatives of the Rutherford Elks. The Silk City pin knights are now one game each way ahead of the New Brunswick five. It was decidedly consistent pinning that the Patersons did, the successive totals being 943, 937 and 953. The only game in which the Rutherfords put up a real argument was the second, in which, with 916, they were only beaten by eleven pins. Taylor did some fine pinning for the Patersonians, having counts of 215 and 203. Roth rolled 233 and Ernest was there for 215 and 203, having an average of 203-2. Widmayer led the visitors with 208 and Oakes and Clark were both there for 203.

PRACTISING BREAST STROKE BEFORE ENTERING TANK

SCHOOLGIRLS FIRST LESSON IN SWIMMING

Girls of the Plainfield High School and many of the grammar grades are being given expert instruction in the art of water navigation and this course has assumed a prominent place in the routine of work in the local institution following the installation of a modern tank. Heretofore the feminine water enthusiast has had no advantage of this nature and the winter has been confined to boys alone, who indulged in dips in the Y. M. C. A. pool. The tank at the High School is larger and better than any in this section of the State and affords excellent facilities for instruction.

Miss Ruth Ralston, an expert feminine swimmer, has had charge of the instruction work at the High School for girls and to date has accomplished some notable work. She leads large classes of girls three times a week and more than a hundred have already been taught the fundamentals of the art. It is proposed to teach each girl to swim during her course in the local institution and the idea has been met with enthusiastic response both from the pupils and parents. The world is rapidly beginning to recognize the value of a knowledge of water navigation and in a few years a large percentage of the youth of the nation will probably have become expert in this feature. At the present time a comparatively small number of girls can propel their bodies in the water owing to the fact that instruction such as is contemplated at the High School has not been forthcoming.

Certain hours are set aside each day for the use of the pool and individual care is taken of each pupil. The boys also have an opportunity to use the tank. It has been found, however, that a large majority of the boys can keep themselves afloat in the tank and many are crack swimmers. Systematic supervision is being maintained over the pool and a competent instructor is always in charge.

RATTLING THE SKELETON FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team hung up a record in Debele Hall when they held the girls from Bernardsville to one point while they tallied 83. This guarding feat has never been equaled by a borough team. Those who played on the North Plainfield team were the Misses Bessie Conroy and Nettie Steiner, forwards; Helen Hummel and Henrietta Winn, centers, and Helen George and Clara Smith, guards.

The North Plainfield boys' team walloped the Bernardsville quintet in the second game of the double header at Debele Hall. The score was 63 to 13. This was the first meeting of these two teams on a local court. "Rus" Conroy and "Hub" Stine played forwards; Carlton Smith, center; Preston Dunning, Fred Becker and "Bill" Taylor, guards.

The Red Men were leading the Fraternal Bowling Tourney with 11 victories and 1 defeat. Raritan was second.

The Orange Y. M. C. A. champion basketball team went down to defeat before the local association on the Plainfield court, the score being 37 to 29. Aalholm was the star of the game, caging 8 field goals and 3 foul goals, while Cahoone, playing center, scored 5 field goals, Linke 3 and Gavett 1. Foster played guard with Gavett.

GAME WITH MORRISTOWN.

Manager Fred Dickerson, of the Leal School basketball team, has arranged a game with the Morristown School team for Saturday, January 16, at Morristown. These teams have played two games for several years. Manager Dickerson now has his schedule completed. The private school will lay off until that date.

P. H. S. AT PASSAIC.

The Plainfield High School basketball team will journey to Passaic tomorrow afternoon and meet the High School team of that place. The Passaic five is considered one of the fastest in the State and the local team will have to do some fast traveling to keep in their opponents' class.

NORTH PLAINFIELD-WESTFIELD ENGAGEMENT IN SAENGERBUND

The North Plainfield and Westfield High School basketball teams will meet in Saengerbund Hall tonight, in the first game of the anual series between those two institutions. The boroughites are now playing in tip-top form and on their home court should have no trouble with their opponents.

The North Plainfield team took both of the games of last year's series and the Mt. Ararat combination is looking for revenge. Westfield defeated Roselle Wednesday, while North Plainfield was taking New Brunswick into camp. The game will start at 8:15 and there will be a preliminary.

The High School teams will probably lineup as follows:

North Plainfield.		Westfield.
Conroy	forwards	Ewing
Townley	forwards	Day
VanMater	centre	Traynor
Abrams	guard	Sisserson
Hebert	guard	Davies or Lambert

BASEBALL CALAMITIES.

Baseball caused thirty-five deaths and 18 injuries during the 1914 season, according to a writer who claims to have kept track of the season's record. Pitched balls killed twenty of the dead players, five were hit with bats, four died of over-exerton, one died from injuries sustained in sliding to a base and one was killed in a fight. In the amateur ranks 314 players sustained broken legs. Sixty-nine American League players were hurt, against 116 in all minor leagues, and fifty-six in the National League. Only eight college players were injured.

Y. M. C. A.-P. H. S. MEET.

The dual athletic meet between the Y. M. C. A. and Plainfield High School teams will be reun off tonight in the High School gymnasium. Both institutions have a good number of entries and the meet should be close and exciting.

CRANFORD GIRLS HERE.

The Plainfield High School girls' sextet will entertain the team from Cranford tomorrow afternoon in the local gym. A good game is expected and all of the Plainfield regulars will be in the game.

UNITED STATES GOLF ASSOCIATION MEETS

U. S. GOLF ASSOCIATION MEETS.

New York, Jan. 8—Selection of golf courses for this year's championships, the defining of the amateur in golf, and other important matters affecting this sport are to be settled by the United States Golf Association, which met today at the Waldorf-Astoria. From indications aparent today, the differences between the Western and Eastern branches have been adjusted. It is expected that Frank L. Woodward, of Denver, will be elected president of the association. A proposal to amend the by-laws on amateur standings will be considered before the golfers adjourn. The framers of the new rule seek more strict regulation of players, and would define the conditions under which foreign players will be accepted as amateurs. A mail vote was taken for the 1915 championships, and it is expected three courses will be considered, possibly more. Prominent Western golfers complained last year that they were deprived of a vote on the club which they desired to obtain the event. It has been taken as a matter of course in amateur circles that the Country Club, of Detroit, will get the amateur event.

INSIDE THE TIRE

as well as outside quality is rigidly enforced in the making of our tires. Autoists of experience want tires of the best and their other auto supplies must be of the same character. The wisest come here, and for many excellent reasons. Ask us about them.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

We suspect that certain individuals have been prompted to visit the attic for the purpose of hauling out some baseball woolens as the result of the little spasm of mild weather during the past two days. These optimistic bugs might just as well take it easy for a while for there's plenty of skating coming to us yet.

Mt. Ararat schoolboys appear on Saengerbund's court tonight for a tussel with the N. P. H. S. squad. Let's hope the pugilistic portion of the program will be omitted tonight.

Plainfield High School failed to break precedent during the trip to Rahway Wednesday afternoon and, as usual, came back with the stingy end of the tally-card. If those Rahway athletes can't beat a team on a sport basis they won't let the rival faction go home without a physical spanking, so Queen City aggregations might just as well make these trips resigned to taste the sting of a walloping one way or another.

Lovers of track athletics should take a peek at Jack Fritts' youngsters in the P. H. S. gym tonight. The schoolboys' "finest" will pit their versatality against the Y. M. C. A. representatives.

The disbanding of the New York State Basketball League would indicate that the court pastime is suffering its bumps on other courts besides those in the Queen City. Attendance figures at the Elizabeth armory, heretofore one of the best drawing places, have also slumped to a faithful dozen. There's something missing somewhere.

That big score hung up by the N. P. H. S. girls at Rahway the other day is exciting a lot of comment hereabouts, but when placed alongside of the tally recorded by the borough lassies at the expense of Bernardsville five years ago today it is crowded out of the limelight. Today happens to be the fifth anniversary of an 83 to 1 verdict handed by N. P. H. S. to the Bernardsville girls. On the same date the boro boys defeated Bernardsville's pride to the tune of 63 to 13. Now there's nothing left to talk about.

Platt Adams has been credited with about three million different birth places since he came into the A. A. U. limelight. The former Plainfield Y. M. C. A. baseball star has gained prominence in every little hamlet where he has had occasion to lay his hat during his career as an athlete.

For the first time in several months the Y. M. C. A. gym will be without a week-end attraction this week. The Plainfielders are due to appear on the Washington Heights court tomorrow night.

PARROTS TAKE THIRD PLACE FROM HAWKS

Win Two in Columbus Club Tourney and Put Opponents in Fourth Place.

Standing of the Teams.

Crows	3	9	.250	953

The Parrots, of the Columbus Club Five-man Bowling Tourney, ousted the Hawks out of third place, last night, by taking the odd game and now have full possession of that place, the Sparrows and Robins being between them and first place. Before last night's match the Parrots and Hawks were tied and the latter were forced to go down to fourth place, having six victories and as many defeats.

The Parrots were stronger than their opponents in both of the first two games and lost out on the third roll when the Hawk crowd started rooting. The last game was the closest, the Parrots losing a clean sweep by nine pins. Duffy bowled 208 in the first game, while the 116 and 117 made by F. McInerney, Jr., and Hurley, respectively, in the initial game pulled down the totals of the Hawks considerably. The scores were 799 to 704. Strappe's 200 in the second game helped materially in annexing the second game which was won by 29 pins. Frank McInerney, Jr.'s 167 and Gutterman's 178 were the best scores made by the Hawks in the final roll and they helped greatly to win the game. Strappe made a 190 in the last, but could not equal the Hawks' score. The scores of the games follow.

According to an interesting compilation of statistics kept by David A. Mills, of Summit avenue, February, March, April, May, June, July and August are the best months for gathering eggs from a flock of White Leghorns, White Rocks, Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds. In March the total "receipts" from the barnyard secretary showed that 100 hens were responsible for 1,992 shelled food products. In the twelve months from January to December the 100 hens laid a grand total of 13,292 eggs. Had they reported each day during the 365 a total of 36,500 eggs would have been recorded. Thus, Mr. Mills' feathered beauties might be credited with a mark of about 400 per cent. out of a possible 1,000 per cent.

October was the poorest laying month, 213 being turned out in that month and November was only a little better with the total amounting to four more. The record follows: January, 884; February, 1,293; March, 1,992; April, 1,887; May, 1,960;

NOVEL BOWLING FEATURE FOR ELK CLUB MEMBERS

Novelty bowling will be the feature on the Elks' Club drives tomorrow night, when the members will indulge in a "blind competition," a unique contest in which a large number have announced their intention of competing. Two prizes will be offered for the high score winner and runner-up.

The event is of an individual nature, a curtain being stretched across the alleys hiding the pins, and the bowler shooting in space. Considerable amusement will probably be provided by splits and hard spares, it being difficult to judge the position of the maples from sound alone.

N. P. H. S. GIRLS VS. P. A.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team will play tomorrow afternoon against the girls team of the Perth Amboy High School, in Saengerbund Hall. The borough girls have succeeded in defeating the Perth Amboy sextet in the past two years and they have confidence of doing the same thing tomorrow. The Somerset Field Club and Leal Juniors will play a preliminary to the game, which will start at 3:30.

WILL WITNESS GAME.

A delegation of local basketball fans will witness a game between the teams of Howard University and Hampton Institute at the Casino, 155th street and Eighth avenue, New York, next Friday night. These are colored institutions and the teams are considered among the fastest in the country. Bender, the brother of "Big Chief" Bender, the baseball pitcher, plays on the latter team and is one of the best colored forwards in the game.

LOCAL JUNIOR ELKS TIE NEW BRUNSWICK

By Taking the Odd Game From Elizabeth Leaders, Plainfield Advances.

JUNIOR ELKS' LEAGUE RECORD.

Plainfield	8	7	878
Paterson	7	8	946

Plainfield Junior Elk pinners took a fall out of the Elizabeth leaders, last night, at Elizabeth, when they won the first and last games of the match, which put them in a tie for second place with New Brunswick, each team having won 8 and lost 7. The locals' victory was a big surprise to the home pinners as they have been taking the measure of all their opponents thus far in the league, only one game being in their defeat list until last night. The games that Captain Stout's team won were very close and the Plainfielders had to do some good pinning to come out in the lead. The Elizabeth pinners distinguished themselves in last night's match by totalling 1,009 in the game they won, which is a new high score mark of the league.

Plainfield won the first game with nineteen points to spare, the scores being 854 to 835. Woolston led off with a 190, which was the best score made by either team in the initial roll. Hoyt hit for a 168, while Townley and Causbrook fell way down to 159 and 156 respectively. Waldorf pulled the total of the game up when he made a 181. The best Elizabeth tid was 178, credited to Foote, who rolled second, after Blythe had scored 177. The locals were not in the game at all during the second roll, for although they made exactly the same team score as in the first, the home pinners outclassed them and, with three scores in the 200 class, hung up the high score team record, 1,009. Blythe started off the second game with a 212 and Heller scored 202. Feihl lowered his team score by making a 177, but VanBergen settled matters when he registered a 234, which was high score of the match. Causbrook went the highest for the local team, getting a score of 205.

Seven points separated the scores of the last and deciding game, Plainfield just nosing out their opponents. Townley's 183 was the best score made by Plainfield in this game, while 193 was credited to VanBergen. The scores of this game were 842 to 835.

PARK CLUB BOWLING RESUMED LAST NIGHT

Dr. Clawson Won Three Points in Weekly Five Back Competition.

The weekly handicap five-back tournament at the Park Club was resumed last night after suspension of play for the holidays, and Dr. M. L. Clawson won three points in the first match of the new year. He made a gross score of 128 and aided by a handicap of 40, took first honors with a net mark of 168. J. V. Beekman was a close second to Dr. Clawson, getting two points for the monthly prize, with a net of 167, one point behind the winner. He made a gross of 134 and was handicapped 33.

The third point was awarded to Dr. Hubbard, whose 148, together with the handicap of 16, gave him third best score, 164. A. M. Abbott was placed at scratch and made a 147. Sixteen players took part in the competition.

J. V. Beekman was the winner of the monthly prize for December, having an average of 55 2-3. The scores of last night's play follow:

ANCHOR SIX DROPS PAIR TO ORIENTS

Last Game Annexed by Local Team on Elks' Alleys Last Night.

Anchor lodge bowlers succeeded in annexing the last game of their match with the Orients, of Elizabeth, on the local Elks' alleys, last night. The local team pinned poorly in the first two rolls and were far behind their opponents at the end of each. In the second game the visitors came out in the lead with 95 points to spare.

The scores of the first game were 743 to 684. The highest score of the game was made by Cose, of the local team. Higham was in the first game for Plainfield, but was relieved in the second by Dayton, who made scores of 134 and 127. The scores of the second game were 825 to 730.

Anchor won out in the last game by twenty-nine pins. Osmun and Runyon each hit the pins for 163. This was the first night that Runyon has been with the team and his three scores were 123, 138 and 163. The scores of the last game were 754 to 725.

BOWLING TEAMS BROKE EVEN IN PAIR OF SERIES

The Lutz-Bimble combination of the borough bowling tourney broke even in last night's play, winning three and losing the same number in two series. They took a pair from Lowrie and Howe but could only annex one from the Thorn-Clemons team. Two of the scores of the last match were close, only six points separating the tallies.

High team score was 348, made by the Thorn-Clemons duo, and Howe scored high individual score with a 215.

Coats in the "Two Materials of the Hour"---Special at $15 to $25

In preparing for to-morrow's Occasion we concentrated all our efforts in the getting of coats in the two materials which have been awarded the leadership of the season.

Plush Coats, $15 to $25

One model at $15 has a large collar of skunk-opossum. It is lined throughout with satin. A new model with the wide belt is also $15.

The coats of a better quality of plush are $19.50—these have collars of skunk-opossum.

Broadcloth Coats, $19.50 and $25

Black broadcloth, of course! One style at $19.50 has a quilted lining of black or gray satin, and the large collar is either of skunk opossum or Persian paw. The other model at $19.50 is trimmed with skunk-opossum.

The model illustrated is $25—and it is a gem! As you will note, it is trimmed around the foot with a deep banding of skunk-opossum to match the cuffs and collar.

A Clearaway of 75 Coats at $9.75

As they were $19.50 and more, you can readily appreciate that they are of fine domestic and imported materials.

VILLA IS OUT OF AND BACK IN SATILLO IN 24 HOURS

Washington, Jan. 8—Following close on the heels of a report to the Carranza agency here that Saltillo had been occupied by Carranzistas, an official report to the State Department today, contained the information that Villa troops had attacked the city and driven out the occupying forces.

W. H. WIEGAND.

William H. Wiegand, of 352 Sumner avenue, aged fifty-three years, died this morning of pneumonia after an illness of two weeks. Mr. Wiegand was a carpenter by trade and was employed in New York city. He is survived by his wife; two sons, William, Jr., and Everett, and one daughter, Miss Grace Wiegand. A number of brothers and sisters living in various parts of the country, also survive. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

SHOT A DOG

Patrolman Craig, of the local police force, shot a dog in front of Truell Court on Central avenue shortly after 9 o'clock this morning. The canine had been acting suspiciously.

NEW MEMBERS ELECTED TO LOCAL I. C. S. BODY

Four new members were added to the present roster at the meeting of Abraham Lincoln Chapter, No. 122, I. C. S. Fraternity, at the meeting held in the local headquarters, last night. In the absence of President A. V. Searing, Vice-President Raymond W. Aldrich, presided. Carl I. Hill acted as secretary of the meeting.

The auditing and membership committees made reports which were filed and the banquet committee outlined the progress made in the preparations for the Lincoln dinner. These arrangements will be completed at the adjourned meeting of the chapter to be held January 12.

Those received last night as members are C. W. Huenke, J. Wagner, George W. Schmidt and W. S. Buxton. The question box proved the feature of the evening and many excellent queries were brought to the attention of the members.

William A. Coddington, of Mountain avenue, who has been detained at home with an attack of grip, is improving.

DEATH OF J. M. WESTON, CIVIL WAR VETERAN

The funeral of Joseph M. Weston, aged 74 years, who died at the home of his niece, Mrs. George Oliver, on Somerset street, yesterday morning, will be held at the soldiers' plot in Hillside cemetery at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville, officiating, and the burial will take place in that cemetery.

Mr. Weston was a Civil War veteran and was a resident of Union Village for several years. He served during the Civil War and was a member of Co. A, 84th Regiment, N. Y. Infantry. He was a widower and his only surviving relative is Mrs. Oliver.

ORGANIZE GYM CLASS.

A class of older men, interested in physical culture, has been organized and meets every Monday night in the new Plainfield High School gymnasium. A competent instructor is in charge and the time is spent in calisthenics and recreative indoor games.

PARK CLUB DANCE.

The next informal dance to be held at the Park Club will take place Saturday evening, January 23.

DISTRICT HANDICAP ON P. C. C. PLAYERS

In Accordance with "Metropolitan Idea" to Be Put in Effect.

Following the idea suggested at the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association, by President Darwin P. Kingsley, a plan is being worked out for holding a district-wide "Metropoltian Handicap" sometime next fall. Each club in the Metropolitan district will hold an eighteen-hole handicap for its members, such as was done on the Plainfield Country Club links last Election Day, when the Belgian Relief Fund competition proved a success. If the plan goes through, as it almost surely will, the handicap on the final day of the Metropolitan amateur championship will be discarded, the new and bigger competition taking its place.

The winners—there will be between sixty and seventy of them—will be invited then to play against each other in another handicap on some course to be selected by the association, the leader in this final test to be the winner of the "Metropolitan Handicap" for the year.

It is believed that the inauguration of such a competition will prove a popular one among the clubs which belong to the association and will give club members of all classes a chance to compete.

Since his election less than a month ago, E. Mortimer Barnes, the new secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, has been hard at work preparing the Metropolitan schedule for the coming season and announced yesterday the dates for several tourneys. As usual the latter part of May and the early part of June are the most sought for by the clubs anxious to hold tourneys. Garden City has taken advantage of the change which shifted the Metropolitan amateur from the third week in May to the first in June and has applied for and received May 20, 21 and 22 for its invitation tourney.

Tuxedo, as usual, will hold its tournament on May 27, 28 and 29, and as previously announced the Metropolitan amateur at Apawamis will occupy the last four days of the following week, June 2, 3, 4 and 5. The next week is being left open until the New Jersey State Golf Association selects the dates for its annual championship, but on June 17, 18 and 19, Apawamis will entertain the golfers, the Apawamis Club having decided that one week's respite will be sufficient between the Metropolitan amateur championship and the club's annual invitation tournament.

The Nassau Country Club, which has been holding its tournaments in the fall, has applied for a spring date this year, but none has been assigned yet.

Mr. Barnes also announced yesterday the names of the golfers who will serve on the M. G. A. handicap and tournament committees. They are: Handicap committee, James A. Tyng, Baltusrol, chairman; Charles W. O'Connor, Jr., Essex County; Anson F. Robinson, Ardsley; Archie M. Reid, St. Andrews, and A. H. Pogson, Fox Hills. Tournament committee: George H. Barnes, Apawamis; W. H. Wallace, Jr., Apawamis, and E. Mortimer Barnes, Englewood.

WILL CELEBRATE JACKSON'S VICTORY

Centennial of Battle of New Orleans Observed—Historic Event.

New Orleans, Jan. 8.—In celebration of the events of that memorable Sunday, one hundred years ago, when Andrew Jackson and his crude volunteers from Louisiana, Kentucky and Tennessee defeated the British field marshal, Sir Edward M. Pakenham, and Nelson's favorite naval officers Troubridge and Hardy, leading the flower of the British fighting forces, New Orleans opened today a centennial observance that will last for three days. Not the least important of the features of the celebration is the observance of the hundredth anniversary of peace. For, although the battle was fought after peace had been signed at Ghent, the wireless and cables of today were lacking, and it was weeks before victor and vanquished in the memorable battle on the plains at Chalmette realized that the terrible battle was a mistake.

Public officials, educators, military representatives and naval representatives are leading the celebration. The city is filled with visitors, and the holiday spirit is reflected in the decorations on public and private buildings. Speechmaking and salutes opened the three-day observance this morning.

The lesson of the battle of New Orleans is one that has determined the United States Government's belief in the efficiency of volunteers in wartime. That men can leave the plow and the workshop when invasion is threatened, and defend their country against superior numbers of trained warriors was conclusively proven at New Orleans, as it was earlier demonstrated during the American Revolution. The spirit of Americans became a factor of defense.

The British invaders, 14,450 strong, were commanded by the tried and true leaders of the British service. They combined the first military and naval talents of the time. The men of the line were veterans, trained in warfare, the best that England could produce. Jackson's aides were generals of militia, who, like their men, were planters, and had come on the spur of the occasion to repel the enemy.

At dawn of day the action began and it lasted until 8 o'clock. Marshal Pakenham was killed and Major-General Gibbs died next day from wounds, and the British official returns showed other losses of 2,035 officers and men. They were completely routed, and left 1,000 stands of arms on the field of battle. Of the 6,999 Americans who took part in the battle, only 7 were killed and the wounded were less than a dozen.

The feat of Jackson made him the great American hero of the day, and thirteen years after the battle he was President of the United States.

Mrs. Thomas Connolly, an aged woman of Glen Gardner, is in a precarious condition from a stroke of paralysis received Wednesday. Her son, John S. Connolly, of Emmit, Neb., who has been visiting, was to have returned to his home the day she was stricken.

Communion services will be held in the Spruce Run Lutheran church Sunday morning.

The district president, Oliver Hoffman, of Frenchtown, will install the officers of Camp No. 40, Patriotic Order Sons of America, at Glen Gardner, tonight.

Mrs. Edward Ayers and children, of Dunellen, are spending some time with Mrs. Ayres' father, Barney Gannon, in Glen Gardner.

Mrs. Frances Alpaugh and Margaret and Louise Klingerfus, of Glen Gardner, spent a part of this week in Washington.

HONOR BATTLESHIP WYOMING.

Boston, Jan. 8—Capt. J. H. Glennon, of the Battleship Wyoming, will be presented tonight with the Knox Trophy and Medal, given by the Sons of the Revolution to the ship making the highest score in gunnery during the year. The society holds its annual dinner this evening, and Secretary Daniels has designated Captain Glennon to receive the trophy.

PLAIN COLOR CARPETS

Our stock is unequalled, in variety of weaves and colorings, by any other collection in the country, while our prices are uniformly reasonable.

Of the many desirable weaves shown here, several of the best are controlled by us. These are the English Barodas, Saxines, Angoras, Saxonias and Velvets. There are also excellent values in American Wilton, Axminster, Velvet and Ingrain Carpets. Widths range from 27 inches to 15 feet, according to the weave, the greater widths offering the advantage of eliminating seams entirely.

Here Is the Big Money-Saving Good Furniture Event, Eagerly Looked Forward To

WE APPRECIATE that ever-increasing measure of public confidence in this Live Store, which has helped us to attain a new record in our 1914 business. We never abuse that confidence through "make-believe sales" or "something-for-nothing" offerings. But at the season's end we do make a clean sweep of profits in order to clear our floors to accommodate new patterns which this store is invariably first to show.

THE ITEMS listed below are but illustrations of the unusual offerings reduced for quick clearance. Never before have we had as many broken lots and discontinued patterns to dispose of, which, in conjunction with all goods embodied in our 1914 inventory, presents buying opportunities in furniture to meet every requirement—unexampled in any previous clearance sale.

Improve These Opportunities to Save 10 to 33⅓ Per Cent.

Eagle Shirt Sale, 95c

For $1.50 to $3 Grades

7,200—that's all; sizes 14 to 18; in the Annual Winter Clearaway.

360 are $3 shirts
5600 are $1.50 shirts

From yarn to you, everything about these Eagle shirts is the work of the makers of the shirts; excepting only some imported mille-plait bosoms in the $3 shirts.

They are all perfect, all desirable designs and good colorings; neglige bosoms with stiff cuffs, some with soft French cuffs.

Maker's Guarantee

We made this shirt. Made it as well as we know how, put into it our forty-five years of experience as shirt makers.

We wove the material from selected yarns, dyed with the fastest dyes. We cut it to fit, and stitched it to hold. We washed it thoroughly to prove the color and starched and ironed it carefully by hand.

We did all this in our own modern factories, under our own supervision, with the aid of faithful men and women who have worked with us for many years.

7,200 only, 95c.

In addition—

Also at 95c, 4,800 Shirts

from another maker. About half of them are $2 grades; half are $1.50 grades; 900 of silk and cotton—beauties.

A large number of women were present. After the regular business meeting all enjoyed a social hour and a dainty collation was served by the hostess.

The regular quarterly business meeting of the Watchung Sunday-school Association will be held this evening in Wilson chapel, after the regular prayer meeting.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

TWO-CENT NEWSPAPERS.

One year ago the Trenton newspapers raised their price from 1 cent to 2 cents for the reason that increasing cost of newspaper production required that a proper proportion of the expense should be borne by the reader instead of entirely by the advertiser, as is the necessity with most penny papers. Experience in the past demonstrated that in Trenton penny newspapers could not be successfully conducted. There are other examples of the trend toward two-cent newspapers, the latest being Wilkes-Barre, Pa., San Francisco and Oakland, Cal., where all the papers, except one, were raised to two cents on January 1. The result in Trenton is especially gratifying to the publishers generally, and to the Times particularly, in that the loss in circulation was exceedingly small.

Conditions in New Jersey rather indicate that two-cent newspapers have come to stay. In ten leading cities of the State two-cent newspapers are being successfully conducted, many of them in the north Jersey zone, directly in competition with and under the influence of the metropolitan penny papers. They include the Newark Evening News, Jersey City Journal, Elizabeth Journal, New Brunswick News, New Brunswick Times, Paterson Call, Asbury Park Press, Long Branch Record, Perth Amboy News, Plainfield Courier, Plainfield Press, Trenton Times and Trenton State Gazette.

The increasing cost of production, due partly to the war, with its extra circulation, extra editions, extra cost of news service, etc., is chiefly responsible for the trend toward two-cent papers. Newspaper production in the past has placed these increased costs chiefly upon the advertiser. Experience has demonstrated that the duplicated editions and extras of the penny circulations are of little value to the man who buys advertising space.—Trenton Times.

The North Plainfield Township Committee at its reorganization meeting on New Year's, reported that all bills had been paid and when delinquent taxes were collected they would have a good working capital. Not a dollar of interest has to be paid on money borrowed in anticipation of taxes. This is such an unusual condition for a municipality that it is worthy of especial notice. There are probably very few, if any, townships or boroughs which are not heavily in debt. It seems to be the tendency of the times. Improvements are demanded and public officials yield to this demand to such an extent that debts pile up. Former Assemblyman W. L. Anderson has just been re-elected chairman of the Township Committee, a position which he has held with much credit to himself and with much advantage to the township, for several years. It might be well for other township committees to inquire how North Plainfeild has been able to keep abreast with the times and yet pay as she goes.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

SETTLE AUTHORSHIP OF POEM.

Topeka, Kans., Jan. 8—The Kansas Authors' Club, which holds its annual meeting tonight, will officially settle who wrote the poem "The Call of Kansas." A long dispute has been waged as to whether Miss Esther Clarke, of Chanute, or Mrs. Emma Clark Carr, of Girard, wrote the poem. A committee will report in favor of Miss Clark, and it is expected the report will be adopted.

CHAPTER V.

The Stampede to Squaw Creek.

TWO months after Smoke Bellew and Shorty went after moose for a grubstake they were back in the Elkhorn saloon at Dawson. The hunting was done, the meat hauled in and sold for $2.50 a pound, and between them they possessed $3,000 in gold dust and a good team of dogs. They had played in luck. Despite the fact that the gold rush had driven the game a hundred miles or more into the mountains, they had within half that distance bagged four moose in a narrow canyon.

The mystery of the strayed animals was no greater than the luck of their killers, for within the day four famished Indian families, reporting no game in three days' journey back, camped beside them. Meat was traded for starving dogs, and after a week of feeding Smoke and Shorty harnessed the animals and began freighting the meat to the eager Dawson market.

The problem of the two men now was to turn their gold dust into food. The current price for flour and beans was $1.50 a pound, but the difficulty was to find a seller. Dawson was in the throes of famine. Hundreds of men, with money, but no food, had been compelled to leave the country.

Smoke met Shorty in the warm saloon and found the latter jubilant.

"Life ain't no pumpkins without whisky an' sweetenin'," was Shorty's greeting as he pulled lumps of ice from his thawing mustache and flung them rattling on to the floor. "An' I sure just got eighteen pounds of that same sweetenin'. The geezer only charged $3 a pound for it. What luck did you have?"

"I, too, have not been idle," Smoke answered with pride. "I bought fifty pounds of flour. And there's a man up on Adam creek who says he'll let me have fifty pounds more tomorrow."

"Great! We'll sure live till the rivers opens. Come on an' have a drink. I just got to celebrate them eighteen pounds of sweetenin'."

Several minutes later, as he weighed in on the gold scales for the drinks, he gave a start of recollection.

"I plumb forgot that man I was to meet in the Tivoli. He's got some spoiled bacon he'll sell for a dollar an' a half a pound. We can feed it to the dogs. So long."

Hardly had Shorty left the place when a fur clad man entered through the double storm doors. His face lighted at sight of Smoke, who recognized him as Breck, the man whose boat they had run through the Box canyon and the White Horse rapids.

"I heard you were in town," Breck said hurriedly. "Been looking for you for half an hour. Come outside; I want to talk with you."

As they emerged Smoke drew off one mitten, lighted a match and glanced at the thermometer that hung beside the door. He remittened his naked hand hastily, as if the frost had burned him.

"What did it say?" Breck asked.

"Sixty below. An hour ago it was only 52. Don't tell me it's a stampede."

"It is," Breck whispered back cautiously. "You know Squaw creek empties in on the other side the Yukon, thirty miles up?"

"Nothing doing there," was Smoke's judgment. "It was prospected years ago."

"So were all the other rich creeks. Listen! It's big. Only eight to twenty feet to bedrock. There won't be a claim that doesn't run to half a million. It's a dead secret. Two or three of my close friends let me in on it. I told my wife right away that I was going to find you before I started. Now, so long. My pack's hidden down the bank. In fact, when they told me they made me promise not to pull out until Dawson was asleep. You know what it means if you're seen with a stampeding outfit. Get your partner and follow. You ought to stake fourth or fifth claim from Discovery. Don't forget—Squaw creek. It's the third after you pass Swede creek."

When Smoke entered the little cabin on the hillside back of Dawson he heard a heavy, familiar breathing.

"Aw, go to bed," Shorty mumbled as Smoke shook his shoulder.

"Kick into your clothes," Smoke said. "We've got to stake a couple of claims."

Shorty sat up and started to explode.

"Sah!" Smoke warned. "It's a big strike. Squaw creek. Breck gave me the tip. Shallow bedrock. Gold from the grass roots down. Come on. We'll sling a couple of light packs together and pull out."

With small stampeding packs on their backs they closed the door behind them and started down the hill. Shorty foundered off a turn of the trail into deep snow and raised his voice in blessing of the date of the week and month and year.

"Can't you keep still?" Smoke chided. "You'll have all Dawson awake and after us."

"Huh! See the light in that cabin? An' in that one over there? An' hear that door slam? Oh, sure, Dawson's asleep! Them lights? Just buryin their dead. They ain't stampedin betcher life they ain't!"

By the time they reached the main street a hundred men were in line behind them, and while they sought in the deceptive starlight for the trail that dipped down the bank to the river more men could be heard arriving. Shorty slipped and shot down the thirty foot chute into the soft snow. Smoke followed, knocking him over as he was rising to his feet. The next moment they were scrambling wildly out of the way of the hurtling bodies of those that followed.

"It's a sure stampede," Shorty decided. "Or might all them be sleep walkers?"

"We're at the head of the procession at any rate," was Smoke's answer.

"Oh, I don't know! Mebbe that's a firefly ahead there. Mebbe they're all fireflies—that one, an' that one. Look at 'em! Believe me, they is a whole string of processions ahead."

It was a mile across the jams to the west bank of the Yukon, and candles flickered the full length of the twisting trail. Behind them—clear to the top of the bank they had descended—were more candles.

Smoke quickened and was soon at the rear of the nearest bunch of stampeders. He counted eight men and two women in this party, and before the way across the jam ice was won he and Shorty had passed another party twenty strong.

Within a few feet of the west bank the trail swerved to the south, emerging from the jam upon smooth ice. The ice, however, was buried under several feet of fine snow. Through this the sled trail ran, a narrow ribbon of packed footing barely two feet in width. On either side one sank to his knees and deeper in the snow. The stampeders they overtook were reluctant to give way, and often Smoke and Shorty had to plunge into the deep snow and by supreme efforts flounder past.

The average pace of the stampeders on the smooth going was three miles and a half an hour. Smoke and Shorty were doing four and a half, though sometimes they broke into short runs and went faster.

Half hour by half hour they alternated in setting pace. Nor did they talk much. Their exertions kept them warm, though their breath froze on their faces from lips to chin. So intense was the cold that they almost continually rubbed their noses and cheeks with their mittens.

"Get outa the way, stranger. Let somebody stampede that knows how to stampede."

Often they thought they had reached the lead, but always they overtook more stampeders who had started before them. Occasionally groups of men attempted to swing in behind to their pace, but invariably they were discouraged after a mile or two and disappeared in the darkness to the rear.

"We've been out on trail all winter," was Shorty's comment, "an' them geezers, soft from layin' around their cabins, has the nerve to think they can keep our stride. Now, if they was real sour doughs it'd be different."

Once Smoke lighted a match and glanced at his watch. He never repeated it, for so quick was the bite of the frost on his bared hands that half an hour passed before they were again comfortable.

"Four o'clock," he said as he pulled on his mittens, "and we've already passed 300."

"Three hundred and thirty-eight," Shorty corrected. "Get outa the way, stranger. Let somebody stampede that knows how to stampede."

This latter was addressed to a man, evidently exhausted, who could no more than stumble along and who blocked the trail. This and one other were the only played out men they encountered, for they were very near to the head of the stampede. Nor did they learn till afterward the horrors of that night. Exhausted men sat down to rest by the way and failed to get up again. Seven were frozen to death, while scores of amputations of toes, feet and fingers were performed in the Dawson hospitals on the survivors.

The other played out man they found a few minutes later sitting on a piece of ice beside the trail.

"Hop along, Sister Mary," Shorty gayly greeted him. "Keep movin'. If you sit there you'll freeze stiff."

The man made no response, and they stopped to investigate.

"See if he's breathing," Smoke said as, with bared hand, he sought through furs and woolens for the man's heart.

Shorty lifted one ear flap and bent to the ice lips. "Nary breathe," he reported.

"Nor heartbeat," said Smoke.

He mittened his hand and beat it violently for a minute before exposing it to the frost to strike a match. It was an old man, incontestably dead. In the moment of illumination they saw a long gray beard massed with ice to the nose, cheeks that were white with frost and closed eyes with frost rimmed lashes frozen together.

"Come on," Shorty said, rubbing his ear. "We can't do nothin' for the old geezer."

A few minutes later, when a flaming ribbon spilled pulsating fire over the heavens, they saw on the ice a quarter of a mile ahead two forms. Beyond for a mile nothing moved.

"They're leadin' the procession," Smoke said as darkness fell again. "Come on, let's get them."

At the end of half an hour, not yet having overtaken the two in front, Shorty broke into a run. "If we catch 'em we'll never pass 'em," he panted. "Lord, what a pace they're hittin'! They're the real sour dough variety, you can stack on that."

Smoke was leading when they finally caught up, and he was glad to ease to a walk at their heels. Almost immediately he got the impression that the one nearer him was a woman. How this impression came he could not tell. Hooded and furred, the dark form was as any form, yet there was a haunting sense of familiarity about it.

"How do you do, Miss Gastell?" Smoke addressed her.

"How do you do?" she answered, with a turn of the head and a quick glance. "It's too dark to see. Who are you?"

"Smoke."

She laughed in the frost, and he was certain it was the prettiest laughter he had ever heard. "How many chekakos are there behind?"

"Several thousand, I imagine. We passed over 300."

"It's the old story," she said bitterly. "The newcomers get in on the rich creeks, and the old timers, who dared and suffered and made this country, get nothing. Old timers made this discovery on Squaw creek—how it leaked out is the mystery—and they sent word up to all the old timers on Sea Lion. But it's ten miles farther than Dawson, and when they arrive they'll find the creek staked to the sky line by the Dawson chekakos."

"It is too bad," Smoke sympathized. "But I'm hanged if I know what you are going to do about it."

"I wish I could do something," she flashed back at him. "I'd like to see them all freeze on the trail or have everything terrible happen to them, so long as the Sea Lion stampede arrived first. And now, if you'll forgive my tirade, I'll save my breath, for I don't know when you and all the rest may try to pass dad and me."

No further talk passed between Joy and Smoke for an hour or so, though he noticed that for a time she and her father talked in low tones.

"I know 'em now," Shorty told Smoke. "He's old Louis Gastell, an' the real goods. That must be his kid. He come into this country so long ago they ain't nobody can recollect, an' he brought the girl with him, she only a baby."

"I don't think we'll try to pass them," Smoke said. "We're at the head of the stampede, and there are only four of us."

Another hour of silence followed, during which they swung steadily along. At 7 o'clock the blackness was broken by a last display of the aurora borealis, which showed to the west a broad opening between snow clad mountains.

"Squaw creek!" Joy exclaimed.

"Goin' some," Shorty exulted.

It was at this point that the Dyea trail, baffled by ice jams, swerved abruptly across the Yukon to the east bank. And here they must leave the hard packed, main traveled trail, mount the jams and follow a dim trail but slightly packed that hovered the west bank.

Louis Gastell, leading, slipped in the darkness on the rough ice and sat up, holding his ankle in both his hands. He struggled to his feet and went on, but at a slower pace and with a perceptible limp. After a few minutes he abruptly halted.

"It's no use," he said to his daughter. "I've sprained a tendon. You go ahead and stake for me as well as yourself."

"Can't we do something?" Smoke asked.

Louis Gastell shook his head. "She can stake two claims as well as one. I'll crawl over to the bank, start a fire and bandage my ankle. I'll be all right. Go on, Joy. Stake ours above the Discovery claim. It's richer higher up."

"Here's some birch bark," Smoke said, dividing his supply equally. "We'll take care of your daughter."

Louis Gastell laughed harshly. "Thank you just the same," he said, "but she can take care of herself. Follow her and watch her."

"Do you mind if I lead?" she asked Smoke as she headed on. "I know this country better than you."

"Lead on," Smoke answered gallantly, "though I agree with you it's a darn shame all us chekakos are going to beat that Sea Lion bunch to it. Isn't there some way to shake them?"

She shook her head. "We can't hide our trail, and they'll follow it like sheep."

After a quarter of a mile she turned sharply to the west. Smoke noticed that they were going through unpacked snow, but neither he nor Shorty observed that the dim trail they had been on still led south. Had they witnessed the subsequent procedure of Louis Gastell the history of the Klondike would have been written differently, for they would have seen that old timer, no longer limping, running with his nose to the trail like a hound, following them; also they would have seen him trample and widen the turn to the fresh trail they had made to the west, and finally they would have seen him keep on the old dim trail that still led south.

A trail did run up the creek, but so slight was it that they continually lost it in the darkness. After a quarter of an hour Joy Gastell was willing to drop to the rear and let the two men take turns in breaking a way through the snow. This slowness of the leaders enabled the whole stampede to catch up, and when daylight came at 9 o'clock as far back as they could see was an unbroken line of men. Joy's dark eyes sparkled at the sight.

"How long since we started up the creek?" she asked.

"Fully two hours," Smoke answered.

"And two hours back make four," she laughed. "The stampede from Sea Lion is saved."

A faint suspicion crossed Smoke's mind. "I don't understand," he said.

"You don't? Then I'll tell you. This is Norway creek. Squaw creek is the next to the south."

Maybe their reasons for thinking as they do are well founded. Maybe they have dealt with some firm which does business along the old lines which were once thought necessary by all—or nearly all—credit giving stores.

But one trial of Laurie's Credit System will open their eyes to the newer, better way.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — Why One Little Girl Became a Poet.

She Would Make Boats Out of Shells.

"ONCE upon a time a little girl lived away out in the ocean upon a big rock. Her father was the lighthouse keeper.

"Of course such a life, isolated from people, made Betty very fond of nature. She grew to love the sunrises and the wonderful sunsets and would get up every morning to say good morning to the sun.

"There was sufficient soil upon the rock so that Betty could have a beautiful flower garden, and when her daddy would go in his dory to the mainland to get provisions Betty always begged him to bring her seeds and plants.

"Then she used to pick up the shells which the sea would wash up on to the rock and make necklaces of them, make wreaths of flowers for her hair and then go down to the shore and wade and dance about and pretend she was a fairy.

"She would make boats out of shells and sail these tiny crafts in the pools left in the rock by the ocean. Her little brother, Ted, was always her playmate, but he lacked Betty's imaginative mind, so some of the things she liked to do seemed very silly to him.

"Winter was the most trying time of the year because the weather was terribly cold out there on the lonely rock surrounded by the battling waves. But Betty would stand at the window and watch the waves and weave stories about sea nymphs and tell them to Ted.

"But Ted never saw anything in the waves except water, which is the case with many persons like Ted.

"But Betty kept on dreaming day dreams and seeing visions, and after awhile she began to write them down upon paper. She would press flowers and seaweed and paste them in books she made herself of fine white paper, and then she would write little poems about them.

"One day a gentleman came to visit the lighthouse and was very much impressed by the look of more than usual intelligence in Betty's face. He asked her what she did all day long there in that lonely place, and he was so kind and sympathetic that Betty showed him her books she had made herself.

"The gentleman was astonished at the beauty of the poetry and begged the lighthouse keeper to send Betty away to school.

"So Betty was sent to school. But let me whisper the truth to you kiddies. It was the memories of the ocean, the loneliness, the moonlit nights and sun drenched days, the sea in all its moods of mingled storm and calm that made Betty a great writer."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Oh, Mrs. Millman," called Mrs. Friedel from her front porch one morning as both women were starting their children off to kindergarten. "Clarice says you have a new game over at your house called 'Police Inspection.' I am interested to know about it from her report.

"Come on over and I will tell you about it," replied Mrs. Millman.

"I can stay but a minute," said the neighbor, running up the steps. "I have so much to do."

"Sit down; it won't take any longer," laughed her friend.

"My children bothered me greatly by leaving their clothes and playthings out of place, so I figured out this way to cure them," began Mrs. Millman. "I am policeman and I go around three times a day and make inspections, arresting all things out of place.

"In the morning, just after they go to school, again after they leave at noon, and in the evening before going to bed these inspections occur. I always give a warning call at bedtime to allow them to get things in order. Anything that is arrested, whether a garment, a book or a toy, is put in prison—a big skirt box in my room. Things are kept a specified length of time, according to the number of times they have been found out of place. The children can leave their playthings in for the full time if they choose, but if clothing is arrested and is needed, that must be gotten out by paying a fine, which is taken out of the monthly allowance, and of course fines are in proportion to the allowance. The older children have more to spend than the little ones. It is considered a disgrace to lose much of the monthly allowance in fines. The children are entering into the spirit of the game nicely."

"What a fine idea! May I go round with you on your tours of inspection?" asked Mrs. Friedel.

"Certainly. Come on," and they entered the house.

"How do you manage with the baby's things?" asked the neighbor.

"Usually one of the children volunteers to put his things away. Of course they are not subject to arrest, but he will soon get into the game; he enjoys it already," said Mrs. Millman. "Ah! Here are George's gloves. As this is the second time this week that I have found them out of place, I shall fine him five cents, or he can do without them for a week. If the weather continues mild he will probably choose the latter punishment," laughed George's mother.

"Do you have trouble about the children telling on each other?" asked Mrs. Friedel.

"I did till I fined the tale bearer one cent for carrying the report. That stopped it at once."

"Your rooms are wonderfully free from scattered belongings. I am going to turn policeman myself. I am so glad I came over. It is such a helpful idea," said Mrs. Freidel on her way to the door.

"I hope you will like the plan. It has helped me wonderfully," responded her neighbor.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

School Handkerchiefs—The sleeves, fronts and backs of wornout white waists, cut into handkerchief squares and hemmed, make nice, soft school handkerchiefs for little school girls and boys, who are so hard on handkerchiefs, and, if lost, there is not much loss.

To Prevent Rats and Mice from molesting meat when hanging in smokehouse—Take a sheet of sticky flypaper, make it funnel shape, and put over meat; fasten small shape, and put over meat; fasten small end around top of meat, with string or safety pin.

Cheap Dustclothes—Mix half pint raw linseed oil and one-fourth pint each of cider vinegar and turpentine. Saturate cheesecloth—not very moist. This will last as long as six 25-cent dustclothes, will not cost more than the price of one and just as good.

White Window Shades—Save the old rollers and flat sticks and get a good piece of white cannon cloth. Cut into lengths to fit your windows. Hem bottom to run flat stick through. If it is the right width for windows, leave selvage edge; if too wide, hem both sides. Starch stiff and iron smooth. Tack to rollers, using tiny tacks from old shades (larger ones will interfere with the spring). Hang up and you will be surprised at the nice effect. They can be taken down and washed as often as you like and will always be beautiful and white. They can be used for a good many years as shades, then washed and made into aprons, pillow slips, laundry bags or anything that a piece of white goods may be needed for.

THE TABLE.

Mock Maple Sirup—Take enough sugar (granulated) with black coffee (not too strong) to make a sirup to suit; add to the sirup a little extract of vanilla. A very good substitute for maple sirup.

Roast Rabbit—Clean and dress, removing head and feet (some leave head on); lay in salt water about half an hour, then rinse in cold water, wipe dry, rub inside with salt, fill with a dressing of bread crumbs, a little melted butter, pepper and salt, half cup sausage meat, a little sage. Sew or tie up the opening and place rabbit in roasting pain in which are a few thin slices of salt pork. Sprinkle with pepper and salt and lay two or three slices of salt pork, cut very thin, over top of rabbit. Place in moderately hot oven and baste frequently. Bake about one and one-half hours. Baste with butter and water that should be in the pan. When done, remove carefully so as not to break it, remove strings and serve with slices of the dripping in the pan, adding water if not enough.

Nut Cake—One cup white sugar, half cup lard, pinch salt, one cup sweet milk, two teaspoons baking powder in two cups flour, one cup nut meats. Bake about half hour.

Icing: Pulverized sugar mixed with a little milk. Place half nut meats on icing.

Devil food can be made by leaving out nut meats and mixing half cup cocoa with the sugar.

Fine raisin cake is made by using one cup or raisins in place of nut meats, or use spices to make good fruit cake. Also makes good white cake by leaving out nut meats; make pretty pink icing by mixing pulverized sugar with juice or canned cherries, strawberries or cranberries. Make lemon extract and make icing by mixing pulverized sugar with lemon juice.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat if You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grape and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.—Adv.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid.—Adv.

SAYS WILSON IS ALLIES' FRIEND

Principal of School in Munich Tells of Attitude of Many Americans.

HATRED FOR ENGLAND

Writer Gives Some Interesting Views Concerning tthe European War—Declares That Germany is Determined and Confident.

The following extract from a letter from L. D. Bissell, principal of the Colt School for Boys at Munich, to an American friend, is interesting as reflecting the attitude taken by many intelligent American residents in Germany. Mr. Bissell is also treasurer of the American Relief Fund. He is an American. The letter was dated December 4. A letter from the American vice-consul at Munich, dated December 10, to the same correspondent, adds "things are still running as nicely in Munich as they were at the time you were here; theatres, opera, etc., are in full blast." Parts of the letter from Mr. Bissel is as follows.

"The Red Cross Hospital and the Children's Relief are flourishing. Both are to have a fine Christmas. Some things from America have just been received at the hospital; comfort bags and hospital supplies.

"Germany is just as determined and confident as ever. Of the 2,000,000 volunteers in August only a small part have as yet been called out. There has been such a superfluity of material that only the best has been used. But the drilling has been constant and in addition to all the new army corps each original regiment has received three times their original numbers. When a man falls in battle there is another to take his place. Each soldier will have a fine Christmas from home. A trainload of 40 cars recently left Munich for the Bavarian troops, who are in France. This is only a small part of all that is being sent. Recently in a single day over 1,000,000 packages were sent to soldiers from Berlin. There are about 2,000 students now in the university, but about all have volunteered and will soon go into active training. In the gymniasia many boys have gone and parents have had serious trouble in keeping their sons at home. Everybody is making some sacrifice and trying to do something to help. War develops the best in human nature as well as the worst. Germany is united as never before. Political and personal difficulties are put aside. All agree that the new Germany must not be torn by party strife. People seem to live in a religious inspiration, and have higher ideals than formerly.

"But what shall I say of the hatred for England. It has increased from day to day, while the feeling towards France has softened. France is fighting for revenge, Russia to increase her power and to gain Constantinople, but England is out for the destruction of a hated commercial and political powerful rival, and at the same time assuming the pose of a protector of the weak.

"It is a pity that the United States cannot be neutral. Everybody knows that Wilson is against Germany. We seem to be such a sentimental people, and go off at half-cock. At least we might have reserved our judgment till all the facts were known in the case, and have been in the position to give an intelligent opinion. So far as I know the German side in regard to Belgium has had no proper consideration at home. Why not get a set of impartial men to investigate the case of Belgium and ask them to report to the people of the United States. As to the need of assistance for the Belgians there is no question. But whether the Belgian government did not forfeit their neutral position before the war started is quite another question. White Books are compilations that are often successful in concealing the true facts."

NEW OFFICERS INSTALLED BY PERSEVERANCE LODGE

District Deputy Harry W. Bellis, of Flemington, installed the following officers of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last night: Chancellor commender, William J. Trembath; vice-chancellor, William Neilsen; master of work, George Keen; master at arms, Jeremiah Moore; prelate, Frazee Putnam; inner guard, Peter Lund; outer guard, Peter Stram; master of finances, J. B. Higgins, master of the exchequer, John J. Bicknell; keeper of records and seal, Fred Douglas; trustees, M. F. Gano, George Clark and Thomas Caleen.

The installation was followed by a social session during which addresses were made by the district deputy and the new officers.

CYCLE THIEF CAUGHT WITH STOLEN GOODS

John Edward Steele Admitted Taking Machine Following His Arrest.

Although he was riding a stolen motorcycle capable of turning out sixty miles per hour, John Edward Steele, of Cushing road, was so surprised by his sudden identification made by Patrolman Roland MacIntyre at Central avenue and West Sixth street, last night, that he shut off power and meekly accompanied the minion of the law to police headquarters. MacIntyre's catch is considered an extremely good one inasmuch as Steele had been a fugitive from justice since December 6, when, it is alleged, he broke into the garage of A. S. Giles and took a Harley-Davidson motorcycle, the property of eighteen-year-old Elroy Giles.

Arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, Steele who is but eighteen years of age, admitted his culpability. He had been riding about town on the machine ever since he appropriated it without being molested and was practically certain that he could get away with the theft. He had not even so much as changed the license number. Following a preliminary examination this morning the youth was held in $300 bail for the grand jury.

GAS RATE DECISION AROUSES THE STATE

Efforts Will Be Made to Have the Case Re-opened on January 14.

Jersey City, Jan. 9.—Next week will witness several important moves in the proceedings now on foot to secure a reversal of Justice Parker's famous decision against the ninety-cent gas rate. The Legislature, which convenes on Tuesday noon, may take notice of the case in some appropriate way. On Thursday morning the Court of Errors and Appeals in Trenton will hear the argument in favor of the re-opening of the gas suit. On Friday morning at 11 o'clock there will be held in the Newark City Hall a State conference of Mayors of New Jersey for the purpose of considering the pending legal proceedings and discussing legislation to correct the rate situation and make it impossible for the values of franchises to be considered when rates are fixed by the Public Utility Commission.

Still another conference was arranged for today. It will be held next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the City Hall, Jersey City, in the office of Corporation Counsel John Milton. It will be a conference of city attorneys from all over the State who are anxious to assist Special Counsel George L. Record, of Jersey City; City Attorney Edward F. Merrey, of Paterson, and City Attorney Albert O. Miller, of Passaic, who are leading the movement to secure a re-hearing of the Gas Rate case. In the call which Messrs. Record, Merrey and Miller have issued for next Wednesday afternoon's conference they say:

"As you are aware application is to be made on next Thursday, January 14, to the Court of Errors for the re-opening of the so-called ninety-cent gas rate case. While this case is nominally confined to the Paterson-Passaic district, it really affects every municipality in the State where the people are served by any public utility company.

"From several lawyers representing municipalities we have received offers of assistance and expressions of a desire to consult with us in reference not only to this case, but in reference to legislation to be presented to the attention of the incoming Legislature. In response to these suggestions we have decided to call a meeting of the lawyers representing a number of different municipalities, to be held at the office of the corporation counsel of the City of Jersey City, on Wednesday afternoon, January 13, at 3 o'clock, and your attendance at such meeting is respectfully requested."

TO ATTEND CONVENTION.

The local branch of the new American-German movement called the "Vaterlandshilfe," will attend in a body the convention at Krueger Auditorium, Newark, tomorrow, leaving here on the 1:28 train in the afternoon. At that time the temporary constitution and bylaws will be discussed and adopted and the various officers of the central body elected. The local branch, which has already received the support of many of the city's prominent American-German citizens, promises to be an active and flourshing body.

ASSIGNS HIS CLAIM AS LOAN SECURITY

H. G. Runkle Transfers His Interest in Will to Logan Trust Co.

An assignment of all his claims in the estate of William Runkle, amounting to more than $500,000, has been made by Harry G. Runkle, of this city, a brother, to the Logan Trust Company, of Philadelphia, to guarantee the payment of $73,000 he borrowed from that institution. Copies of the instrument in which the transfer is agreed upon were filed yesterday with Surrogate Fred G. Stickel, Jr., and later with the county clerk, register of deeds and the Fidelity Trust Company, to which Mr. Runkle is indebted.

According to the assignment, it appears that Harry Runkle gave notes to the Logan Trust Company to obtain the $73,000 loan. The document makes provision for a payment of the loan in installments. Harry Runkle recently sought to have the will set aside so that he would become possessed of the entire estate instead of the half million dollars. The effort failed in the county courts, but Mr. Runkle has now had the case advanced to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

BOARD ALLOWS FOR REDUCTION ON STOCK

Union County Board Acted on Fanwood Township Appeals.

Elizabeth, Jan. 9—In the consideration of tax appeals from Fanwood township at its meeting here yesterday, the Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes allowed a $4,750 reduction to Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, the same being the assessed value of fifty-seven shares of bank stock and being recommended by the assessor.

Other appeals acted on follow:

Estate of Warren Ackerman, assessment of 224 shares of Newark National Bank stock; should have been 196 shares of Newark National Banking Company stock; petitioner asked that assessment against bank stock be cancelled. Cancelled.

Anna McGauley, assessed valuation $750; owner's valuation $550. Recommended by assessor and allowed.

Emily Coles, 13 shares bank stock; assessed valuation $1,103, owner's valuation cancelled. Recommended by assessor and allowed.

Joseph Caperole, block B; assessed valuation $2,400, owner's valuation $1,900. Recommended by assessor. $500 reduction allowed.

Anthony Gilbert, block 10, lots 30-31-32; assessed valuation $2,600; owner's valuation $2,300. $300 reduction allowed.

WEST END CIVIC WORKERS ELECT

All Former Officers Unanimously Chosen to Serve Another Term.

VISITORS ARE PRESENT

Representatives From Several Local Organizations Give Talks—Large Attendance—Tax Question Discussed.

All of last year's officers of the West End Civic Association were unanimously re-elected to serve during the ensuing year at the annual meeting of the organization held in the Washington School auditorium last night. The following were chosen: President, Thomas C. Vail; vice-president, W. W. Robinson; secretary and treasurer, W. J. Boyd; nominating committee, Charles A. Wright, chairman; R. D. Williams and Frank Power.

The session last night was a special one to which representatives of other civic organizations in the city were invited, it being proposed to learn the sentiment of various factions regarding certain municipal questions, principal among which is the tax issue. Among those in attendance were Former Mayor G. W. V. Moy, of the Taxpayers' Protective Association; former Mayor Newton B. Smalley, Winfield S. Angleman and Paul H. Burns, of the Chamber of Commerce; John J. Varley, of the Business Men's Association, and William H. Harding, of the Building Trades' Council. Mr. Moy spoke on the advisability of forming a taxpayers' protective league in which the various civic bodies would have representation. His remarks were based on facts unearthed during a survey of the tax question and although no official action was taken last night it is not unlikely that the matter will be taken up at the next meeting of the respective associations.

Mr. Smalley, retiring president of the Chamber of Commerce, gave an interesting and instructive talk on the subject of Plainfield taxes basing his remarks on data secured as far back as forty years. He gave a resume of local assessments and rates during that period, all of which substantiated his position. He asserted that the local assessors have failed to figure their valuations correctly, and that the city was in need of a revision of present methods. He attributed the many vacant houses in Plainfield to the high taxes, declaring that prospective resident are kept out of the municipality by reason of the unusually high ratings. He also stated that this city spends more annually than other municipalities of its class and declared that the old kick of "too much government" was constantly in the foreground.

Mr. Varley advocated the reorganization of the old co-ordination committee, a feature introduced by the Chamber of Commerce several years ago. At that time it was proposed to support this body, which was to have a representative from each local civic organization, for the purpose of holding regular meetings to discuss civic topics of interest to Plainfield. It was proposed to discuss the merits of the various issues at committee meetings and then to have the delegates bring the decisions to the attention of their respective bodies at monthly gatherings. On the whole the committee idea failed to accomplish its end and there was a noticeable lack of enthusiasm when it was brought up again last night.

Harry Stevens, president of the Netherwood Residents' Association made a plea for a primary school in the East End of the city. Winfield S. Angleman, one of the Chamber of Commerce representatives, urged the support of the old school board in its expenditure during 1914 which has been so much discussed recently. He declared that the State laws for scholastic institutions and boards were of such a nature that the expenditures could not be avoided.

William H. Harding, of the Building Trades' Council, spoke of the expense entailed in the construction of the Plainfield High School addition. He declared that the materials used in the building of the school were of a character that could not be reproduced by home labor in the event of repairs being needed.

President Paul H. Burns, of the Chamber of Commerce, reviewed and corroberated Mr. Varley's remarks on the co-ordinating idea.

The meeting was largely attended and an enthusiastic interest was manifested in the propositions brought up.

C. A. HIGGINS NAMED AS MORGUE KEEPER

Changes Announced Yesterday by Judge James C. Connolly.

Elizabeth, Jan. 9—Charles A. Higgins, of the Plainfield undertaking firm of J. J. & C. A. Higgins, was yesterday appointed morgue-keeper for Plainfield, by Judge James C. Connolly, of the Union County Court. The appointment is for three years beginning February 10, 1915. Mr. Higgins will succeed George W. Cole, who has been the morgue-keeper for many years.

Judge Connolly, in making the appointment, said that there were other things to be considered beside the end of a party organization, and before making a change he had personally visited Plainfield and the places of business of the aspirants, and in his opinion Mr. Higgins was well qualified for the appointment, his undertaking establishment at 109 West Fourth street, being admirably equipped for conducting a morgue and in view of these facts had decided to name Mr. Higgins for the place.

It is recalled that the late Judge E. S. Atwater, in making a similar appointment at Elizabeth several years ago, decided not to follow the suggestions of the county committee of the Republican party, preferring to use his own judgment in making a selection.

FRIENDS APPROVE PEACE RESOLUTIONS

Strong Plea for Settlement of War Heard at Meeting Last Night.

"While war exists our Quaker message is unsaid," declared L. Hollingsworth Wood, of Mt. Kisco and New York city, last evening, at the Friends' Meeting-house. He made a strong plea for peace and against any increase in national armanment. Miss Elizabeth Walton spoke of the experience of being in England when the war broke out. Miss Carolina Wood pleaded for sympathy for the German people who have done such wonderful work in music and science.

A general discussion followed and it was stated that many English Friends refusing to bear arms have instituted an ambulance corps and are doing a wonderful work in caring for the wounded. The Quakerism class made up of Friends in and near New York city was the guests of the local Friends' Association, last evening, under whose auspices the meeting was held and endorsed resolutions which were presented.

These resolutions set forth that the true policy of this country is not to increase it land and sea forces, but to retain for productive and humanizing outlay the vast sums demanded for armaments, and to wait steadfastly for the day when we may offer our disinterested aid in helping the nations of Europe, crippled by excess of militarism to free themselves and the world from the waste and terror of heaped-up instruments of destruction. Furthermore, that there shall be founded a permanent organization to be known as the American League to Limit Armaments, to which anyone believing in the principles of the organization shall be eligible.

GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY ON BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

A birthday party was held at the home of Roscoe Blanchard, yesterday evening. The affair was arranged by his sister, Miss Marion Blanchard, and was a surprise.

The evening was spent in playing games and dancing, after which refreshments were served.

The following young people were present: The Misses Elizabeth Chickering, Jean Peacock, Claire Britton, Elizabeth Martin, Jennie Peacock, Marion Lockwood, Marion Blanchard, Helen Peacock, Elizabeth Mumford, Elsa Palmer and Edward Ryder, Herbert Peacock, Edward Crone, William Peacock, Bruce Buttfield, Russell Tomlinson, Roscoe Blanchard, Jack Britton, Daniel McNamee and Davis Blanchard.

MISS ROCHESTER TO SPEAK.

Miss Anna Rochester, of the National Child Labor Commission and an expert on legislative work for women and children in New Jersey, will lecture before the Monday Afternoon Club in the parish house of the Congregational church, Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

"ICE WAGON" CHARLES CONNORS SENTENCED

Given From Three and One-half to Seven Years in State Prison.

Elizabeth, Jan. 9.—Charles ("Ice Wagon") Connors, who was convicted of robbing former Senator Ernest R. Ackerman's house in Plainfield a year ago, on finger-print evidence obtained on the premises, was sentenced to a term of from three and one-half to seven years in State prison by Judge Connolly in the Court of Quarter Sessions, yesterday afternoon. His counsel, William Newcorn, immediately filed a writ of error with the court and will appeal. Connors' bail was fixed at $8,000, less than one-half what he is alleged to have taken in jewels and silverware, and he was remanded to his cell.

Mr. Newcorn pleaded for leniency on the ground that the conviction was solely on circumstantial evidence and that but one of the five counts in the indictment led to his conviction. Judge Connolly said he would take into consideration the fact that Connors has spent eight months in the county jail.

John Long, Frank Diano and Andrew Bonizza, convicted of assaulting Rudolph Vandroth, a gardener for former Mayor Randolph, of Plainfield, escaped under a suspended sentence. Patrick Long, also convicted, failed to appear in court. His counsel, John Walsh, promised that he would be present next Friday.

AIM TO IMPROVE MUSICAL PROGRAM

Sunday-School Superintendents' Ass'n Arrange for Meeting Monday Night.

The Sunday-school Superintendents' Association, whose latest public benefaction was the glorious Community Christmas tree, will again offer a treat to the public, especially to that part of it which is interested in music. In the endeavor to improve the musical feature of the Sunday-school program they announce a meeting at Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church next Monday night, to which all are cordially invited.

Milton S. Littlefield, an expert in this line, and an entertaining speaker, will have charge, and will show what music ought to be taught and sung. In his demonstrations he will have the assistance of a trio of women with instruments. Their part in the program will be very attractive in itself.

It is hoped that there will be a large attendance from all the Bible schools, including officers, choristers, teachers and all who are interested in the enrichment of the musical feature of the service in the Sunday-school.

BORO DOMESTIC SCIENCE TEACHER ENGAGED TO WED

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Bertha Spencer, of Ware, Mass., to Frederick B. Keeler, of Detroit, Mich. Miss Spencer has been domestic science instructor in the North Plainfield schools for the past two years and tendered her resignation shortly before the Christmas holidays. She wanted her resignation to take effect immediately, but as there was difficulty in securing another teacher for the position she consented to return for a short time.

Miss Spencer expects to leave here for her home in about two weeks. No date has yet been set for the wedding.

LOSE BAYONET FIGHTS

Austrians Are Driven Ten Miles Every Day in An Eight Day Battle—French Continue to Capture Trenches in Fierce Struggle.

Paris, Jan. 9.—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"In the region of Arras and in that of Amiens there have been artillery duels. Our batteries have a marked advantage.

"In the region of Soupir we captured yesterday morning hill No. 132 in a brilliant engagement, making three attacks. During the day the enemy made violent counter attacks. He was repulsed every time. Our gain represents three lines of German trenches on a front of 600 yards. The enemy being unable to retake positions which he had lost, bombarded Soissons and burned the Palace of Justice there.

"To the south of Laon and of Craonne our artillery demolished a camp containing rapid fire guns, silenced the enemy's artillery and wrecked some trenches. In the region of Perthes the enemy made a pronounced attack, to which we immediately responded with a counter attack. This permitted us not only to hold our positions on hill No. 200 west of Perthes, but also to capture 400 yards of the enemy's trenches between hill No. 200 and the village of Perthes. In addition a single attack directed by us from Perthes at the same time that we were making our counter attack upon hill No. 200 made us masters of that village. We have taken up our position there and have advanced beyond its borders. Our total gain from this source was more than 500 yards in depth upon the whole front.

"Between Rheims and the Argonne our artillery inflicted losses upon the enemy. In the Argonne we have suffered on our right a sharp engagement to which we counter attacked."

Amsterdam, Jan. 9.—The Germans are now feverishly active on the Belgian cost. The Nieue Rotterdamsche Courani says that between 1,500 and 1,800 Germans are assembled at Knocke and 3,000 at Heyst, with many quickfirers on the road. Between Knocke and Heyst they continue to dig trenches protected by barbed wire.

Petrograd (via London), Jan. 9.—Taking advantage of the continued and increasing cold which has frozen the marshy land adjacent to the numerous rivers of north Poland, the Germans are now initiating another attempt on Warsaw from the north.

They are contented with fortifying and taking the defensive west of Warsaw, along the banks of the Bzura and southward between Skierniewice and Grodzisk and farther southward along the left bank of the Vistula.

This new assault is considered a sequel of the German demonstration of four weeks ago, when, advancing from Mlawa, they were repulsed by Russian troops across the border.

The previous advance obviously was made with the aim of acquainting themselves with the nature of the ground and the disposition of the Russian forces, as well as assisting General Mackensen's attack west of Warsaw by attracting Russian troops to the northward.

This time the German offensive is said to be en masse, including the army corps recently brought over from Belgium. It is reported here that on the Russian Christmas day, heavy fighting occurred between Mlawa and Przasnyss.

The German intention seems to be to try and force a route through Przasnyss, Rozan, Pulsutk and Serock, thus making a considerably wider movement and swinging further to the eastward than in their previous attempt. In taking this direction it will be necessary for the Germans to cross the Rivers Narem and Bug, the latter of which is not sufficiently frozen to provide safe transport for the heavy artillery.

The success of this invasion is here deemed impossible since the heavy Russian fortress of Nowo Georgiewsk and several minor ones would obstruct the German advance if it succeeded in reaching so far.

An official communication by the general staff today says:

"On the left bank of the Vistula front, at the villages of Soukha, Metairie and Moghely, the fighting has assumed a character more and more desperate. The Germans, not withstanding the great losses they have sustined, continue obstinate attacks at different points.

Something that will be of great value to local pupils going to Plainfield High School has been announced by Principal Lindsey Best, of that institution. Arrangements have been made with the Plainfield Public Library, where by payment of a small fee per quarter outside pupils may have the use of the books for reference work in their studies. This will greatly help local pupils as they have not been able to obtain the necessary books in the libraries of Scotch Plains or Fanwood.

It is likely that before long the local schools will have the benefit of illustrated lectures added to the educational program. It has been advocated by the Union County Principals' Association that all of the schools that are represented in the association purchase magic lanterns and interchange the slides. Supervisor S. Dana Townsend, of the local schools, has long urged this particular kind of training and Fanwood township will surely be one of the districts to profit by the new scheme.

Miss Anna Littel, assembly teacher of the eight grade in School No. 1, entertained her class at a party following the close of school yesterday afternoon. A pleasant time was spent playing games and later refreshments were served. The class election of officers was postponed until Monday.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Coming to Proctor's Theatre, Monday for the first half of next week is the season's greatest dramatic sensation, "The Pool Room," a vaudeville production that has been drawing capacity audiences wherever seen. It comes to Plainfield in its entirety, with an all-star cast and special scenic investiture. Messrs. Proctor and Sanderson announce it to be one of the heaviest bookings they have secured for the present winter. It will be supplemented on the bill by Roser's Aerial Dogs, an animal act sure to please both old and young. LeFevre and St. John, late of the "His Honor, the Mayor" company, in a comedy skit entitled, "Flirtation;" Quigg and Wickerson, comedy instrumentalists, and Seymour and Howard, presenting a refined singing and dancing act. At both Monday and Tuesday performances there will be seen for the first time the big feature film, "The Pit," in which Wilton Lackaye will be seen in the dramatic role which brought him fame and fortune a few years ago. "The Pit" tells a sensational story of the Chicago wheat market and its fascination, intermingled with love and pathos, the big mob scene is given with wonderful exactness and conceded to be the most thrilling representation in moving picture accomplishments.

A BIT OF INSIDE HISTORY.

It Has to Do With the War Between Russia and Japan.

In Aubrey Stanbope's book of recollections as a special correspondent, "On the Track of the Great," he tells a curious story relating to the war between Russia and Japan and helps us to understand the value of diplomatic assurances and the sources from which contemporary history is written:

"I remember once, being at that time correspondent in Petersburg and being on very friendly terms with Marquis Nishi, the Japanese minister, and one day after I had communicated to that diplomat some news of special interest to his country, he said: 'I know I can trust you to keep silent. In eight years' time Japan will make war upon Russia.'

"My astonishment was immense. 'What,' I said, 'Japan make war on Russia?'

"'Yes,' he replied, 'inevitably. And you will see that when it takes place Russia will be found utterly unprepared.'

"Eight years later I was again in Petersburg. This time the Japanese minister was M. Kurino. 'There is going to be no war,' he assured me.

"'There is going to be war, your excellency.'

"M. Kurino gave a quick, sharp look. He had just returned from the foreign office, where he had assured Count Lamsdorff that Japan had no warlike intentions.

"'What makes you say that?'

"'Because Marquis Nishi told me eight years ago that Japan would make war on Russia in eight years' time.'

"'It was told you in confidence. Keep it as such,' he replied.

"At that moment Marquis Nishi was in Tokyo and formed part of the ministry which was organizing the details of the sudden attack upon Russia which occurred a few days later.

"And, as Nishi had said, Japan found Russia quite unprepared."

Etymology of a Phrase.

A little boy was dining with his mother at a Boston restaurant when he saw the cook's boy in cap and apron coming along the aisle between the tables, wheeling a wagon on which were meats from which the guests might choose their piece de resistance of the meal. The child looked at the wagon in a puzzled way. Then he turned his head and asked:

"Mamma, is that what they mean by a la carte?"—Boston Traveler.

A Sensitive Soul.

The good wife of an estimable Frenchman was awakened by her husband's weeping and howling in the middle of the night. He was evidently having a dream, and she woke him and asked what was the matter.

"Oh, my dear," he said, rubbing his eyes, "I dreamed that you were dead."

"Ha!" she said bitterly and turned away from him. "Great griefs are mute."

Appropriate.

"What kind of binding will you have?" asked the bookbinder of a customer who wanted new covers put on his dictionary.

"I think spellbinding would be very appropriate," was the reply.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Our Great Land.

We excel other countries in the very thing for which they are noted. Italy, old as she is, can boast of but one Rome, while the United States has fifteen. Greece can show on her map but one Athens, while we have nineteen.—New York Post.

Raising Things.

Even the amateur farmer can raise good crops with fertile ground, but it isn't a marker to what you can do with a fertile imagination.—Kansas City Journal.

The Blanket Situation Today

"If our customers knew as much as I do about the woolen situation, there would not be a blanket left of all our special purchase," said the blanket chief yesterday.

"Let's tell them," we said. "What are the facts?"

And this is what the man whose business it is to know all about wools and blankets in America and Europe told us.

FIRST—Foreign countries have bought in the American market all they could get.

SECOND—Foreign countries have placed an embargo upon exportation of wool.

THIRD—There has been an advance in some grades of wool as much as 33⅓ per cent.

FOURTH—We know of instances where blankets have been advanced 10 per cent. in one day.

In the face of this rising market we are selling the blankets specially purchased last Autumn at no increase in rates—but still sell as we buy.

These Blankets are 20 to 33⅓ Per Cent. Less Than Our Own Odd Standard Rates

Fresh shipments from the invoice will be on sale for the first time in the Blanket Store on Monday.

English blankets of wool even to the binding, double bed size, our standard $14 grade, for $9 pair.

Wanamaker special blankets, 76 x 84 inches, cotton and wool, taffeta bound, pink or blue border, $5 pair.

90 per cent. wool blankets, bound singly with taffeta, luxurious to the touch, our standard $12 grade, for $8 pair.

Blankets, with wool filling, cotton warp, separately bound, single bed size, $9; double bed size, $10.50 pair.

Cotton blankets—about five hundred pairs, in white and gray, our standard $1.85 to $2.50 qualities for $1.35 and $1.85.

Wool-filled and all-wool blankets, $3.15, $4.75, $5, $6.50 and up to $20. They are our standard $3.75 to $27 grades.

Blankets soiled or mussed through handling, formerly $2.85 to $20 pair, now $2 to $13.

Special Purchase of Comforters

By closing out lots from various mills we have secured exceptionally attractive quilts to offer at the lowest in our history.

$6, wool-filled quilts with charming mull covers such as are usually put on $7.50 quilts; border and lining of Florentine silk and cotton material in pink, blue, lavender, yellow, green and old rose.

Embroidered Spreads and Down Quilts

Embroidered colored spreads, English and French, which were $7.50 to $75, now $3.75 to $37.50.

Down quilts, most of them handmade, originally $125 to $400, now $62.50 to $200.

"In many places the enemy succeeded in occupying provisionally certain of our advanced trenches, but our vigorous counter attacks, followed ordinarily by bayonet charges, compelled them to let go their hold.

"Thus in the region of Metairie and Moghely on January 7 we drove away the enemy who rushed our advanced trenches, capturing seven officers and more than 100 men.

"In Bukowina we captured on January 6 Kimpolung (in Bukowina near the Hungarian border), after an advance and fighting, lasting eight days. Our troops during this fighting covered more than 120 versts (about eighty miles), and finally crossed the mountain chain at the frontier between Bukowina and Hungary. During these operations we captured more than 1,000 Austrians and also took rich spoils of war."

MISSION BAND MEETS.

The Young Woman's Mision Band of Trinity Reformed church, met at the home of Miss Lillian A. Force, on Duer street, the borough, yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Leonard Smith conducted the devotional exercises and Mrs. A. B. Cole, president, was in charge of the business session. The program committee directed the study of the book, "In Red Man's Land," which was started yesterday. Arrangements were made to hold an all-day sewing meeting in two weeks at the home of Mrs. Corra Ryno, on Coddington avenue.

STOP—LOOK—LISTEN.

This is the open season for tax assessors and nearly everybody is gunning for them. While this species of game is usually hunted in all seriousness, yet the chase has also its humorous aspect. To those who regularly attend the processes through which tax budgets go in the making—and attend also the appeals heard by the Board of Appeals—it soon becomes apparent that budgets increase chiefly because citizens constantly urge or demand in the spring appropriations for improvements and expenditures which we could live without, and in the Fall when the resultant bills fall due, they are prone to find fault with anyone except themselves. This illustrates a trait in human nature which doubtless existed when Adam was a boy.

The public is in favor of improvements. It demands improvements through every civic organization, many of which are formed with that avowed purpose; "IMPROVEMENTS" is its middle name. When in the springtime a citizen is seen in earnest conversation with a councilman, it is dollars to doughnuts that the citizen is advocating some improvement which will cost money if made. In almost every municipality in this great country this same condition exists. We are notoriously an extravagant people and rather proud of it if the truth be told. The best in the house is none too good for us. Other towns have fine improvements, brilliantly lighted streets, up-to-date fire fighting apparatus, efficient police forces, handsome schoolhouses, thorough going boards of health, fine free libraries, ample playgrounds, popular recreation centers, painstaking dental clinics, anti-tuberculosis leagues and every other expensive adjunct which modern society has devised. The finance committee sits night after night in the springtime listening to the urging voices of representatives of various organizations, working in the several fields of our civic endeavor, sometimes pleading and sometimes demanding, but all with one accord insisting upon increased appropriations—and every one for a most worthy object.

We hear in the spring how much more other towns are doing along these lines, and that if we do not keep up with the procession, we will cease to attract population. Many of these demands are sadly refused; others are granted in part: seldom one is allowed all that is asked. Yet in the fall we hear that unless the taxes are reduced, people will leave town and property will be worthless.

The finance committee is always in a position similar to that in which Daniel found himself when he was forbidden to pray under penalty of being cast into the den of lions. They are mere servants of the public which in the spring demands that its own money be spent in certain directions, and in the fall is inclined to repudiate the order. No well informed person seems inclined to assert that Plainfield does not get as much for its money as other towns get for theirs. There seems to be less waste in Plainfield than is the average in municipal expenditures. All authorities seem to agree that no municipal corporation can be operated as economically as a well managed private corporation. There is always bound to be some waste, but in Plainfield it is smaller in percentage than in most cities of its size.

The point of all this is that in the last analysis, the public, and not the assessor, is responsible for the tax bill. And the public is purely and simply a collection of individuals. Public sentiment is the composite voice of these individuals, and what public sentiment demands, it receives. If each individual member of this community will stop to consider before advocating any improvement or expenditure which must be met out of the public treasury, whether or not he is willing to have his tax bill increased, he will usually restrain his first impulse.

The real question is not whether we want it, but whether we can afford it. Let us remember always that if we will dance, we must pay the piper, and remember also that few dances will be held in Plainfield unless public sentiment favors dancing.

Some of the results of our present style of municipal life are made startlingly apparent by the following comparison of assessed valuations, expenditures and debt of the year 1906 with the same items for the year 1913. The reason for beginning with 1906 was the fact that during that year assessed valuations were practically doubled to meet the requirement of a then recent enactment of the Legislature requiring reduction in tax rates. 1913 is the last year used in this illustration because the figures given were compiled early in 1914. The figures relate to Plainfield, and are approximately correct, if not absolutely so. They show that while our property increased about seven millions in seven years, or 33 1-3 per cent. our annual cash outlay increased 82 per cent. and our debt 163 per cent. How often that process can be repeated before the edifice topples over, is a question which deserves earnest consideration.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

In his annual address Mayor Calkins, of Plainfield, emphasizes the importance and economy of a city owned city hall. The need for such an institution, is, no doubt, more acute in Plainfield than in Westfield, because the need of that city is much greater than ours and they have nothing to compare with the accommodations which our present town hall affords us. However, there soon will come a time when this matter should be considered, not only as a matter of economy, but as efficiency in the administration and conduct of the business of our towns.—Westfield Standard.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

"TAKE THAT ROUGH STUFF OUTSIDE"

Trade In Plainfield and Grow With Us

The growth of a city depends largely on the amount of money spent within its borders. Are YOU buying in Plainfield? Are YOU selecting our own men to do your work instead of outsiders? Are YOU helping Plainfield to grow? Ask yourself this question. Are you?

Plainfield is one of the prettiest cities in New Jersey. She can point with pride to her magnificent High School, excellent graded schools, elegant homes and beautiful streets. What have you done? If you take Plainfield money and spend it in other cities, are you helping Plainfield to grow? Spend your money home where you and your children are enjoying the splendor of our city. Do YOUR part for a better and bigger Plainfield.

Interesting to Men--But to Women

The question of cultivation of good taste in a home means the purchase of whatever improves the appearance, comfort and welfare of every one connected with it. The woman is the purchasing agent of the American home; keenly interested in high grade merchandise and table goodies; the kind presented by Plainfield merchants, backed by prompt courteous attention, a stock of large variety to select from, and prices that are no higher than the stores of other cities.

Trading in Plainfield is the easiest, safest, and most profitable, and when you purchase an article that is not entirely satisfactory you experience no difficulty in having it exchanged or your money refunded. On the other hand, can an article purchased in stores in these other cities afford you the same protection as our Plainfield merchants? Sometimes an article can be exchanged, but then it is necessary to have it travel 20 or 25 miles back to the store where you purchased it, and the second selection forwarded to you, and if you wern't fortunate enough to make a second selection on the day you did your shopping you are either obliged to make it from a catalog or take another trip yourself to straighten the matter out. Do your shopping in your home town and avoid any unnecessary risks or delays. Help your city to grow.

HIDDEN STORIES IN CONSCIENCE FUND

Some Penitent Letters Contain Startling Revelations.

VERY FEW DISCLOSE ALL.

Vast Majority Omit Details Which Might Lead to Identification of Writer—Sender of $200 Stole $35 Fifty-six Years Ago and Has a Repentance on Death Bed.

It has often been said that skillful writers could find plots for remarkable stories in letters which reach the post-office department at Washington containing money in restitution of ill gotten gains. Some of the letters written by men and women who wax confidential in their penitent mood contain startling revelations, though the vast majority omit with care any details which might lead to the identification of the writers. Some very few in the depths of contrition disclose all.

Very recently a letter much out of the ordinary was received by Postmaster General Burleson. The transmission of this letter, for one thing, bears striking testimony to the safety of the mails. It contained two $100 bills, and, in accordance with the request in the letter, the identical two banknotes were, in turn, forwarded by the postmaster general in a registered envelope of the department to the Christian Herald at New York. The original letter could scarcely have been registered, however, as that act would have enabled the postoffice to trace the sender. So these two bills of large denomination passed twice through the mails in safety. But this is not the most interesting part of the incident.

Silent Fifty-six Years.

As will be seen from the letter printed below, the sender, or some one he represented, as far back as 1858 abstracted from the mails a letter containing $35. It is fair to assume that he was at that time at least twenty years of age, so that when remorse overtook him on his dying bed, he was about seventy-six. For these fifty-six years the man, or possibly a woman, has doubtless more than once been torn by imaginations concerning the necessities of the person for whom that $35 was intended, and the possible consequence of the theft to more perhaps than one person. Why the restitution was not made earlier is a matter of interesting speculation. Why it was made at all is just as interesting. Was it through fear of facing the consequence at the bar of God? Was it solely because the man had no further need of the money, now that he was about to die?

A cold blooded reporter has figured out that the repayment of this money with interest compounded at 6 per cent is short about $600. But was the wrongdoer obliged to repay at compound interest? Is that the financial system adopted by that reporter in liquidating his debts? Interest figured straight at 6 per cent gives approximately $150, principal and interest, due to some one for that original theft; so the repentant thief added $50 for good measure.

Some day somebody is going to write the story of the conscience fund at Washington. It will be an interesting story and probably will be convincing evidence of the value of such an institution. How did it originate? Who was the first to try in this manner to square up an illegal debt? In the present instance the offender shows a nature refined by suffering and enlightened by Christian education, inasmuch as he indicates that if the original loser cannot possibly be traced the money which he sends to the government in restitution of his theft shall go to the Christian Herald fund for the relief of the widows and orphans of the war in Europe.

Copy of the Letter.

An exact copy of the postmaster's letter follows:

Office of the Postmaster General,
Washington, Nov. 25, 1914.

The Christian Herald, New York City:

Gentlemen — The following anonymous communication was received in the department under date of Nov. 23 in an envelope postmarked at St. Paul, Nov. 20 1914, 3 p. m.:

"Postmaster General—Some time in the years 1858 to 1861, inclusive, there was a reg. letter lost in the mail in Minnesota containing $35 in currency. The person who took it, being near his end, desires, if possible, to make restitution and wishes me to send you the inclosed $200 to be paid to him or his heirs, if they can be found, for principal and int. The letter was directed to some foreigner, presumably Ger. or Norg., in the then N. W. Min.—that is, N. and W. of Saint Paul. If in the records of your office such a person can be found who lost such a sum at that time please pay the money over to him or them. If no trace can be found of him in a reasonable time it is his wish that the money be turned over to the Christian Herald fund for the relief of the widows and orphans of the war in Europe."

Inasmuch as there are no records in the department covering the loss of mail during the period mentioned and the name of the party suffering this loss cannot therefore be ascertained, I am forwarding the amount to you as requested by the writer of the letter for credit to your fund for the relief of the widows and orphans of the war in Europe.

It is requested that you kindly acknowledge receipt of the inclosed $200, which consists of two $100 bills (gold certificate No. D93088, check letter D, department series, and national bank note No. A346283, check letter A, series of 1902, serial No. P8504. Yours very truly,

A. S. BURLESON, Postmaster General.

Summary of Specifications

MOTOR—Four cylinders, cast en bloc; long stroke; bore 3¾ inches, stroke 5½ inches. Intake and exhaust valves extra large, which permits an easy flow of gases. Working parts of the motor thoroughly enclosed from dirt and dust.

CARBURETOR—Zenith, horizontal type, bolted on opposite side from valves. Water jacket entire length of manifold, cast inside of cylinder, thus thoroughly vaporizes gasoline before it reaches cylinders. Hot air for cold weather starting supplied through passage way connected on one side of the carburetor and on the other to a hot air collector, attached to the exhaust pipe. Air adjustment on steering wheel.

IGNITION—Storage battery type. Timer set on left hand side of engine in a vertical position. All its parts are very accessible.

COOLING—Thermo-syphon. New cellular type of radiator. All heated surfaces of cylinder [illegible] large water jacket capacity. Water inlet and return pipes extra large.

OILING—Positive forced feed, circulating into all working parts of the engine. Transmission case and rear axle run in heavy grease or special oil.

CHASSIS—Frame, extra quality pressed steel, strongest and most durable. 3-16-inch high, hot-riveted.

WHEELS—Artillery type, 34 inches. Each with twelve 1½-inch spokes.

WHEEL BASE—119-inch. Standard of Southern Tread.

SPRINGS—Front, semi-elliptic. Rear, semi-elliptic, slung under axle. Special oiling cups for spring lubrication. Extra long and heavy.

BRAKES—Two sets, acting on rear wheel drums. Service brakes, contracting and pedal operating; emergency brakes, expanding and hand operating, both sets faced with high quality brake lining. Braking service extra large, 14x2 inches.

TRANSMISSION—Selective sliding type. Three speeds forward and reverse. Transmission separate from engine, being bolted directly to the crank case to form a unit power plant. All gears are easily accessible, which means much less labor if inspection is necessary.

CLUTCH—Multiple disc, with the friction on the clutch thrust taken by a bearing in the transmission, so that when clutch is released the motor runs entirely free. This is a new practice in automobiles. Thirteen hardened and ground saw steel discs.

[illegible]-passenger Touring and two-passenger Roadster, made from pressed steel, upholstered in high grade imitation leather.

FUEL FEED—Gasoline tank, 16 gallons; with one-gallon reserve tank. Oil supply, 1¾ gallons. Water supply, 5 gallons.

COLOR—Standard Blue-black, with maroon running gear.

REGULAR EQUIPMENT — Westinghouse Electric Starting and Lighting System, 12-volt storage battery, headlight dimmers; license brackets; locking device; rain-vision, ventilating windshield; one-man silk mohair top with form-fitting envelope; quick-adjustable side curtains; Khaki top $5.00 extra; speedometer; robe rail, foot rail and cocoa mat in tonneau; over-size tires, 34x4 in., non-skid on rear; demountable rims; one extra rim and tire carrier. Color: Blue-black with maroon running gear. Weight fully equipped, 2650 lbs.

To the Professional Man

—the business man and woman whose duties call them in the open just as persistently in winter as in summer—those who for years have felt the need of an easy riding, economical closed car—for you the new Coupe top illustrated above is especially designed.

The new Hupmobile roadster—with its power, simplicity and economy—is noted for its beautiful lines.

It has many exculsive Hupmobile conveniences—such as a special arrangement for carrying extra tires under the rear deck, and a compartment inside the car large enough to take two or three suit cases.

The 119-inch wheelbase—with the special semi-elliptical springs, front and rear—makes its easy riding a constant delight. Added to this is the Hupmobile self-starter and non-stallable motor.

IN THE SPORTING SPOTLIGHT

WOULD COBB FREEZE WITHOUT SPOTLIGHT?

"Georgia Peach's" Statement That He Will Retire is Doubted.

Thousands of persons religiously hold the belief that if the bright spotlight of publicity were denied him, Ty Cobb would freeze to death. They see in Tyrus a vain, boastful, elephantine-headed egotist. They're all wrong, absolutely misinformed.

On the field Ty is first a gentleman, affable and retiring. He's not the bellicose, blatant butcher-beater that he has been pictured. On the contrary, he's what Robert Burns would call a "discontented ghost—perturbed spirit." Ty has a grievance.

Cobb was located at his hotel after a particularly brilliant performance on the ball field one evening, with the hope of ascertaining how much money the "greatest player in baseball" had appropriated from the Elysian fields of frenzied baseball finance. The subject does not appeal to Ty, who, however, was anything but loath to be interviewed.

"I have saved my money and I have invested it well," said Tyrus, "and besides I have been well paid; but I will tell you a secret: My mind is set on quitting baseball in four more years, no matter what my services on the diamond may command at the time. I am twenty-seven years old and physically fortified, I believe, to go on as long as Wallace or Lajoie. But I have set 1918 as the absolute limit of further participation in baseball.

"I haven't been treated any too well. I have been successful, it is true, but my feelings often have been wounded by undesirable notoriety. I'll explain:

"I have been pictured a 'tough fighter,' a user of 'cold steel,' so often that loads of people with whom I'm not personally acquainted, regard me almost as a barroom gladiator. That's putting it rather strong, but it's my aggravated view of a serious matter."

TEN STRIKES, SCORE 198.

A bowler by the name of Wondra, out in St. Paul, has achieved the freakiest score ever recorded in ten pin annals. This bowler made ten strikes, and yet his total score was only 198. When it is considered that twelve consecutive strikes yield a perfect score, 300, it is difficult to imagine how two strikes less should make a difference of 102 pins. Wondra started with three straight strikes. In his fourth frame he made one pin with his first ball and three with his second, giving him a count of sixty-nine in the fourth frame. Then he had three more strikes, breaking in the eighth frame, in which he obtained one pin with his first ball and three with his second. He struck out from the ninth frame. Another peculiarity of Wondra's game is that he made one or more pins with every ball he rolled. The largest score that can be made with ten strikes is 289.

HARD GAME FOR Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will play its first Saturday out-of-town game tonight, when it will meet the heavyweight team of the Washington Heights Y. M. C. A., on the latter's court. Captain Al Brynarski will not accompany the team and Joe Gavett will fill his position. The players will leave on the 6:18 train from North avenue. Those that will go are Joe Gavett, Myrton Glover, Harry Moulton, Bill Taylor, Addison Newkirk, Jack Ricketts, Ashley Burner and Frank Dunning.

HOPE'S WEEKLY GAME.

The regular Saturday night attraction at the Hope chapel gym will be held tonight, when the Milltown M. E. church team will be the local's opponents. There will probably be a preliminary game.

BURMAN, AUTO PILOT, HAS TRAVELED FASTER THAN ANY OTHER HUMAN BEING Bob Burman.

Bob Burman is the world's fastest motor driver, the "Speed King" of them all, because he has confidence in himself to drive his great auto racer at top speed.

At Ormond-Daytona Beach, Fla., April 23, 1911, Burman traveled faster than any human being who ever lived. He drove the 300-horse power German racer, the car with the most powerful motor ever built, at the rate of 141.87 miles an hour. His record for the mile is 25.40 seconds. Burman traveled two miles in 51.82 seconds and drove the kilometer in 15.88 seconds.

It was Burman's ambition to break Barney Oldfield's record and to do it he had to throw the auto wide open. The great speed performance was not the work of a day. Many weeks were spent in preparation for the crowning achievement of the speed king's career.

Made Re cord on Birthday.

The meteoric drive occurred on Burman's twenty-seventh birthday. He believes that fate had much to do with the weird flash through space faster than a man would travel, falling 1,000 feet through the air. That's why he had nerve which he calls mere confidence in his own ability as a driver and the mechanical combination of the German speed creation.

A horoscopic expert read Burman's horoscope. He told the driver that his twenty-seventh birthday was to be the greatest day of his life. This was forgotten.

For two months Burman waited for the tides to put the beach course in condition. There is but one time each year when the tides wash the beach smooth and when the tide is out, the course is the best. Always after a severe storm, the Ormond-Daytona beach is excellent for speed purposes.

Freak Storm Fixes Beach.

A freak storm put the beach in excellent condition. Preparations were completed. The A. A. A. sanction was secured. The A. A. A. officials were wired for.

On April 21 there was a sixty-mile an-hour wind blowing down the beach and with that behind him Burman was certain of a fast performance. The officials did not arrive. On the following day, when the official timers and judges arrived, Burman tried to break the record and failed utterly.

That night the idea of a strange, inhuman face seemed to flash through the minds of Burman, E. A. Moross, his manager, and Billy Wellman, his traveling companion. It was the night before his twenty-seventh birthday.

Before going to sleep Burman remembered that the horoscopic expert wired to his mother to find out the hour of the day at which he was born. Then he went to sleep confident.

The next day he seemed unnatural. His manager talked to him and he seemed to be thinking of other things than the great record breaking performance.

Timing Device Installed.

The electric timing device was installed with wires across the course at every mile. Fred J. Wagner was the starter.

The driver had constructed a special brace to hold his head against the wind. The vibration wore into his brain. He then made a wild looking face mask and lowered his seat until only his eyes appeared above the coat, and he held his head forward and down to break the wind.

The first mile was to get up speed. The second and third were timed, and it took almost two miles to stop the car. When he passed the finish there were hundreds of spectators cheering him. Burman saw nothing. Everything was a blur from the end of the first half mile. It was only drive and fly through space.

Once he put out his hand to grasp the brake. The wind carried it back. Then he thought of what a brake would do to that speed.

Finally he shut off and the wind held the car back like ten brakes. He was then almost a mile beyond the finish line.

Gradually the car slowed down until the driver could see the water, then stopped. It was easy, he said. Never once did he feel fear or give a thought to what might happen. He was a speed demon.

That night he received a wire from the Kaiser congratulating him on the great record of the German monster, and he knew that that was his great day.

CAN YOU ENGRAVE A GOOSE?

If you know how to engrave a goose please communicate with the Boston A. A. Gun Club. Ten members of the club, in good amateur standing, recently took part in a shoot and each won a goose. Now it seems that the A. A. U. is after them because the rules say no amateur shall take a prize on which the name of the winner cannot be engraved. One of the shooters presents the defense that he engraved his prize with his teeth on New Year's Day, but it is feared the A. A. U. won't let him get away with the plea with as much success as he got away with the goose.

HERZOG AFTER DOOIN.

Charley Herzog, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, was in New York, yesterday, trying to land a few ball players who might be able to keep Redville on the baseball map next season. Herzog had a long talk with President W. F. Baker, of the Phillies, in relation to engaging Charles Dooin, the former Philadelphia manager and catcher. President Baker stated last night, that the deal was possible, although the two parties came to no definte agreement yesterday. President Baker will meet Herzog in Philadelphia again next Monday.

There was sensational bowling in an Elks' League match last night on the Elks' alleys, in Newark, the Jersey City five succeeding in capturing two games out of three from the Newarkers. The fireworks were on exhibition right from the start. In the first game both sides went at the pins in earnest and the ten frames saw them tied at 1,014. An extra frame was rolled and the visitors accounted for 105 and Newark 101. The Jersey City pin-knights went all the way back to 858 in the second game and the locals evened up matters by taking the second game with a total of 975. In the third and deciding contest the Jersey City bowlers went back to the total of 1,014 that they recorded in the first game, and the Newarkers, in the windup, with 931, lost by eighty-three pins.

Connie Leick did some fine pinning for the Newarks, with counts of 237 and 210. He averaged 215 for the match. Billy Weingarth tallied 218 and 203, Dick Erler had 222 and Howard Williams rolled 213. Murphy was in fine form for the visitors, tallying 233 and 214 and averaging 202 for the series. Corydon, however, was the real star, having counts of 263, 226 and 222, which earned for him an average of 237. Wright was there for 225 and Mahlenbrock had 207.

LOCAL BOYS SIGNED BY JOHNNY GANZEL

Rochester Hustlers Get Eddie and Bill Conshay, Local Sand-lot Products.

Eddie and Billy Conshay, two of Plainfield's best known amateur ball tossers, are to get a tryout with John Ganzel's Rochester International Leaguers this spring. Eddie is a pitcher, while Bill plays the outfield. The addition of the local talent to the Hustler club reminds us that Jack Martin, now cherishing the honor of being the only Union county boy in the big leagues, started his career with that club. It is not known whether or not Jack was instrumental in drawing Ganzel's attention to the localites.

During the past summer Bill Conshay played with the New Brunswick Factory League and was one of the best stickers on the circuit. Eddie twirled for the Bronx Athletics and the Suburbans, of Brooklyn, during the past year. The latter brother has made a fine mark for himself on Plainfield diamond circles, having performed in a notable fashion for the Plainfield Baseball Club on a number of occasions and with the Scotch Plains ball nine during its regime.

LOCAL EAGLES TO PLAY.

Plainfield Eagle pinners will play off a postponed match of the league with the Elizabeth birds at that place Monday night. The match was originally booked for last Tuesday night, but was put off by the local team.

GIANTS ALL SIGNED.

Every member of the New York Giants is now signed, Larry McLean, the big catcher, being the last man to sign yesterday.

COYNE HEADS THE INDIVIDUAL RACE

Coyne replaces Harry Taylor in the individual average race in the Elks' Senior Bowling League this week. Many shifts have been credited to players on all of the teams. Corydon turned the most notable event of the week when he averaged 237 in a series last night.

The records follow:

WATERLOO FOR RAHWAY.

Showing a great reversal of form in the second half, the Montclair High School basketball team came through with a victory against the Rahway High School boys, on the Montclair court, yesterday afternoon. The score was 35 to 29. At the end of the first period of play the Rahway lads were in the lead by five points, the taily reading 18 to 13. In the second half the Mountainside lads suddenly came to life and soon took the lead.

HOCKEY MATCH.

The Queen City hockey team will meet the Westfield seven on Lambert's pond, Westfield, tomorrow afternoon, provided the ice remains good. The Plainfield team has taken one verdict from the Mt. Ararat skaters and expects another victory. The same players that played a tie game with Fanwood last week will represent the local club.

PLAINS PUGILIST IN ACTION.

Young Baker, pride of pugilistic circles in the vicinity of Scotch Plains, where he receives his mail, is in hard training for a fight with Kid Reilly, of New York. The bout will take place on January 30 at Hartford, Conn. Baker is a lightweight, tipping the scales at 133. He has appeared several times in Newark.

VICTORY IN POINTS ONLY FOR N. P. H. S.

Westfielders Played Rings Around Boro Five Last Night.

With Saengerbund Hall nearly filled and in the midst of wild excitement and cheering the North Plainfield High School basketball team gained a well-earned victory, last night, over the Westfield High School quintet by going them one better in the scoring line. The final score was 28 to 27. The teamwork and passing of the borough boys was great throughout the entire contest, but in the final period they could not seem to locate the basket, which enabled their opponents to outscore them by four points during the half.

Abrams played a fine game at guard and more than once succeeded in taking the ball down the floor from his opponents' goal, to result in a basket for the home team. Townley also played a good game at passing, but showed up exceptionally well in shooting, by making seven field goals and two fouls.

Ewing and Davis played the best game for the Westfield team, the former making five baskets and two fouls, and the latter making three baskets. Davis showed up well in the guard position.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.—Adv.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and further more, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jads Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

SOMETHING'S GOING TO BREAK AT CLUB MEETING

Manager "Doc" Doyle, of the Holy Cross football club, has called a meeting of the organization for tonight to be held in his studio on West Front street. It is urgently requested that all members of the organization be present inasmuch as business of importance will be brought up for disposition. It is rumored that certain individuals have "something up their sleeves" which is due to wriggle out at tonight's meeting and hence the active interest in the session.

It is a well known fact that the past season was far from being a satisfactory one financially and the presentation of the treasurer's report is one of the features that will occupy part of the meeting tonight. Phases of the work under consideration for a gridiron boom here next year will also be brought up at that time. Some "annual" resignations are also due.

IMPORTANT MEETING FOR THE LOCAL KENNEL CLUB

Secretary F. N. Anderson, of the Plainfield Kennel Club, has called a meeting of the organization to take place in the Queen City Hotel, Thursday night. At the annual meeting of the club held Tuesday night plans were discussed for the two shows to be given during the coming year.

Among other things to be considered at the session next week is a match show, plans for which are now under consideration. As the meeting will be an important one all members are urgently requested to be on hand.

JENNINGS AS A PLAYER.

As a Run Getter Hughey's Record Excels Cobb's.

George Moreland, the baseball dope expert, has made the discovery that Hughey Jennings was a better man on the bases in his day than Ty Cobb has ever proved. Cobb, who generally is considered the greatest player the game has ever produced, fell far behind the record Jennings made in those days when he was the country's leading shortstop.

Cobb, for instance, holds the run getting record with 147 in 146 games. Compare these figures with those of Jennings, who scored 159 runs in 131 games during the season of 1895.

For five consecutive years Jennings was able to score on an average of exactly 136 runs each season. Cobb has scored 100 or more but four times, an average of exactly 122 per season.

Besides Jennings' play at short he did his share, along with the wonderful bunch of players, to make the old Baltimore team the greatest aggregation of ball players ever put together, and this in all respect to the Bostons, the Cubs, Detroits, Athletics, Giants and Pirates.

Not one of them today could have taken four straight from that team, and it is more than likely that they would not even have captured the championship from it.

Plainfield Construction-Realty News

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIELD

BUILDING OUTLOOK FOR 1915 BRIGHT

Federal Postoffice and Other Structures Planned for Erection This Year.

CRAFTSMEN HOPEFUL

New Y. M. C. A. and a Modern Edifice for Netherwood Reformed Church and an Addition to Hope Chapel Among the Possibilities.

What will the year of 1915 bring to Plainfield in the building and construction lines? That Plainfield has enjoyed a fairly good season in the year that has just passed is generally conceded, and a look into the futufe is timely at this season.

Among the features looked forward to in the present year is the erection of the Federal postoffice building on the Watchung avenue site. Bids on the contracts for this building will no doubt be advertised for shortly by the Government. The construction of this building will ultimately be instrumental in the erection of a number of other business buildings in the immediate vicinity. The event of this new building will mean much to the development of the eastern end of the business section of the city.

Other public and semi-public building possibilities for 1915 is a new Y. M. C. A. structure at Sycamore street and East Fifth street, a new edifice for the Netherwood Reformed church on Leland avenue and another addition to Hope chapel on West Fourth street. These buildings, if realized during the present year, would mean the expenditure of an amount considerably above $100,000.

The industries of the city are likely to contribute to the construction activities of the year, as it is highly probable that the Bosch Magneto Company will start operations on further buildings to their plant during 1915. This concern bought a large frontage on South avenue and East Sixth street last spring and summer shortly after obtaining the Rushmore Dynamo Works. Like the new postoffice, further buildings for the manufacturing concern should be instrumental in starting other operations, especially in dwellings.

Last spring the Seventh-Day Baptist church considered the advisability of making extensive improvements to their edifice to care for institutional work, but the matter was laid over. It is uncertain at the present time as to whether the improvement will materialize this year, but there appears to be a strong possibility that it will.

A three-story factory to be utilized for the manufacture of footeast powder by the Allen Pharmacal Company at Church and East Second streets is expected during the coming season, and would mean much to the construction work of the year.

Further floor space for the Vitaphone Company, of North avenue, is probable during the course of the summer months, as the business of the company has been on the increase for some time. The Tygard Engine Company, of South avenue, it is understood, anticipates the erection of a plant during the current year in the East End, and would, in conjunction with the erection of further shops for the Bosch Company, mean a great deal in the development of the various residential sections in the Netherwood vicinity.

A city hall, as suggested by Mayor Leighton Calkins, the need of an additional fire-house in the near future in the southeastern section of the city, as indicated in the report of Fire Inspector T. O. Doane in his annual report made public last week, both loom up as possibilities, although nothing definite is expected on these matters before late next fall. Along with these operations during the construction season of 1915 comes the usual number of business buildings, apartment houses, dwellings, garages and various other structures which come to the city in the natural course of events. Considering that Plainfield had seventy-five new dwellings last year, during an off season, it is reasonable to expect that a larger number will be erected during the course of the next twelve months.

The tightness of the money market is recognized as the cause back of the slump in building operations during the past year, and with the outlook in this direction brighter at the present time than it has been for several months, local contractors and craftsmen are justified in looking forward to the coming season as one of the busiest this city has known for a number of years. The possibility of a foot and vehicle bridge over Newark Bay, and a trolley extension to South Plainfield would undoubtedly mean much to help local construction conditions.

The realty field is also due to experience the upward movement in this city, in fact improvement during the past two months has already been noticed by several local realty agents. That Plainfield still attracts the prospective home site-seeker is by no means an uncertainty, and this city should more than hold its own this year.

INSPECTOR DOANE ISSUES TWO PERMITS THIS WEEK

Two building permits, for the construction of a store in the First ward, and the other for alterations in the Third ward, calling for the expenditure of $2,400, were issued during the first week of the new year by Inspector T. O. Doane.

The store for which a permit was issued is to be erected at 1462 McCrea place by Frank Sheriffo, at a cost of $400. The structure, which is to be of hollow terra cotta block, will have a frontage of sixteen feet, with a depth of twenty-eight feet.

The permit for alterations to the one story store at 953 West Fourth street, corner of Prescott place, was issued to Mrs. Catherine E. Bartellone, and provides for the adding of one and a half story to the building, the upper floors to be used for living apartments. The improvements will have a frontage of twenty-five feet, and a depth of forty-two feet, and will be of frame construction. The estimated cost is $2,000. W. H. Clum is the architect of the improvements. The mason contract has been awarded to Alfonso Cioci, while Samuel M. Titus, of Dunellen, has been awarded the contract for the carpenter work.

JUST NOTES

The present year starts it building career under favorable conditions from a local viewpoint. This city has before it close to $400,000 worth of buildings and various improvements laid over from last year because of the money market. With prospects bright for the easing of that phase of the question, early spring should witness an unprecedented building and construction boom in this city.

The sale of twelve plots in Sherman Park, just over the line in Piscataway township, by the Little Farms Company, to Joseph Brandt and Jacob Voehl, indicates that another season will see a number of modern dwellings reared in the near future.

Further operations are anticipated at South Plainfield during the coming season, and reasons for the proposed trolley line to the village increases every day.

It is now time to prepare for an early clean-and-paint-up in this city.

A few citizens are of the opinion that Plainfield ought not to cater to new manufacturing industries for the city, but the question as what other use may be made of vacant plots along the railroad is still a live issue here. Certainly these lots are not ideal for home sites.

Several suggestions as to where to locate a City Hall have been made since the message of Mayor Calkins to the Common Council, but most of these have been given up for various reasons. The West Second street firehouse was considered last year when Councilman Claybrook broached the subject to the city fathers, but the matter at that time was dropped because of the other necessary expenses of the city which had to be cared for first. The cost for the altering of various buildings for City Hall purposes would, undoubtedly be great, and the plans would probably prove unsatisfactory in the course of a few years. The present city building and the Powlison & Jones building on East Front street, are possibly the best buildings for the purpose should the question finally come down to re-arrangement of present buildings, although an entirely new building, built especially to care for the needs of the city for some years to come would be the best investment in the long run, it is believed.

With the awarding of the contracts for the new Evergreen Avenue School during the course of the past week by the Board of Education, a little open weather is to be hoped for, that a number of men might be put to work. It is expected that the local Building Trades Council will look forward to the enforcement of the State laws calling for the employment of a large percentage of local men. This will have a tendency to relieve the local labor situaton to some degree.

DUNELLEN LOOKS FOR ACTIVE SEASON

Prospects for Building Are Unusually Bright in the Boro.

Prospects for an active building season at Dunellen during the current year are bright, while real estate agents and contractors of Plainfield's hustling suburb are quite optimistic regarding the outlook at that borough at the present time. The past season of 1914 was a most successful one for Dunellen, with realty deals keeping apace with the erection of a large number of dwellings at that place.

John Fedderman, a Dunellen real estate operator, and for several years treasurer of the Dunellen Board of Trade, in an interview with a Daily Press reporter during the past week, said he saw no reason why building and real estate in the town should not move along at an even pace during the twelve months to come.

He said: "The real estate market in Dunellen is suggestive of boom conditions at first glance, in that it is very active. Realty developments are going forward at a rate which appears normal. Unlike booms of a forced spasmodic nature, however, the local expansion is steady, each year eclipsing its predecessor. This growth is brought about by natural advantages and conditions, and is not the outcome or product of land booming methods.

"The past season," he continued, "has been most successful and the outlook for the next year is bright to say the least. The past season has seen the erection of about forty new dwellings, all of a high class villa type, which found ready buyers. Considering that Dunellen has a population of 2,500, the progress which these figures represent will appeal to the investor. Most of the new buildings have been erected on restricted property, thus insuring a certain uniformity in regards to excellence of the homes that have been constructed. There still remains much property which should appeal to the most critical of investors."

SEWERS IN BORO TO BOOM REALTY

Improvement, It is Believed, Will Be Followed by Considerable Building.

With the probabilities of the joint sewer and collecting system soon to be a realized fact in the borough, many of the citizens of that place, as well as contractors, believe that North Plainfield will, in the course of the next three or four years, see a great development in building and construction work, as well as extensive realty operations. The writer, in interviewing a number of North Plainfield citizens, finds that there is much optimism regarding the future of the borough across Green brook in the near future.

Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., in speaking to a Daily Press representative a short time ago said, "I do not look for any great revival of building operations during 1915, except the normal expansion brought about by the return of prosperity. However, at the completion of the joint sewer system, which will take about twenty months to complete after it is first started, building operations will go forward to an extent at present undreamed of. The final consolidation of city and borough during the course of that time would, undoubtedly, mean further development in both building operations and realty lines."

The opinions regarding the outlook, as held by Mayor Clark, are those of a number of other residents of the borough, although they are far from being pessimistic regarding the present season, and they look to North Plainfield to make a far better showing in 1915 than in the year that has just closed. It is not to be denied that the borough has many tracts of land suitable for development as home sites, and should appeal to those who come to this city to look for possible locations for the erection of homes.

SHERIFF SALE.

A lot on Laramie road, this city, belonging to the Plainfield Plumbing, Hardware and Paint Supply Company, was sold Wednesday at a sheriff's sale by Edward Hollander for $50. The property was sold in action brought against the owners by Alexander Sini.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD EXPECTS GOOD YEAR

Suburb Offers Promising Field for Activities During 1915.

South Plainfield looms up as one of the most promising of the towns surrounding this city in the construction line and realty field for activities in 1915. Last season witnessed the erection of a large number of dwellings and the sale of a comparatively large number of lots to prospective builders, and the outlook for the coming season is good. The erection of an addition to the plant of the Spicer Manufacturing Company at that place, with the possibility of other factories locating at the village in the course of the next few years was chiefly responsible for the boom at the neighboring town during the past season.

Aside from the number of dwellings which are expected for the coming season, it is highly probable that the Spicer concern will erect a brick structure to replace the frame addition built last summer. The new structure, if erected ths year, will undoubtedly be sufficiently large to accommodate the office force which is still working at the company's old plant in this city.

Prospects are also encouraging for the locaton at the village of the Willow Craft Furniture Company, of New York, which purchased a tract of land for a factory site, but was compelled to abandon plans for building owing to the money market. The coming of this concern to South Plainfield would mean a great deal to the future development of the village section of Piscataway township.

Citizens of South Plainfield have not as yet lost sight of the possibility of a trolley line to this city, or of becoming a borough of and by itself. These things accomplished would tend to give a little dignity to the village, and would materially aid in the development of the village.

REALTY TRANSFERS

Schwartz Land and Improvement Company to Mike Korim, lot 12, map of Plainfield Gardens, Plainfield, $1.

Joseph A. Morse to Fred K. Morse, northerly corner of Adam Stutzman, corner Turkey Swamp, Fanwood, $1.

Emma E. Morse et al to John B. Davis, same as above, $1.

Filomenia Yannuzzi et al. to Mary E. Brown, southwesterly side road to Rahway, corner Isaac Thorn, Fanwood, $1.

Agnes M. Meroira has transferred to Frederick J. Parker a large number of lots on map of Realty and Commercial Co., in Middlesex and Union counties.

Lillian Bye has transferred to Joseph F. Burke lot on corner of Clinton avenue and Eighth street, Piscataway township.

Frank M. Orton and wife have transferred to Joseph W. Clark a lot in Metuchen.

The sheriff has transferred to Jacob VanDoren and wife, a 94¾-acre farm on the road from Stelton to New Market, for $12,700.

Catherine C. Loudenberry has transferred to Augustin Fuller 10⅛ acres of land n Piscataway township.

Jacob Lantzenhiser has transferred to W. M. Ostrander, house and lot in Lincoln.

Frank Erdman bought of Metuchen Realty & Improvement Company four lots, Metuchen Estates.

Paul Roski bought of Metuchen Realty & Improvement Company, two lots, Metuchen Estates.

Josef Kucunsky sold to Metuchen Realy & Improvement Company four lots, Metuchen Estates.

Walter R. H. Hardingham and wife have transferred to Loring W. Treichler, 50 foot of land off west portion of five lots and buildng in borough of Dunellen.

Antonio Pepe has transferred to Nunziata D'Andrea, house and three lots in Piscataway township.

Margaret Schagehorn has transferred to Ben F. Johnson, house and two lots in Jersey Manor, Piscataway township.

SALES OF FOREST LANDS.

The National Forest Reservation Commission, created by the act of 1910 to purchase forest land to protect the headwaters of navigable streams along the Atlantic seacoast, recently reported to the Senate that 1,104,529 acres of these lands thus far have been approved for purchase. The lands are located in fifteen districts in New Hampshire, West Virginia, Tennessee, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. The average price per acre agreed on is $5.03. During the past year 391,114 acres have been located to cost $4.96 per acre. Other reservations may be made in Alabama, Maryland and Maine, and the Commission advises that surveys be made in the Ozark Mountains in Arkansas. An appeal is made to Congress to authorize a five years' appropriation at $2,000,000 per year, that the logical completion of the work may be assured.

NEW MARKET DOES NOT WANT "BOOMERS"

Presence of New York Agents Stirs the Little Village to Action.

The presence of a number of real estate "boomers" in New Market a week ago, looking over a number of tracts of property in the Hilltop Farm section has set the village into a whirl of frenzy for fear that the place will soon set the pace for the neighboring village of South Plainfield because of methods used by those who make a specialty of developing sections similar to the South Side of the township.

While residents of New Market have no great objections to further development of the village, or to the growth which would follow the use of legitimate advertising methods, they object to an abnormal growth at this time which might prove detrimental later on. To avoid this condition, several of the residents of the township are agitating the organization of a Board of Trade which might be utilized for the proper development of the village and the surrounding territory, in preference to having to contend with New York realty agents.

The fact that the Plainfield Board of Trade suggested that New Market ought to have a trolley line as well as South Plainfield, but was turned down by the Public Service Corporation at the time, now a year and a half ago, goes further to impress the citizens of that territory that some action should be taken looking toward the building up of New Market.

With the Borough of Middlesex out of Piscataway township, and South Plainfield seeking to become a borough within the course of a short time, those interested in the welfare of the hamlet are becoming anxious concerning the future of their home town.

That something should be done has become self evident, and it is expected that a meeting of the citizens to consider the formation of a Board of Trade will be called within the course of the next week or ten days.

CHAPTER VI.

A Horseshoe For Luck.

SMOKE was for the moment speechless. "You did it a purpose?" Shorty demanded.

"I did it to give the old timers a chance." She laughed mockingly. The men grinned at each other and finally joined her. "I'd lay you across my knee an' give you a wallopin' if women folk wasn't so scarce in this country," Shorty assured her.

"Your father didn't sprain a tendon, but waited till we were out of sight and then went on?" Smoke asked.

She nodded.

"And you were the decoy?"

Again she nodded, and this time Smoke's laughter rang out clear and true. It was the spontaneous laughter of a frankly beaten man.

"Why don't you get angry with me," she queried ruefully, "or—or wallop me?"

"Well, we might as well be startin' back," Shorty urged. "My feet's gettin' cold standin' here."

Smoke shook his head. "That would mean four hours lost. We must be eight miles up this creek now, and from the look ahead Norway is making a long swing south. We'll follow it then cross over the divide somehow and tap Squaw creek somewhere above Discovery." He looked at Joy. "Won't you come along with us? I told your father we'd look after you."

"I"— She hesitated. "I think I shall if you don't mind." She was looking straight at him, and her face was no longer defiant and mocking. "Really, Mr. Smoke, you make me almost sorry for what I have done. But somebody had to save the old timers."

For two hours more they kept to the frozen creek bed of Norway, then turned into a narrow and rugged tributary that flowed from the south. At midday they began the ascent of the divide itself. Behind them, looking down and back, they could see the long line of stampeders breaking up.

As for themselves, the going was hard. They wallowed through snow to their waists and were compelled to stop every few yards to breathe. Shorty was the first to call a halt.

"We been hittin' the trail for over twelve hours," he said. "Smoke, I'm plumb willin' to say I'm good an' tired. An' so are you. An' I'm free to shout that I can sure hang on to this here passar like a starvin' Indian to a bunk of bear meat. But this poor girl here can't keep her legs no time if she don't get somethin' in her stomach. Here's where we build a fire. What d'ye say?"

So quickly, so deftly and methodically did they go about making a temporary camp that Joy admitted to herself that old timers could not do it better. Spruce boughs, with a spread blanket on top, gave a foundation for rest and cooking operations. But they kept away from the heat of the fire until noses and cheeks had been rubbed cruelly.

On the steep slope of the divide there was no ice, so snow as fine and hard and crystalline as granulated sugar was poured into the gold pan by the bushel until enough had been melted for the coffee. Smoke fried bacon and thawed biscuits. Shorty kept the fuel supplied and tended the fire, and Joy set the simple table composed of two plates, two cups, two spoons, a tin of mixed salt and pepper and a tin of sugar. When it came to eating she and Smoke shared one set between them. They ate out of the same plate and drank from the same cup.

It was nearly 2 in the afternoon when they cleared the crest of the divide and began dropping down a feeder of Squaw creek. Earlier in the winter some moose hunter made a trail up the canyon—that is, in going up and down he had stepped always in his previous tracks. As a result, in the midst of soft snow and veiled under later snowfalls was a line of irregular hummocks. If one's foot missed a hummock he plunged down through unpacked snow and usually to a fall. Also, the moose hunter had been an exceptionally long legged individual. Joy, who was eager now that the two men should stake and fearing that they were slackening their pace on account of her evident weariness, insisted on taking her turn in the lead. The speed and manner in which she negotiated the precarious footing earned out Shorty's unqualified approval.

"Look at her," he cried. "She's the real goods an' the real meat. Look at them moccasins swing along. No high heels there! She uses the legs God gave her. She's the right squaw for any bear hunter."

Looking back as they came to the bank of Squaw creek they could see the stampede, strung out irregularly struggling along the descent of the divide.

They slipped down the bank to the creek bed. No recent feet had disturbed the snow that lay upon its ice, and they knew they were above the Discovery claim and the last stakes of the Sea Lion stampeders.

"Look out for springs," Joy warned as Smoke led the way down the creek. "At 70 below you'll lose your feet if you break through."

These springs, common to most Klondike streams, never cease at the lowest temperatures. A man stepping on this snow might break through half an inch of ice skin and find himself up to his knees in water. In five minutes, or less able to remove the wet gear, the loss of one's feet was the penalty.

They watched for a blazed tree on either bank, which would show the center stake of the last claim located. Joy, impulsively eager, was the first to find it. She darted ahead of Smoke crying:

"Somebody's been there! See the snow! Look for the blaze! There it is! See that spruce!" She sank suddenly to her waist in the snow. "Now I've done it," she said woefully. Then she cried: "Don't come near me! I'll wade out."

Step by step, each time breaking through the thin skin of ice concealed under the dry snow, she forced her way to solid footing. Smoke did not wait, but sprang to the bank, where dry and seasoned twigs and sticks, lodged among the brush by spring freshets, waited the match. By the time she reached his side the first flames and flickers of an assured fire were rising.

"Sit down!" he commanded.

She obediently sat down in the snow. He slipped his pack from his back and spread a blanket for her feet.

From above came the voices of the stampeders who followed them.

"Let Shorty stake!" she urged.

"Go on, Shorty," Smoke said as he attacked her moccasins, already stiff with ice. "Pace off a thousand feet and place the two center stakes. We can fix the corner stakes afterward."

With his knife Smoke cut away the lacings and leather of the moccasins. So stiff were they with ice that they snapped and crackled under the hacking and sawing. The sliwash socks and heavy woolen stockings were sheaths of ice. It was as if her feet and calves were incased in corrugated iron.

"How are your feet?" he asked as he worked.

"Pretty numb. I can't move or feel my toes. But it will be all right. The fire is burning beautifully. Watch out you don't freeze your hands. They must be numb now from the way you're fumbling."

He slipped his mittens on and for nearly a minute smashed the open hands savagely against his sides. When he felt the blood prickle he pulled off the mittens and ripped and tore and sawed and hacked at the frozen garments. The white skin of one foot appeared, then that of the other, to be exposed to the bite of 70 below zero.

Then came the rubbing with snow, carried on with an intensity of cruel fierceness, till she squirmed and shrank and moved her toes and joyously complained of the hurt. He half dragged her and she half lifted herself nearer to the fire. He placed her feet on the blanket close to the flesh saving flames.

"You'll have to take care of them for awhile," he said.

She could now safely remove her mittens and work and manipulate her own feet, with the wisdom of the initiated being watchful that the heat of the fire was absorbed slowly. While she did this he attacked his hands. The snow did not melt or moisten. Its light crystals were like so much sand. Slowly the stings and pangs of circulation came back into the chilled flesh. Then he tended the fire, unstrapped the light pack from her back and got out a complete change of footgear.

Shorty returned along the creek bed and climbed the bank to them. "I sure staked a full thousan' feet," he proclaimed, "No. 27 an' No. 28, though I'd only got the upper stake of 27 when I met the first geezer of the bunch behind. He just straight declared I wasn't goin' to stake 28. An' I told him"—

"Yes, yes," Joy cried. "What did you tell him?"

"Well, I told him straight that if he didn't back up plumb 500 feet I'd sure punch his froze nose into ice cream an' chocolate eclairs. He backed up, an' I've got in the center stakes of two full an' honest 500 foot creek claims. He staked next, an' I guess by now the bunch has Squaw creek located to headwaters an' down the other side. Ourn is safe. It's too dark to see now, but we can put out the corner stakes in the mornin'."

When they awoke they found a change had taken place during the night. So warm was it that Shorty and Smoke estimated the temperature at no more than 20 below. On top of their blankets lay six inches of frost crystals.

"Good morning. How are your feet?" was Smoke's greeting across the ashes of the fire to where Joy Gastell was sitting up in her sleeping furs.

Shorty built the fire and quarried ice from the creek while Smoke cooked breakfast. Daylight came on as they finished the meal.

"You go an' fix them corner stakes, Smoke," Shorty said. "There's gravel under where I chopped ice for the coffee, an' I'm goin' to melt snow an' wash a pan of that same gravel for luck."

Smoke departed, ax in hand, to blaze the stakes. Starting from the downstream center stake of No. 27, he headed at right angles across the narrow valley toward its rim. He proceeded methodically, almost automatically, for his mind was alive with recollections of the night before. He felt somehow that he had won to empery over the delicate line and firm muscles of those feet and angles he had rubbed with snow, and this empery seemed to extend to the rest and all of this woman of his kind. In dim and fiery ways a feeling of possession mastered him. It seemed that all that was necessary was for him to walk up to this Joy Gastell, take her hand in his and say "Come."

It was in this mood that he discovered something that made him forget empery over the white feet of woman. At the valley rim he blazed no corner stake. He did not reach the valley rim, but instead he found himself confronted by another stream. He lined up with his eye a blasted willow tree and a big and recognizable spruce. He returned to the stream where were the center stakes. He followed the bed of the creek around a wide horseshoe bend through the flat and found that the two creeks were the same creek. Next he floundered twice through the snow from valley rim to valley rim, running the first line from the lower stake of No. 27, the second from the upper stake of No. 28, and he found that the upper stake of the latter was lower than the lower stake of the former. In the gray twilight and half darkness Shorty had located their two claims on the horseshoe.

Smoke plodded back to the little camp. Shorty, at the end of washing a pan of gravel, exploded at sight of him.

"We got it!" Shorty cried, holding out the pan. "Look at it! A nasty mess of gold. Two hundred right there if it's a cent. She runs rich from the top of the wash gravel."

Smoke cast an incurious glance at the coarse gold, poured himself a cup of coffee at the fire and sat down. Shorty was disgruntled by his partner's lack of delight in the discovery.

"Why don't you kick in an' get excited?" he demanded. "We got out pile right here."

Smoke took a swallow of coffee before replying. "Shorty, why are our two claims here like the Panama canal?"

"What's the answer?"

"Well, the eastern entrance of the Panama canal is west or the western entrance, that's all."

"Go on," Shorty said. "I ain't seen the joke yet."

"In short, Shorty, you staked our two claims on a big horseshoe bend. The upper stake of 28 is ten feet below the lower stake of 27."

"You mean we ain't got nothin', Smoke?"

"Worse than that; we've got ten feet less than nothing."

Shorty departed down the bank on the run. Five minutes later he returned. In response to Joy's look he nodded.

"We might as well break camp and start back for Dawson," Smoke said, beginning to fold the blankets.

"I am sorry, Smoke," Joy said. "It's all my fault. Dad's staked for me down near Discovery, I know. I'll give you my claim."

He shook his head.

"Shorty!" she pleaded.

Shorty shook his head and began to laugh. It was a colossal laugh. Chuckles and muffled explosions yielded to hearty roars.

"It ain't hysterics," he explained. "I sure get powerful amused at times, an' this is one of them."

His gaze chanced to fall on the gold pan. He walked over and gravely kicked it, scattering the gold over the landscape. "It ain't ourn," he said. "It belongs to the geezer I backed up 500 feet last night. An' what gets me is 490 of them feet was to the good—his good. Come on, Smoke. Let's start the hike to Dawson, though if you're hankerin' to kill me I won't lift a finger to prevent."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by Plainfield Branch New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

It is rather the fashion to laugh at the Congressional Record, but to one who follows the course of National legislation there is often much illuminating information to be culled from its pages. An important measure is being debated: the general public is chiefly interested in the result rather than in the motives of the voters and very often quite wrong conclusions are drawn from the final vote. Thus in the late debate on the proposed Constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors throughout the Nation, it is too much taken for granted that Senators voting "Nay" were necessarily opposed to prohibition. From reading the debate one finds that in many cases the opposition is not to prohibitory legislation but to the interference with the rights guaranteed to the individual States. They see serious danger in tampering with the Constitution. Just so when the Suffrage amendment was voted on, certain Senators who were warm advocates of Woman Suffrage voted against it as not being within the jurisdiction of the Senate. The argument was used that in the event of the amendment being passed, it was in the power of three-quarters of the States to impose a law on a large number of States, which for reasons quite sufficient to themselves, were opposed to it. For instance, California (a Woman Suffrage State, by the way) not only defeated prohibition at the last election, but decreed that the question should not come up for eight years to come.

There were others again who felt that while prohibition was most desirable where it could be carried out, prohibition in parts of the country where it could more or less easily be evaded, would only cause an additional evil. The objection was also made that the proposed bill inferentially allowed for the private manufacture of intoxicating liquors. So that it is impossible to analyze the vote against prohibition in any such casual way as is done in Suffrage quarters.

Again the debate on the "literacy" test gave the reader much information and was extremely interesting as showing the different views that could be honestly advocated both for and against. Such right in the middle of it came an answer to those who insist that the right to vote is inalienable.

"I do not understand the line of reasoning that would lead any Senator to believe that the standard imposed by the possession of a reasonable amount of education is not a good general rule for the ascertainment of intelligence. I quite admit as Senators have eloquently argued, and urged on this floor, that there are many exceptions to the rule. Like all other rules, it is proved by its exceptions. Sometimes you will find a most intelligent man who can neither read nor write and who has had no education whatever, while at other times you will find people who can read and right, those who can barely do so, or even those who can do so with some fluency and readiness, who have no real intelligence. After all, in spite of the exceptions on the one side and the exceptions on the other side, the rule that you can discover and ascertain the existence of intelligence by an educational test is a sound one. It is so sound that many of the Commonwealths of this Republic have applied it in conferring or withholding the voting privilege.

"The Senator from Missouri, almost at the end of his speech, said that there had been few of the American Commonwealths that had imposed standards based on intelligence, except the Southern States, where he claimed racial conditions were entirely responsible. In addition to the States of the South, I should like to call his attention to the election laws of the States of Maine, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Ohio, Oregon, California, Idaho, Wyoming, Neveda, and Vermont.

"Mr. Smith of Arizona. And Arizona.

"Mr. Harwick. And Arizona, as the Senator from Arizona suggests.

"Mr. Gallinger. And the Senator can add New Hampshire to his list."—Cong. Record, Dec. 30.

If illiteracy can deprive a person of the right to vote, that right is evidently alienable.

Some time ago a friend sent me a little pamphlet entitled "Some Anti-Suffrage Arguments Answered," or something to that effect. The answers were extremely convincing; the only trouble was that the arguments would not have been acknowledged as such by Anti-Suffragists. I was reminded of this little pamphlet when listening to Dr. Davis' most interesting and practical address before the Monday Afternoon Club, in which, although she disclaimed from making a Suffrage speech, she inferentially answered one of the Anti-Suffrage arguments as it is understood by Suffragists. She said that she had talked with the girls in the Bedford Reformatory, the students at Vassar, and the men in the penitentiary at Blackwell's Island on the question of self-government, and to her surprise had received practically the same answer in each case. The majority of those questioned, it seemed, were either indifferent or considered that as certain people were paid to attend to the discipline it was their business to attend to it and there was a distinct disposition to leave it to these officials. Now it seems to me that these two classes typify two kinds of women opposed to Woman Suffrage. Some of them are frankly indifferent or simply do not care to be at the trouble of voting; others, like the students at Vassar, believe the work which is assigned to them by the very nature of their being demands all their attention and that it would be a weakening of their powers to take on themselves also the work of government. The Vassar students might very logically reason that they are in college to acquire a certain amount of knowledge, which in the majority of cases requires all the energy they have to spare, and that, paying for this, affairs should be run smoothly for them by those whom they are paying. Speaking from the point of view of health and future usefulness their position seems fairly sound.

But quite apart from this, Dr. Davis had introduced the subject of self-government in the prisons and reformatories by saying that where the majority of the inmates were indifferent or opposed to self-government, any attempt at it would be a failure. The hearing, in the speaker's mind, of this question in Woman Suffrage was so evident that she interrupted herself to say, "I am not making a Suffrage speech."

The bearing of her subsequent remarks was emphasized by her allusion to direct primaries and their neglect by the voters. Much could be said on this subject and on its relation to Woman Suffrage, but space forbids my enlarging on it now, but what I want to emphasize is the fact that one of the finest of the Suffragists believes that it needs an enthusiastic (her own word) majority to make such a movement successful, and I do not think any one pretends there is such a majority in favor of Suffrage.

He Pawed the Box Over Near the Table.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—Muggins, Bowser And the Jack-In-the-Box.

"KIDDIES, aren't you tired of hearing my stories so often?" asked daddy as the children came running to him for the evening story.

"No, daddy; fire away!" cried Jack slangily.

"All right, kiddies. I'll tell you tonight about two clever puppies and a funny old jack-in-the-box.

"The kitchen was not the place for the jack-in-the-box at all, but Baby Donald had left him there; neither was it the place for Muggins and Bowser, because they were always getting under the feet of the big fat cook. But cook was out in the back yard talking to the gardener, and so the puppies sneaked out of their basket in the hall and rushed pellmell into the kitchen.

"They were much surprised to see the box in the kitchen, but they went up to it and pawed it around playfully.

"The box was closed, but Bowser knew that if you pressed a certain spring the cover would raise up, and jack-in-the-box would pop out. Muggins didn't know that, however.

"The two puppies began sniffing as soon as they got in the kitchen, there was such a delightful odor coming to them from the top of the kitchen table.

"They jumped up and saw a string of big plump sausages of such a savory odor that their mouths began to water. But how to get them? Bowser was the more clever of the two puppies, so he thought of a scheme. He pawed the box over near the table and told Muggins to get up on it.

"Muggins did so, and then Bowser touched the spring. Up flew Muggins on to the table where was the string of sausages.

"He gave a little yelp as he found himself flying through the air. But when he landed upon the table, right in the midst of those delicious sausages, he gave several barks of pure delight.

"He pushed some off the table for Bowser, and then those two naughty doggies ate and ate until they were all swollen up like bubbles, and the jack-in-the-box laughed until he nearly broke his spring.

"But when cook returned she found two very sick puppies moaning under the table, and her sausages were all gone.

"And then she went to the kitchen cupboard and got a big black bottle with some terribly nasty stuff in it, and with a teaspoon she dosed those sick little doggies."

"Did they get well, daddy?"

"I think they did, kiddies," said daddy.

"Good night, daddy."

"Good night, kiddies."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"You look tired tonight, mother," said Agnes Forrest, seating herself by the table with her mending basket.

"I am tired, dear; tired of doing nothing," replied the alert woman of fifty-five.

"You are busy every moment of the day," laughed the daughter.

"It is positively pitiful, in a world where people are staggering under impossible loads, to sit here and never lend a hand," continued the older woman without noticing the remark.

"But, mother," said the placid daughter, "it is good to see you able to take it easy, you who have worked hard all your life. It is the greatest joy I have, the thought that the hard days are over for you."

"The idea of two women puttering about doing the little dab of work in this convenient little flat! It is too selfish a life to be borne," and she leaned forward to thread her needle in the strong light. "My dear Agnes, we are a nation of wasters. We have wasted our forests and now we must begin to plant trees; we have wasted our babies with needless mortality; we have wasted our youths with tuberculosis, and one great waste is the powers of women between forty and seventy years of age. These women who are well, with their experience, should be capable of doing useful work in the world. They are relegated to a corner or a shelf, where their powers shrivel through disuse."

"What could you do, mother?" questioned the daughter.

"What set me to thinking was Mrs. Peck's remark that they could not find a suitable matron for the Working Girls' Home, one who understands young people and could mother those girls, who are making a brave fight to earn a living. That would be doing something worth while, if one could get the confidence of two dozen girls, and perhaps be able to lend a hand in a crisis in their lives. How I would enjoy helping them get up entertainments!"

"It would be possible to have the girls give plays," said Agnes, beginning to enthuse.

"I think it could be arranged to have the dramatic club invite them to the last rehearsal. The fact of having an audience makes rehearsals go much better, and it would be a great pleasure for them. Then I could invite different musical friends down to play for them," continued Mrs. Weeks.

"You are thinking up a number of schemes for entertainment, mother, but the hard part is to keep the girls contented with the board and obedient to house rules," and Mrs. Forrest sat with a stocking drawn over her hand, thinking deeply.

"I should try to educate the girls to govern themselves, and have them take turns making out menus for a week," reflected the mother.

"It would be good practice and stop all complaints about meals," responded Agnes.

"I believe I will apply for the position," said the mother at last.

"I hate to have you leave us, mother," said Agnes.

"Nonsense! I would be right here in town and could see you often. I would have money for all the projects so dear to my heart," answered Mrs. Weeks.

"Indeed, that would add greatly to your happiness," agreed the daughter. "I'll go with you to see about it."

IMPRESSIVE TALK GIVEN BY REV. J. MADISON HARE

A large audience listened last evening, to an eloquent sermon in the Park Avenue Baptist church by Rev. J. Madison Hare, of Scotch Plains, on the subject "What Shall We Do With Our Past?" It was a fitting climax to the splendid meetings that have been held during the week, and the audience was deeply impressed by the earnest words of this preacher as he pleaded with them to put into God's hands all of their failures, lost opportunities, business and household perplexities, burdens and sorrows, as well as all their prosperity, joys and successes, in order that the life of Christ may have its fruitage, power and fulfillment in us.

The closing part of the service was led by the pastor, Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, and a number of testimonies added to the helpfulness of the meeting. Dr. Hudson asked for an expression of re-consecration to God's service, at the beginning of the new and untried year, and the entire congregation indicated this desire by rising. The meetings throughout the week have been marked by the spirit of true consecration, and both pastor and people feel that the results will be far reaching, and their influence felt for a long time to come.

STATISTICS SHOW RATE OF INCREASE

Interesting Table Compiled by Former Mayor G. W. V. Moy for City.

COMPARATIVE FIGURES

Survey Report Was Presented at West End Civic Association Meeting Friday Night—Expenditures in Various Departments.

An interesting statistical survey, dealing with Plainfield taxes, was presented at the annual meeting of the West End Civic Association, Friday night, by former Mayor G. W. V. Moy. In his report, Mr. Moy compared and contrasted the figures prevailing here with those in other place of Plainfield's size.

One of the outstanding conditions was found in St. Paul, Minn., a municipality of 275,000 inhabitants. The public debt amounted to $10,748,576 and the assessed value was $114,408,085 last year. With a forty per cent. tax the rate was based on forty-one per cent. In Plainfield, a city where the population figures are set at 23,000, the rate is 1.91. The public debt of this city is $1,042,000 and the assessed valuation $30,699,310.

Mr. Moy's figures show a steady rise in the amount of money needed to maintain all of the city departments from 1904 until the present instant. As a comparison he presented the following totals for the various branches of work in 1904: Public schools, $68,300; fire department, $23,700; street department, $25,000. In 1914 the departments cost the city the following amounts: Public schools, $109,130; fire department, $55,000; street department, $56,000. In 1914 the assessed valuation was $30,698,380 and in 1909 it was $23,613,304, with a tax rate of 1.68 against the 1.91 of this year.

The list of assessed valuation and rates for six years follow: 1914, assessed valuation, $30,698,389; assessed valuation rate, $1.91; 1913, assessed valuation, $27,821,075; rate, 1.87; 1912, assessed valuation, $26,203,786; rate, $1.68; 1911 assessed valuation, $25,277,880; rate, 1.57, 1910, assessed valuation $24,412,389; rate, 1.65; 1909, assessed valuation, $23,613,304.; rate, 1.68.

The various city departments have required the following amounts for maintenance during the past eleven years: 1904, public schools, $68,300; fire department, $23,700; street depart. $25,000.

1905—Schools, $70,000; fire, $25,000; street, $25,000.

1906—Schools, $73,000; fire, $25,600; streets, $31,000.

1907—Schools, $71,000; fire, $29,000; streets, $35,000.

1909—Schools, $62,000; fire, $34,000; streets, $35,000.

1910—Schools $67,000; fire, $38,000; streets, $42,000; police, $27,000.

1911—Schools, $74,000; fire, $40,000; streets, $51,582; police, $28,000

1912—Schools, $88,000; fire, $44,000; streets, $43,000.

1913—Schools, $100,503; fire, $50,000; streets, $50,000; police, $35,000.

1914—Schools, $109,130; fire $55,000; streets, $56,000; police, $39,000.

71,000 RED CROSS SEALS ARE SOLD IN PLAINFIELD

The sale of American Red Cross Seals for the 1914 season just closed, amounted to 71,000 seals, producing the sum of $710, according to an announcement by George M. Holstein, chairman of the Red Cross Seal committee. This money has been delivered to the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, for immediate use in its fight against the White Plague.

This compares with $502.75 realized in the previous year. The committee in its announcement takes occasion to thank all who in any way assisted in this work through the sale or purchase of the seals.

PUGILISTS ARRAIGNED.

William Gray, of this city, and Frank Williams, of Wilkesbarre, engaged in a couple of rounds of pugilistic amusement while under the influence of liquor on West Front street, Saturday night, the bout ending when a copper happened along and locked the fighters up. In the city court this morning a fine of $20 was suspended over Gray's head and Williams was let go with the proviso that he quit the city immediately.

RASORES MEETING.

The Rasores will meet tomorrow morning with Mrs. Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue.

LETTER CARRIERS' ANNUAL GATHERING

Postmaster Hoagland and Inspector C. A. Larrabee Guests at Dinner.

The annual dinner under the auspices of the letter-carriers attached to the Plainfield postoffice, was given Saturday evening in Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall, on East Front street. The carriers had as their guests Postmaster Alvin E. Hoagland, C. A. Larrabee, postal inspector, and E. T. VanWinkle, superintendent of carriers, and a majority of the clerks in the local office. The large hall was elaborately decorated for the occasion with the national colors and the table was garnished with flowers. An excellent dinner was served under the direction of a committee comprising John McCormick, Charles Schlief, A. B. Dunham, George Apgar and James Bailey.

Following the "spread," J. W. A. Bauersachs, who was the toatsamtser of the evening, made a few remarks and then introduced Postmaster Alvin E. Hoagland, who announced this as his "maiden speech." Mr. Hoagland congratulated and complimented all of the employes of the postoffice upon their loyalty to service and expressed his pleasure in being an honored guest at the dinner.

Inspector Larrabee, in his remarks, referred to the postal service, in which he did not fail to say some nice things about the men in the local office. He also told interesting facts concerning his own work. Other speakers of the evening included Edward T. VanWinkle, John McCormick, G. A. Bailey, James Bailey, Frank Bailey, E. E. Ripley, James Conkling, William Demarest, Charles Schlief, A. B. Dunham and Clarence B. Rittenhouse.

A feature while the dinner was being served was the rendition of a program of popular selections on a phonograph which enlivened the affair. It was late when the gathering dispersed, all agreeing that the dinner was one of the best yet given by the letter-carriers.

HORSE SLIPPED AND SANK INTO A DEEP, ICY CHANNEL

One of the valuable horses owned by the Plainfield Ice and Supply Company took a deep dive into the icy waters of the Watchung Lake, Saturday afternoon, while being used in the harvesting of ice. A misstep caused the equine to step into a channel where the water was forty feet deep and despite the efforts of the workers to keep the animal's head above water, it sank rapidly.

After considerable difficulty the gang of workmen on the pond managed to assist the horse to a spot of thick ice and he was drawn to the surface. Aside from a severe chilling the animal seemed little the worse for his experience.

PIETER VLET WEDS MISS AFIEN BAKKER

Miss Afien Bakker, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Frederik J. Bakker, of 1401 Belleview avenue, and Pieter Vlet, also of this city, were married Saturday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. Edwin Shaw, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

Mr. Vlet is an employe of Truell Court. He will continue to work there, but the couple will make their home for the present with Mrs. Vlet's parents. The official witnesses to the ceremony were two of the bride's brothers, Herman and Frederik Bakker, both of Plainfield.

PUBLIC WILL HAVE USE OF HIGH SCHOOL TANK

The Public Recreation Committee has announced the opening of the High School gymnasium and swimming pool for men on Tuesday evenings. The classes are under the direction of Mr. Patch.

There is a charge of 15 cents, which includes both class work and athletic games as well as use of the pool. Membership is to be limited and the first that register will be given preference.

Any one desiring to join the class should go to the High School gym tomorrow evening and apply to Mr. Patch. On Wednesday evening both the gym and the pool are open for women and girls. Miss Ralston teaches swimming and Miss Brownlee has charge of the gym work, including aesthetic dancing, basketball and regular calesthenics.

E. S. HOOLEY WEDS MRS. J. S. BROOKS

Rev. J. Herman Randall Performs the Ceremony in New York City.

SURPRISE TO FRIENDS

Bridegroom Has Been Residing in New York for Past Three Years—Bride, Who Fomerly Lived Here, is Wealthy.

Announcement today of the marriage of Edwin S. Hooley, formerly of North Plainfield, and Mrs. Jennie Shaddle Brooks, also a former resident of this city and the borough, came as a great surprise to the many friends of the couple in this city and New York. The ceremony was performed in New York city, Saturday, by Rev. J. Herman Randall, a Baptist clergyman, and was witnessed only by a few intimate friends.

It was known by close friends that the couple was engaged, but no previous announcement had been made of the approaching wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks left after the ceremony for the South, where the bride owns a large and beautiful winter home.

The bride is well-known in this city. Prior to her first marriage to Warren Brooks, she was Miss Jennie Shaddle. For a time the family lived on Woodland avenue in the home now occupied by Henry L. Hall. After her marriage Mr. Brooks built a fine residence on Willow avenue, the borough. He died about seven years ago, being an invalid for a long time. Mrs. Brooks is quite wealthy in her own right.

Mr. Hooley was divorced from his first wife, who was Miss Mabel C. Brooks, about three years ago and since then has been living at the Union League Club, New York. He has not visited Plainfield for some time. He still retains his large business interests in New York city, being the head of the well-known brokerage firm of Edwin S. Hooley & Company, of 15 Broad street.

While it was known here that Mr. Hooley and his first wife had been separated for sometime it was not generally known that he had secured a divorce. Warren Brooks was a relative of the first Mrs. Hooley. He was widely known here, where he lived for many years.

HAD LUCKY ESCAPE WHEN REVOLVER WAS DISCHARGED

Paul Schwoerer, employed by Theodore Glazer as night watchman at the latter's South Plainfield fertilizing plant, accidentally shot himself while cleaning a revolver Saturday night and was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital. Luckily for Schwoerer, however, the bullet inflicted only a glancing wound and the injury is not of a dangerous nature.

According to the victim he was putting his weapon in readiness for his nightly vigil on the South Plainfield property when he in some way pulled the trigger. The bullet hit him in the chest, tearing away part of the flesh. He was attended by Dr. Lufburrow.

COMPLETES BUSINESS.

The Plainfield Allied Trades Committee met Saturday evening and completed the unfinished business from the recent ball held under the auspices of the committee, all bills being ordered paid. The $10 door award was given on ticket 769 to B. L. Lindsley, of Whitehouse Station. The committee will hereafter meet on the second Saturday of each month, at the Trades Council Hall.

A PROMPT SETTLEMENT.

The Frederick A. Martin Company, real estate and insurance brokers, made a settlement this morning with Captain William Hand for the damage by fire yesterday, to the apartment over Mr. Hand's livery stable property on East Second street. The fire was caused by an overheated range. The damage amounted to about $100.

TO ATTEND STATE CONFERENCE.

Physical Director Robert Meermans, of the local Y. M. C. A., will attend the State conference for physical directors which will be held in Perth Amboy tomorrow and Wednesday. Dr. George J. Fisher, national secretary of physical work, will be the chief speaker of the conference.

S. P. C. A. MEETING.

The yearly meeting of the local branch of the S. P. C. A. will be held in the Y. M. C. A. this afternoon, at which the officers for the ensuing year will be elected. The reports of the various officials, including that of the special agent, will be read.

MRS. SARAH F. POUND DIES AT GREYSTONE

Aged Christian Worker, Formerly of Plainfield, Was Well Known.

Mrs. Sarah Francis Pound, formerly of this city, but late of Greystone Park, N. J., died at the latter place Saturday. She was eighty-seven years of age and was the last one of eight children of John and Mercy Randolph. She was also a sister of the late Henry Clay Randolph, of Rahway road.

Mrs. Pound married in early life Richard Pound and went West to live. Mr. Pound died in less than a year, and Mrs. Pound returned to Plainfield. She was one of the first matrons of the "Old Ladies' Home" in Elizabeth. Later she spent a number of years in the South at New Orleans, Baton Rouge and other places, where she was engaged in missionary work. She went about in country places, holding meetings establishing Sunday-schools and teachings the colored women how to care for their homes and children.

At another time she had charge of a home for fallen girls, in which work she was much interested.

In later life Mrs. Pound returned to Plainfield for a time, and then entered the "Old Ladies' Home" in Elizabeth, where she has since lived. She was an earnest Christian, and active in church work, with which she was connected, as long as health permitted. She had no children, but is survived by several nieces and one nephew.

The funeral service will be held at the home of her niece, Mrs. C. Frank French, 25 Washington avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

ENGAGEMENT OF MISS JUSTINA SMITH ANNOUNCED

Mrs. William Daly, of this city, today announced the engagement of her sister, Miss Justina Smith, to Thomas W. Derick, formerly of Canada, but now of Plainfield. Miss Smith is a talented musician and for several years she has been soprano soloist at St. Joseph's church, the borough. For some time she has been employed as manager of the cloak and suit department at Tepper Brothers' store.

Mr. Derick is well-known here, being employed by the Zeek Baking Company. No date has been fixed for the wedding.

MRS. TOBIN IMPROVED.

Mrs. George J. Tobin, of Grant avenue, who has been seriously ill with meningitis, was reported today as being slightly improved. She has been conscious since yesterday. Mrs. Tobin has been under the treatment of a New York specialist and three local physicians. She suffered the attack following a visit to Newark last week and her condition rapidly grew worse, when the specialist was summoned.

ARTHUR HUMBLE ELECTED.

The fourth quarterly conference of the First M. E. church was held yesterday afternoon, with Rev. F. J. Hubach, the district superintendent, in charge. Eugene Edgar, formerly of Fairview avenue, the borough, but now of Asbury Park, resigned as a trustee and Arthur R. Humble was elected to fill the vacancy.

TEMPERATURE REPORT.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company today is as follows: 9 a. m., 27 degrees; 11 a. m., 32 degrees; 1 p. m., 35 degrees.

STOLE HIS CHICKENS.

Thirteen chickens belonging to D. Butinsky, of 126 Liberty street, were stolen from his coop some time Saturday night.

WORKMAN DIES AFTER ACCIDENT

Peter Schenck, of Freehold, Fatally Injured When Big Stack Fell on Him.

BODY BADLY CRUSHED

Breaking of Guy Rope Caused Big Mass of Iron to Fall on Him—Leg and Arm Amputated at the Hospital.

Crushed under a 2,000 pound smoke stack that had slipped from its moorings, Peter Schenck, of Freehold, sustained injuries at the Queen City Laundry's plant on Berckman street Saturday afternoon that resulted in his death a few hours later in Muhlenberg Hospital. The victim, together with a gang of workmen, had been engaged in hauling the large piece of hollow steel and iron into place on the concern's roof when the guy rope that held it to the derrick post became tangled in a rivet and was snapped off.

With only momentary warning the huge structure was cut loose and although the other members of the gang were able to leap to one side, Schenck was caught and pinioned under the heavy mass of iron. His body was terribly crushed, the right arm and leg being smashed to a pulp when they were caught between the falling mass and the ground. Still conscious he was picked up by fellow workmen and hurried arrangements were made for his transfer to the hospital.

At that institution physicians amputated his arm and leg and examination revealed internal injuries of a mortal nature. Knight T. Fawcett, manager of the laundry, was was supervising the erection of the stack, accompanied the injured man to the hospital and did everything in his power to make his last few hours as comfortable as possible. Remaining in full possession of his mental faculties until the last the man talked freely with those who surrounded his bedside although he was suffering terrible agony.

Although his life was despaired of Mr. Fawcett and the physicians in charge had everything possible done to alleviate the pain. He died at 8 o'clock, having been received at the institution four hours before.

Schenck was about forty years of age and made his home in Freehold. He is survived by a wife who was overcome when acquainted with the said details of her husband's death Saturday night.

FUNERAL OF GEORGE F. WHITE LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of George F. White was held Saturday afternoon at the First Baptist church and was largely attended by relatives and friends, including many business associates from the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York, by whom Mr. White was employed for many years.

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the church, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. Frank Smith, of the Central Baptist church, Elizabeth, who had known Mr. White for a number of years. Both Dr. Strong and Mr. Smith made eulogistic remarks referring to the exemplary Christian life of the departed and of his devotion to his home and church. During the service three selections were sung by Mrs. Robert Giddes, Miss Jessie Haynes, George Smith and William Holmes.

There were a large number of beautiful floral tributes from relatives, business associates and officers of the church, of which Mr. White was a trustee for several years. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were: J. Herbert Case, Runyon Field, William F. Arnold, Edward M. VanBuren and John G. MacLaughlin.

FOR THE FATHERLAND.

F. W. Leitheusser, A. W. Hauck, E. Arthur Janke, C. W. Krausse, Hugo Klotz, Rev. George Hauser and C. E. Krausse were among the three hundred German-Americans that gathered in Kreuger's Auditorium, Newark, yesterday, in the interest of the "Vaterlandshilfe," which was recently organized. At the meeting the Plainfielders took an active part in the adoption of constitution and by-laws. It was decided to admit young people and children to the membership of the organization, the purpose of which is to maintain and increase the interest in the Fatherland.

I. C. S. FRATERNITY.

There will be a special meeting of the I. C. S. fraternity tomorrow evening at the club rooms on East Front street, when final arrangements will be made regarding the banquet to be held the last of the month.

ANNOUNCE MARRIAGE AT A DINNER PARTY

Couple Wedded for Six Months Surprise Friends and Relatives.

During the course of a dinner given Saturday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Wier, of Leland avenue, to Miss Ethel L. Wahl and Wilbur P. DeMilt, announcement was made that the couple had been married on June 6 last. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Wahl, of North avenue, Westfield.

Mr. DeMilt holds a responsible position with the New York office of the Clyde Steamship lines and has previously resided with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. McNamee, of Elm avenue, Fanwood. They were married on June 6 at the Holy Trinity church, Westfield, only the parents of the parties being present, as it was their wish that no formal announcement should be made at that time.

Of the friends and relatives present only the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. McNamee, and the hostess knew of the marriage, and even the bride and groom had not been informed that an announcement would be made at this time.

Just previous to calling the guests to dinner the host appeared with a mysterious looking bag which appeared to be quite animated and which he informed his guests contained a great secret. Upon opening the bag a large Angora cat of the hostess appeared bearing a placard announcing to the great surprise of those present and especially the happy couple that they had been married in June.

After being the recipients of the congratulations and well wishes of those present, the happy couple were escorted into dinner by the host and hostess, where toasts for their future happiness were made. Throughout the dinner and for the dancing which followed suitable selections were furnished by an electric pianola.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. H. J. McNamee, Irving DeMilt, Charles Porter, Willard Marston, Miss Jennie Boulsir, Mrs. Hannah Marston and Miss Mary McCarthy.

FATHER AND SON FIGURE IN A DOUBLE RUNAWAY

Frightened by the breaking of a whiffle-tree, a team of horses driven by Raymond Cooley ran away on the Mountain boulevard, Saturday afternoon. Several hundred feet ahead of young Cooley at the time of the mishap was his father, driving another team belonging to Dr. Justice H. Cooley, and in an effort to bring the frenzied animals to a stop young Cooley drove them into his parent's wagon.

The sudden imfact of the two vehicles excited the second pair of horses and the two teams dashed at breakneck speed down the avenue. The respective drivers managed to gain control of their animals before much territory had been covered, however, and no damage was done to the wagons. Mr. Cooley was slightly injured.

FRACTURES SKULL IN FALL ON THE ICE

Mrs. Catherine Binz, aged 65 years, of Mt. Bethel, is in a critical condition at her home, suffering from a fractured skull the result of a fall on Saturday. She was walking in the backyard at her home when she slipped on a piece of ice. Members of the family assisted her to the house and Dr. Bebout, of Stirling, was summoned.

A little later Mrs. Binz appeared to rally, but her condition is still precarious. The physician found it necessary to take several stitches to close a wound. Mrs. Binz is the mother of Mrs. Charles Wicht and Alfred Binz, of this city.

TO CONTINUE SERVICES.

Special services will be continued at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church every night this week except Saturday. Harry Gee will lead the service tonight, and Rev. Albert G. Schatzman, of Linden, will preach tomorrow night. Miss Emily March spoke at the church last night on "Visions of the Deepening Waters," which was followed by an interesting after-meeting.

TO INSTALL OFFICERS.

Clan Mackenzie, No. 204, Order Scottish Clans, will meet this evening at 109 Park avenue, at which time there will be installation of officers and other important business. The meeting will be held at 7:30 o'clock and a full attendance of members is desired.

HALT ZEPPELIN RAID ON ENGLAND

Sixteen German Airships Reported to Have Turned Back from Trip Over Channel.

LITTLE NEW IN FRANCE

Official Statement Says Artillery Duels Have Become Less Violent—Germans Say That French Attacks Have Been Repulsed.

London, Jan. 11—A despatch to the Chronicle from Belgium, says:

"Calais had a call on Saturday night from a Zeppelin and three Aviatik aeroplanes, which, flying high over the town, were reported to be heading in the direction of Dover.

"Anti-aircraft guns mounted on automobiles were hastily sent to an advantageous position for attack, but the German machines, without doing any damage, continued on their journey at top speed.

"The Zeppelin had come from the interior of Belgium, passing over Furnes and Dunkirk."

Sixteen German aeroplanes were seen over the English Channel, Sunday morning, and it is evident a raid on England was cotemplated. The pilots, however, apparently found conditions too bad to continue their journey, for they turned their machines and steered in the direction of Dunkirk, where they dropped about thirty bombs.

The News correspondent telegraphs from northeastern France:

"German air excursions over Furnes, Dunkirk and Calais continue. I was told that again last night a Zeppelin and two biplanes were seen near Calais, and more bombs have been dropped into Furnes and Dunkirk, without, however, doing much damage."

Paris, Jan. 11—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"From the sea to the Lys there has been cannonading less violent than on preceding days. In the region of Ypres our artillery replied effectually to that of the enemy, and succeeded in directing its fire well against the German trenches. Between the Lys to the Oise, in the region of La Boiselle, our troops captured one trench after violent combat.

"On the Aisne and in Champagne as far as Rheims there have been artillery duels. From Rheims to the Argonne our artillery has bombarded the first line of tronches of the enemy and the shelters of his reserves north of Perthes. After having repulsed the counter attack reported from this region, last night, we have advanced, gaining a line of trenches 200 yards long.

"In the Argonne there have been some small engagements. Our front has been maintained. In the Vosges a heavy snow is falling."

Berlin, Jan. 11(by wireless via Sayville)—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war only artillery combats occured at Nieuport, Ypres and south of there. A French attack on La Boiselle, northeast of Albert, completely failed. North of Soissons the French, who had established themselves in only a small part of our trenches, again attacked us. So far they have gained no success. The battles continue.

"In the neighborhood of Soupia there has been no fighting during the last few days. East of Perthes we recaptured a portion of our trenches which the enemy had previously taken. The French suffered heavy losses.

"We have made further progress in the Argonne. The situation is about unchanged in Upper Alsace.

"The situation in the eastern theatre is unchanged in East Prussia and in northern Poland. Our attacks in Poland west of the Weichsel are making slow progress on account of the weather."

New York, Jan. 11—A despatch from Taranto published in Il Progresso Italiano, of New York, this morning, says the third division of the Italian fleet sailed from Taranto, last night, under sealed orders. The despatch adds that the sailing of the warships followed telegraphic instructions from Rome. The fleet is under command of Vice Admiral Cagni.

Paris, Jan. 11—A Copenhagen "Temps" despatch says of the German high sea fleet only the old boats Barbarossa, Wuerttemberg, Koenigen Luise, Kranprinz, Kaiser Wilhelm, some instruction ships and six submarines are now at Kiel.

The first line fleet with the dreadnoughts are at Wilhelmshaven and Cuxhaven.

MARSHAL PUT "INDIAN SIGN" ON IMPROMPTU RING TILT

The climax of a feud of long standing between William Smith (colored), of Watchung, who drives the automobile truck of Bennett, the Piscataway produce man, and Goodwin Lawrence, the local white hope, was reached in Richter's pool room at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, when Smith walked in and noting Goodwin among the assemblage challenged him to a duel with bare fists. "I'm on," retorted Goodwin, "come on out back."

The pool rool was vacated in short order and the contestants inside of a ring formed by those whom had been in the pool room were shortly at it hammer and tongs.

Marshal Patrick Tarpey, who seems to have the faculty of being where he is most needed, "got wind" of what was going on and hastened to the scene of the conflict. As he was sweeping down on the pugilists, one of whom was shortly destined to be "caged," the marshal in the dark stumbled over one of the numerous boxes in the rear of the White Rose grocery. Some one then yelled "cheese it, the cop." Goodwin ran in the opposite direction from the approaching marshal, and up to 9 o'clock this morning was still at large, but Smith ran right into his arms. When arraigned before Recorder David S. Campbell, seated in the Borough Hall yesterday morning, Smith was given the option of paying a fine of $5 or receiving ten days' free board at the expense of the county. He decided to pay the fine.

Stylish Reliable

Every MAN knows that we sell MEN'S and BOYS' Furnishings.

During the holiday rush hundreds of people visited Rothberg's—yet the fact stands out that one-third of the customers were women!

Why?

The reason is this—"Rothberg's is a MAN'S store—a store that is not ed for the kind of furnishings that men like and buy. Men tell their wives and sisters to go to Rothberg's for correct things for men—and they do.

Our Semi-annual Sale is on for this week—some good values for you here.

W. R. Craig, who suffered a stroke a week ago Saturday and whose condition has been showing satisfactory improvement, was not so well last night, it being necessary for his nurse to be up with him for the greater part of the night. He was resting quietly this morning.

SHOOTS MAD DOG.

Police headquarters, yesterday morning, received a message over the telephone to the effect that there was a mad dog on Columbia street. Marshal Harry Shugars was dispatched at once to the scene. When the marshal arrived Columbia street reminded him of the "deserted village," as nary a person was to be seen. The marshal shortly perceived the animal, which was frothing at the mouth, and approaching it with drawn revolver, he quickly destroyed its life. The dog was owned by Richard Trewin, of North avenue.

TARPEY GETS $1,200.

James Tarpey received a check for $1,200 from the Public Service Railway Company, on Saturday, to recompense him for injuries received about two years ago at the hands of the crew of a trolley, which was bound from Bound Brook to this borough, for refusing to pay, as he claimed, his far a second time. Tarpey was struck on the back with a switch iron and laid up for two months. He sued the company for $5,000 and was awarded a verdict of $2,000, which was appealed by the company with the result that he amount was reduced $800 by the Supreme Court of the State. George Silzer, then the prosecutor of this county, but now a Circuit Court judge, handled Mr. Tarpey's case.

While skating on the reservoir at the plant of the Hall Press Works, on Saturday afternoon, Burr Boskell, the 12-year-old-son, of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Boskell, of North avenue, skated off the ice into the open water at one end of the reservoir. He was pulled out by 14-year-old Charles Doyle, of Front street, who daringly dropped on the edge of the ice at the risk of it breaking with him.

HOLY NAME SOCIETY MEETS.

The monthly meeting of the Holy Name Society of St. John's church, was held at 8 o'clock last evening in the rectory of the church with a goodly number of the members of the society present. The report of the treasurer showed the society to be in a healthy condition financially. Regret was expressed over the society losing one of its faithful members in John Morrisey, of Second street, who will move to Plainfield the middle of the week. The annual election of officers was then held, the following being elected: E. J. Gessner, president; J. E. Logan, vice-president; John Rafferty, recording secretary; Michael Kerwin, financial secretary; Richard M. Ryan, treasurer, and John McMahon, marshal. A vote of thanks was extended to the retiring officers.

Schuyler's pond was crowded with skaters yesterday and the fellows chose sides for hockey. The game ended with both sides claiming victory.

Although Mayor W. H. Hoar has appointed Charles Sheelen as recorder of the borough again it is doubtful if he will serve in that capacity as he is pressed by other duties. It has become a regular custom for the Council to receive his resignation and, knowing his efficiency, always lay it on the table. Heretofore he has been persuaded to continue on being shown that there was no one else to take the job, but this time he says he will not serve.

After showing no signs of life for over a week the bog fire on South avenue has started up worse than ever and the dense smoke makes it almost unbearable for nearby residents.

THREE YEARS' SURVEY OF MOSQUITO WORK

Resume Made by Chief Inspector Presents Many Figures.

A report of the operations for the past three years as compiled by its chief inspector, Russell W. Gies, was issued today by the Union County Mosquito Extermination Commission. The report covers the period since May, 1912, when the Commission was organized, and shows clearly the efficiency of the work that is being carried on by this department of the county.

In 1912 the appropriation for carrying on mosquito extermination work in Union county was $28,000, of which $15,000 was spent. Each year the appropriation has diminished, a 10% reduction being made for the coming year, the appropriation for 1915 being but $23,000, as against $25,500 last year. In spite of this reduction and in spite of the big increase in population in the county since 1912, necessitating greater efforts on the part of the Mosquito Extermination Commission to control the various breeding places in the county, the amount of work that has been accomplished from year to year has vastly increased. The first year only about $5,000 for drainage work was accomplished, of which about $2,000 was contributed by private property owners. In 1913 the amount of drainage work increased to more than $30,000, of which it is estimated at least 77% was paid for by private owners, and during the past year only about 13% of the total amount of drainage work was paid for out of public funds, the remainder being contributed by private owners.

Among the other interesting facts which are revealed by the statistical statement of the Commission, is the great increase in efficiency of the inspection work carried on by the Commission. The percentage of the cost of inspection increased 127%, but the amount of work accomplished during the same period, increased 715%. In 1912 an average of 18 inspections a day were made, while in 1914, the average number of inspections had increased to 92 per day.

The Commission now has about 710,000 feet of salt marsh ditching, which is located on the three big salt marshes within the county, the North Elizabeth meadow, South Elizabeth and Linden meadow.

The larger ponds and pools which still remain, have been stocked with fish in most cases and the edges are being kept free of grass and weeds, where mosquito larvae would have a sheltered place to mature in the snagnant water.

The oiling work of the Commission has also shown a steady decrease in cost from year to year. In five months in 1912, $2,106.04 was spent for temporary oiling work, while in 1914 only $953.75 was spent.

The high cost of living has been noticed in mosquito extermination work, as in almost every other line of business. Where laborers and foremen are paid but $1.74 on an average in 1912, it is now necessary to pay them $2.04, and costs of equipment and supplies has increased in the same ratio, that through good planning on the part of the Commission, more and better work was done last year to reduce the number of mosquitoes in this county at far less expense, this work being carried on last year at a saving of $7,360.70 over the preceding year, a saving of 24% of the total amount spent.

JEFFERSON CLUB HAS A BIRTHDAY

West End Democrats Hold a Big Celebration in Honor of the Event.

In celebration of the first anniversary of its organization, the Jefferson Democratic Club conducted a most enjoyable affair in the club rooms, Saturday. It began at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and from then on until midnight there was "something doing" all the time. Music was furnished by the club's orchestra and the supply of good eats provided knocked the talk about hard times into a cocked hat.

Informality was the keynote until evening, when a scheduled program took procedure. The Jefferson harmonists, composed of Henry Roache, violin; William Burke, flute, and Peter McCluskey, accordion, discoursed popular airs, after which songs were rendered by John McCoy and Henry Roche. David L. Coleman, who has twice been an aspirant for City Council honors, gave an address on "True Democracy and Living Up to It." Daniel Galbraith danced American buck and wing steps and an Irish jig. He afterwards took part in a marathon dancing contest with Peter McCluskey and Mike Gartland, the latter being declared the winner. Mr. Gartland also recited Harry Lauder's masterpiece, "I'm Fou' the Nou." The program was ably conducted by President Michael Shea, who took occasion to review the work of the club since its entrance into the local field of political organizations. It started with twenty-two members and now has seventy-five with prospects of a big increase during 1915.

Edward Strapp, who was the first president, was among those who spoke briefly and he predicted a greater growth of membership and influence in the year to come than the one just past.

The officers of the club at present are as follows: President, Michael Shea; vice-president, Thomas Farrell; recording secretary, Frank Laskoski; financial secretary, William Sutton; treasurer, Peter McCluskey; trustees, Edward Strapp, Patrick Driscoll and Richard Scott.

The hall was handsomely decorated for the occasion, a big American flag presented by Councilman Theodore Martin occupying the center of the room. The celebration was arranged by a committee composed of Caesar Grobleski, chairman; Thomas Farrell, Patrick Driscoll, Daniel Galbrathi and Richard Scott.

THE DAILY PRESS IN SOMERVILLE will be found on sale or delivered to any address every afternoon after 4:30 by Jacob Gunert, the Main street newsdealer.

—The Daily Press can be purchased each night at Mallinson's drug store, East Second street.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

MISS NASH'S CLAIM AGAINST CONGRESSMAN

Jersey City, Jan. 11.—Today is set for the argument in the suit of Miss Theo Nash, who claims she gave up matrimony to nurse Congressman Robert G. Bremner, of New Jersey, against his estate for her services. The court has restrained the executor from selling the Passaic Daily Herald, owned by the late Congressman, until the case is adjusted.

Miss Nash claims $150 a month for her services, which she states the Congressman promised her when she gave up her love match to continue as his nurse. She alleges that he instructed his brother, Leith Bremner, who was named as executor with the widow, to pay the amount from his share of the profits of the newspaper. In the event of the paper being sold, Miss Nash asks $75,000.

Miss Nash also claims that the stipulation for the payment of the money was made in a letter by Congressman Bremner to his brother, and that on his deathbed was assured by his brother that it would be fulfilled. Leith Bremner denies all the charges. The will contains no reference to Miss Nash.

The woman nursed Bremner from September, 1911, until hns death in February of last year. She claims to have received a proposal of marriage in July, 1913, and acquainted the Congressman of the fact. According to her statement, he was displeased, for he had become greatly attached to her. Finally, she avers, he persuaded her to give up all her friends, break her engagement and devote herself solely to him.

"The bill is one of the most remarkable attempts to obtain money that has perhaps ever been brought to the public attention in the recent past," declared Leith Bremner. "There is absolutely no truth in the allegations, and if the plaintiff ventures into court, the underlying motives of this case will be fully discussed and the true character of this faithful nurse will be disclosed to the public. Miss Nash has been paid in full."

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Randolph, of East Randolph road, entertained at dinner Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan F. Randolph, of Belleview avenue, and the Misses Ida and Etta Randolph, of Mt. Pleasant.

MRS. W. H. BROKAW'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Mrs. William H. Brokaw was held at the late home on West Front street, yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. J. Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which Mrs. Brokaw was a member, conducted the service, assisted by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, of the Congregational church, who was a close friend of the family. There were many floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

SLIGHT FIRE.

The city fire department was called out at noon yesterday, for a slight blaze in the Hand building on East Second street, almost opposite headquarters. A stove in the apartment of William Layton, on the second floor, ignited a wooden partition and the flames had made considerable headway before being discovered. The firemen ran across the street and put the blaze out with hand extinguishers, three of them being emptied. The damage is placed at fifty dollars.

Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 11, 1915.

COUNTY EFFICIENCY.

Under an act which was afterward declared unconstitutional, the voters of Union county in 1911 registered their belief that the old and cumbersome Board of Freeholders should go, and a small board of five members be substituted in its place. The following year a small board was elected, and then the law was tested, with the result that the larger body was declared by the Supreme Court to be the only one legally qualified to govern the county. All of these facts are well known to the people of Plainfield, especially as two of the men elected to the smaller body were from this city.

In the counties where small boards are in existence they have been found to provide economical and better administration of affairs, than was the case under the old method. But because of Elizabeth's known tendency to gobble up all the offices, there are many citizens of the county who were formerly in favor of the small board who have changed their minds and are now opposed to giving up the local representation provided by the large county governing body.

To overcome this latter objection and make it impossible for any one municipality of large population to control the selection of all candidates, Senator Rathbun, of Morris county, has drafted a bill which he will introduce in the Legislature which convenes tomorrow. This will make mandatory on all counties of the State the establishment of the small Board of Freeholders system, without the referendum. The bill provides for the election of freeholders by districts based upon population, which are to be laid off by appointees of the Supreme Court justices. All terms are to run for two years, and members of each board will go out of office simultaneously. The size of the Boards would be nine, seven, five and three, according to the population of the county and the salaries would range from $700 to $2,000.

The modern tendency is to do away with large and cumbersome public bodies. Nearly half of the people of the State are living under the commission form of government in the cities, and over half are governed by small Boards of Freeholders. Mr. Rathbun's act would place all counties under the method which has been found to be successful and economical wherever tried, and it is to be hoped that the legislation will become a reality.

Irvin S. Cobb, in the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post calls Belgium "Europe's Rag Doll," the title being given after he had picked up a ragged plaything which had been dropped by a childish refugee in King Albert's stricken kingdom. The condition of the people is described as pitiful, and what they must be suffering cannot be told in words. Probably we of this country are unable to realize the terrible destruction which has been brought about. The moving pictures of stricken Belgium tell a tale that no newspaper picture can convey. We of Plainfield have raised about $1,600 to aid the suffering Belgians and supply them with the barest necessities of life, and there is still plenty of opportunity to contribute to the local relief fund. Some time ago a well known resident said that he would give one hundred dollars to the cause, provided nine other men would do the same thing. The Daily Press has appealed for contributions for this purpose, but up to date only four men have agreed to give the amount. The list is still open, and nothing would give us greater pleasure, now that the wants of our own people seem to be fairly well taken care of, than to record the fact that the $1,000 has been raised. Who will be the next contributor?

WHEN WOMEN VOTED.

Our suffrage friends, perhaps, have never heard that there was a time when women voted in New Jersey. Mention has been made in these columns of Gordon's history of New Jersey, published in 1834, and that volume is the authority for the following statement, taken from that section which refers to the city of Newark:

An election in 1807 for determining the location of the court house, is still remembered by the inhabitants, as the most exciting recorded in their annals. The contest was between Newark and Days Hill. By a construction given to the State Constitution, the women were then suffered to vote, and they seem to have been so delighted with this privilege of exercising their wills, that they were unwilling to circumscribe it within the legal limit: many ladies voting, we are told, seven or eight times under various disguises.

While the example may have been taken from the men, it is to be hoped that when New Jersey women again receive the vote they will not try to duplicate the feat of their sex one hundred and eight years ago.

We have recorded with pride the splendid way in which Plainfield citizens have done their full share in aiding the various worthy causes for which appeals have been made this winter. The latest splendid tribute to the generosity of the people of this city is found in the report of the sale of Red Cross seals. In spite of the multitudinous demands made for all sorts of purposes, 71,000 seals have been disposed of, bringing in $710 gross, over $600 of which goes to the local anti-tuberculosis league, and the balance to the National Red Cross Society. Last year the gross sales amounted to $502. Surely all can take pride in being citizens of Plainfield.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

The directory of the astronomical observatory at Rutgers College has invited Mr. Earley to bring some of the High School students over to New Brunswick some night this week to see the Neloula and Orion Saturn and other interesting astronomical phenomena.

The current number of the American School Board Journal, a periodical of school administration, contains an article by Mr. Earley.

L. Elmer French, of the senior class, who was appointed recently by the student council to represent North Plainfield High School at the meeting of the delegates from the different schools which will take part in the series of interscholastic debates run by Rutgers College, was present at the meeting at Rutgers, Saturday. At that time the subjects for debate were chosen and other matters pertaining to the debates were decided upon. North Plainfield High School will have Bernardsville as its first opponent. The subjects will be announced later.

Herbert Peacock, of P. H. S., was elected president of the interscholastic Bible class held at the Y. M. C. A., on Friday evening, at its meeting. Warren Townley, of N. P. H. S., was elected vice-president.

The subject of the annual play which is given by the Boys' A. A., was brought up and discussed at the meeting of the Athletic Association this noon. Manager VanCamp also spoke for the purchase of new baseball suits for the team next season.

DEATH OF MARSHALL P. WILDER IN THE WEST

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 11—Marshall P. Wilder, entertainer and humorist, died here yesterday, after an illness of about two days. Heart disease and an attack of pneumonia were the causes, the attending physician said.

Mr. Wilder came to St. Paul, Monday, to fill an engagement at a local theatre. He was taken ill Thursday night and was unable to appear Friday. He seemed considerably improved Saturday, and until late that night his condition was not considered serious. About midnight he grew worse suddenly and died within a few hours.

The body will be sent East today.

PLANNING FOR THE STATE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION

The monthly meeting of the Tomlinson "Y," which meets on the second Tuesday evening of the month, has been postponed until next Tuesday evening, January 18. This is necessary so that the action of the local Union of Christian Endeavor concerning the united efforts of the two organizations in temperance matters may be discussed at the congress meeting of the C. E. Union.

As soon as this has been acted on, the committee which is arranging for the State Young People's convention, which will be held in this city on February 22, will have an idea of the plans on which they must work.

TO ENLARGE PERSONNEL OF THE COURT OF HONOR

At the meeting of the Boy Scout Council in the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock tonight, action will be taken to enlarge the personnel of the court of honor so that the examination of scouts for merit badges may proceed more promptly. It is planned to have every member of the council one of the court so that a large number of boys may be examined simultaneously.

There are many scouts who have filed applications for promotion in rank and the present court of honor is unable to handle all the examinations on the nights they meet. It is planned to have examining committees of the entire council so that half a dozen scouts can be examined at the same time on the same evening. A full attendance is requested as this is a matter of vital concern to the entire local scout organization. The matter of observing the National Boy Scout anniversary week will also be discussed.

QUIZ MARTINE CONCERNING HIS OBJECTIONS TO HAMPTON

Washington, Jan. 11.—Senator Martine, in explaining again his opposition to the appointment of George Hampton as collector at Camden, N. J., declares that he objects to the method of the nomination rather than the personality of the nominee.

Questioned by the Senate subcommittee having the matter in charge, the Senator made this explanation of his reasons for objecting to the appointment.

"The method was adopted for my personal humiliation, and confirmation would result in my personal belittlement," said Martine. "I do not, however, have to be fought with or spat in the face by a man to make him objectionable to me."

Repeating the gist of various conversations he had held with Secretary McAdoo on the subject, Martine told the committee that McAdoo had objected to his own candidate, John A. Burgan, on the ground that he was not a lawyer.

"I told the Secretary," continued Martine, "that not ten per cent. of such appointments had been lawyers and cited the case of Duffy. Duffy made' he told me, and I retorted that this was an excellent argument in favor of Burgan."

Further, he said that he and Senator Hughes had agreed to divide the State between them on the collectorships and this statement, he said later, Hughes had corroborated in the committee. The entire burden of Martine's argument was that Secretary McAdoo had acted in sympathy with persons who desired to humiliate Martine.

"Suppose the President were to nominate some other Democrat, what would you do?" he was asked in the committee.

"I'll cross that bridge when I come to it; I am fighting Hampton's confirmation for the present," he answered.

WANT NET WEIGHT CONTAINER LAW ENACTED

Trenton, Jan. 11.—County and city superintendents of the department of weights and measures have been called by Superintendent William L. Waldron to attend a meeting scheduled to be held here tomorrow. Various phases of the law will be considered together with several bills prepared for introduction in the Legislature.

One of the most important measures contemplated is embodied in what is known as the net weight container bill. This would require all articles of food put up in package form to have the net weight, measure or numerical count, as the case might be, marked conspicuously on the outside of the package. Superintendent Waldron is heartily in favor of the bill, which he thinks will prove of considerable benefit to housewives by enabling them to tell at a glance what they are getting for their money.

Another bill to be offered aims at bringing about uniformity in the weight per bushel of agricultural products in conformity with existing standards in adjacent States. It is also proposed to offer a measure providing for the testing and inspecting of gas, electric and water meters by officials of the department. A similar measure was offered at the last session, but was not reported, the committee to which it was referred holding that it was imperfectly drawn.

The introduction of such a measure would raise a question as to the advisability of intrusting the subject to the department of weights and measures instead of to the Public Utility Commission, which now exercises jurisdiction.

ARRANGE MEETING IN INTEREST OF PROHIBITION

A meeting in the interest of National Constitutional Prohibition will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Madison avenue, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, president of the union, will preside, and have charge of an attractive program, which will be as follows:

Song, "Out from the Hearthstone the Children Go;" prayer, Mrs. T. C. Godine; song, "We're Out for Prohibition;" reading, "A Prophetic Message," Mrs. E. A. Parse; address, "The Past: Milestones Passed in the Prohibition Movement," Rev. Dr. Blaney S. Hudson; a quiz, "Relation of the W. C. T. U. to the Movement for National Constitution Prohibition;" reading, "The Present Crisis," special music; address, "The Present: The Battle Today," Rev. J. Madison Hare; reading and adoption of the resolution endorsing National Constitutional Prohibition; address, "The Future: The Outlook—a Prophecy," Rev. J. Y. Broek; song, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds;" closing prayer, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson.

INSURANCE CO. SETTLES AUTO ACCIDENT SUITS

Godfrey J. Weinman, of Sandford avenue, who was named as a defendant in damage suits instituted by County Clerk James C. Calvert and Court Crier Henry J. Schoppe, as well as the Prince Street Garage, of Elizabeth, on account of an automobile accident at East Front and Berckman streets, October 29 last, has been notified by the Aetna Insurance Company, with whom Mr. Weinman carried an accident policy, that the suits have been settled.

Mr. Calvert and Mr. Schoppe each brought suit for $5,000 while the Prince Street Garage sought $1,500 damages. Mr. Weinman was not the real defendant, as he was protected by the Aetna Insurance Company. At the time of the accident, Mrs. Weinman was driving her husband's car, that machine and one owned by the Elizabeth garage, in which the county clerk and court crier were riding, colliding.

Mr. Calvert and Mr. Schoppe were both injured and were patients at Muhlenberg Hospital for a time. Mrs. Weinman escaped injury. John F. O'Neill, driver of the Elizabeth automobile, also escaped injury, but the machine was considerably damaged, as was also that of Mr. Weinman.

HOW PRESIDENT MEETS VISITORS

"Seeing" Nation's Executive Involved In Some Ceremony.

MR. TUMULTY THE BUFFER.

Secretary Careful to Inquire Exact Business of Callers—Before You Get to Mr. Tumulty's Office You Are Closely Scrutinized by Many Lynx Eyed Individuals.

"Seeing the president" is necessarily involved in some ceremony, some difficulty, or else the president could do nothing but "be seen."

President Wilson thought he could strip this of all ceremony, of all lets and hindrances, and made a sincere effort to do so. But—it can't be done! The holdover White House staff of secretaries told Secretary Tumulty the scheme of an open door to the president was impractical, if not impossible. But it was tried out just to establish the fact one way or the other, and after a short but sad experience the president's door was closed, to be opened only upon appointment, says E. W. Townsend in the New York Sun.

Secretary Tumulty bravely effected a compromise; his door is kept open—almost! Of course before one gets even to the secretary's office he is closely scrutinized by two uniformed orderlies upon entering the office lobby from the White House grounds and next is cautiously looked over by a man in civilian dress nearer the secretary's office, and in this way the merely curious are politely turned aside. But those who have or seriously think they have business with Mr. Tumulty can reach him, or at least reach his office, without much trouble or delay. This office is a big, comfortable room looking south to the Potomac and the Virginia hills, and the dozen or fifteen people generally found waiting there can move about easily without rubbing elbows or meet in groups without in their mysterious whisperings disclosing generally the mighty import of their missions.

No "Secrets" Are Allowed.

If it is a visitor's first White House call he confidentially approaches Mr. Tumulty in his turn and shillingly unfolds his desire to "see the president for a few minutes."

The secretary wants to know the purpose of the sought for interview. Frequently the caller is not inclined to reveal this interesting secret. Nothing doing! Under polite secretarial pressure he yields up the secret wish, or thought, or purpose, or plan, or whatever has hastened his footsteps to the White House, and then ninety times in a hundred, probably, it is discovered that he should unbosom himself to some cabinet officer, not to the president. If the little preliminary examination discloses the fact that the caller has a legitimate purpose which can best be forwarded by an interview with the president or is one the president would want to talk with for any reason the engagement book is consulted and an appointment made for the next day or the next or possibly the next week.

And a Senator Raged.

Occasionally the president upsets the schedule. He won't see somebody he was expected to see or will see somebody he was not expected to see. An experiment of my own illustrates this. A high school class, the first high school established in the factory district of Newark, N. J., was in Washington, and I was having the time of my life showing the class members some of the sights and listening to their comments. I piloted the crowd to the White House offices, so that they could at least see where the president worked, and as some caller left his office the president through the open doorway saw my regiment. He sent for a messenger to learn "who those children are." He was informed. "First class, first high school," etc., and told the astonished messenger to bring the youngsters in. Picture the scene! Without even hoping to see the president they were to shake hands with him—speak with him! Joy! There was another side of the medal, so to say. We entered and departed from the president's private office by a door connecting with the main corridor, but while the children were receiving their smile and handshake from the president, behind another door, that opening from Mr. Tumulty's office, a very important senator sat, alternating glances of rage at his watch and at Tumulty. What was delaying him, he'd like to know?

Just now the president is withstanding the usual heavy session opening assault. But the long siege is ended: the trenches issue forth their devoted heroes; it's the bayonet or clubbed rifle now in the charge on the White House. All for what? Curiosity is the prime animating the charge in many cases. Office seeking in a much less degree than is generally supposed, because the man who gets to the president on an office seeking quest solely must first flimflam Tumulty. That cannot honestly be described as an easy job. It has before been remarked that the president's secretary was not born yesterday. This fact now being of common knowledge, the office seeker goes elsewhere, to his "member" or to the departments.

THE BIG REDWOODS.

One Tree Cut In 1900 Was Nearly Fourteen Centuries Old

The biggest stands of redwood timber are in Del Norte, Humboldt and Mendocino counties, Cal., but there are isolated groups as far north as the Chetco river in Curry county, Ore., and as far south as the Santa Lucia mountains, Monterey county. The redwood belt is from twenty to forty miles wide, the trees growing on the west slopes of the coast range.

The enormous height and diameter of the redwood is due to the great rainfall in the autumn and winter, from thirty to sixty inches, and to the sea fogs which bathe the coast in the summer. There are two types of the redwood, those which grow on the slopes and those on the flats or bottom lands. The slope redwood is the common type, and it grows mixed with other woods, such as red fir, tan bark oak and white fir. As the slopes become moderate, the altitude lower, the soil deeper and the water supply better the redwood steadily gains on the other species until on the rich flats there is no other tree.

The extreme form of the redwood flat is along the Eel river, and here the trees attain their greatest known height and clear length. Under best conditions these trees grow to be 350 feet high, with a diameter of twenty feet. Most of the redwoods cut are from 400 to 800 years old, and the oldest tree found during the government investigation in 1900 was 1,373 years old.

The tree when normal has a straight, slightly tapered bole clear for more than 100 feet and a crown of horizontal branches that may occupy from one-third to one-half of its total length. The enemies of redwood are few, and it suffers from them less than other trees. The wind can scarcely uproot it, insects seem to do it little harm, and fungi seldom affects it. Even fire, the great enemy of all trees, though it may occasionally kill whole stands of young redwood growth, is unable to penetrate the fireproof sheathing of shaggy bark with which the old trees protect themselves.

Heroic Conclusion.

The Swede knew that he was incompetent, but he needed the job very badly indeed. The farmer saw at a glance that he was a green hand, but he was urgently in need of help. So an arrangement was made. After dinner the farmer sent his new hand down to plow a field and a few moments later followed him. Peering from the concealment of a clump of bushes, he observed for some time the frantic but futile efforts of his hand to run a straight furrow. Finally the Swede came to a discouraged halt, mopped his brow and addressed the horses wearily.

"Oh, well, then, go wherever you please!" he said. "It all han got to be plowed anyway."—Everybody's.

They Keep the Keys.

Visitors to Tangier and other settlements of Morocco notice the keys that are carefully kept in safety in the houses of some of the families of ancient descent. These keys belong to the houses in Spain once occupied by the Moors before their expulsion from their homes many centuries ago. The Spaniards occupy these old houses, but the descendants of the Moorish owners still guard the keys in the hope that the day will come when they can return to Granada and once more resume control of the property from which they were driven.

Horrors of Naval Warfare.

Naval warfare had its horrors before the day of the mine and the submarine. Lady Dorothy Nevill, for instance, noted evidence given by a naval officer of the Nelson school: "Which was the most solemn and awful moment of a naval battle?" he was asked by a lady. "The moment before the battle, madam, when they sprinkled the sand on the decks to absorb the blood that was to flow," was the reply.—London Chronicle.

The Barrel.

The barrel is of great antiquity, and in point of time the cooperage industry is venerable. The good book mentions "slack barrel" work, and nearly 2,000 years ago Pliny, the "special" writer of his time, devoted an article to the subject. With all his research he could locate the origin of the industry in place only. Even in his time it was so ancient that the beginning was hidden in the maze of years.

Unique Decorative Effects.

"Pyrography is not as popular as it used to be," said Mrs. Wasserby.

"No," replied Mrs. Judkins, "but Mr. Judkins still does a little of it now and then."

"You surprise me. I had no idea that he had any artistic inclinations."

"He hasn't. He merely leaves lighted cigars lying on chair arms and the edges of tables."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

ZUDORA

Episode Six Shown at Proctor's January 13.
"THE CASE OF THE McWINTER FAMILY."

At the beginning of the installment of "Zudora," to be shown on Wednesday, the flames were sketching on the wall with their flickering shadows as Mrs. McWinter sat with her little daughter sewing. Near the reading lamp back of her McWinter sat. As his wife turned, and spoke to him, he put down his paper with a surly growl and answered her curtly, and the look that came over her face was distressed and uncomprehending. Presently the little daughter kissed her father and mother good-night and went to bed.

It was the next evening that McWinter's jealousy finally got the better of him and he determined to do something about the situation with which he found himself confronted. He came home early, kissed his pretty wife and hugged his daughter, then left them and went upstairs to wash. By the time he was down again, their boarder had come home. This boarder was a young man, who was employed in McWinter's chemical works, and it was at Mrs. McWinter's suggestion that he had been allowed to come into their house as a paying guest. This first aroused the suspicions of the head of the house. As Mrs. McWinter said, when it was too late, "Oh, if I had only told him that Jim was my brother. We kept it secret, though, because we wanted Jim to get along on his own merits, and not on my husband's pull."

Meanwhile, upstairs, McWinter was washing his hands as the new boarder came up the steps and into the house. Before going upstairs he went into the parlor, and when the husband and father came down from his ablutions he found the family boarder leaning over the table looking at some pictures with an arm round wife and daughter. That was too much. McWinter resolved to do something, and began planning.

Going to a hut near his factory, McWinter is soon busily engaged in fixing the catch so that it locks the door from the outside and thus keeps anyone, who is inside when the door closes, a prisoner till help comes. Over the door McWinter now builds a small shelf which is held in place by hinges. From the bottom of it a small piece of wood projects. This operates in such a way that when the door is pushed in the shelf is tilted back towards the wall, thus holding in place whatever may happen to be on it. However, when the door, after being opened, swings too again, and, in swinging back collides with the piece of wood which projects from the bottom of the shelf, the shelf itself, in turn, is tilted downwards and dumps on the stone floor whatever happens to have been on it. If whatever happens to have been on it were a glass bottle, McWinter concludes that the bottle would smash to bits.

With this idea in his mind he goes back to his chemical works and from the laboratory, when the backs of the two chemists are turned, he takes a bottle from the white label of which in large red letters the one word "Poison" stares. We see him now carefully conceal this in the pocket of his corduroy shooting jacket, and hurry home. As he goes up the steps of his house he calls his pet hunting dog from the kennel and goes indoors for his gun.

"I hate going hunting alone," McWinter says to his wife. "Do you suppose Jim would care to go with me?"

"Why not ask him?" Mrs. McWinter inquires. "He's upstairs getting ready to go out."

McWinter did. Jim was willing, but for some unaccountable reason Mrs. McWinter shivered with apprehension as she watched them go down the steps and cross the fields together. Why it was she could not say then, but afterwards she declared she knew that one of those two, she would never see return alive. And that proved to be the case.

Meanwhile McWinter and Jim were crossing the field together in earnest conversation concerning the prospects of good hunting. "By the way, I think I left an old hunting bag of mine in that hut yonder," McWinter explains as he hurries ahead and going into the hut adjusts the bottle of poison on top of the little shelf, propping the door open with a stick of firewood. His dog had followed him and now is crouched down beside McWinter, who is waiting for Jim's arrival. His intention is to get Jim in the hut, kick the piece of wood out of the way and get outside himself, knowing well that the bottle on the shelf above would crash to the door and release inside the hut a volume of deadly fumes. Suddenly Jim appeared.

With a yelp the dog crouching beside McWinter jumped to meet the newcomer, and struck down the stick of wood as he leapt through the door, which closed with a bang, just escaping the hind heels of the hurrying animals. When Jim opened the door after a leisurely interval, for naturally it never occurred to him what was going on inside or that the door was even locked by its accidental closing, McWinter lay dead. A half hour later Jim was arrested, charged with the commission of a diabolical crime. The news spread. A mob gathered. Meanwhile, Mrs. McWinter had called on the far-famed Hassam Ali, mystic detective, to investigate the case and save her brother from the electric chair. And to Zudora, his niece, Hassam Ali confided the case. At once she calls on John Storm, her young lawyer sweetheart, for aid in solving the mystery, for each success brings their wedding day nearer.

With Storm's help she does so. After examining the shelf and finding broken glass on the floor, she makes a few enquiries and just as she has solved the problem, she learns that a mob is lynching Jim. Hastening over road and field she persuades them to listen, convinces them of the truth, and the man is freed.

- Proctor's Theatre -

The series of photo-plays which Messrs. Proctor and Sanderson have secured for presentation at Proctor's Theatre, includes William A. Brady's great production of "The Pit," which will be shown at the popular West Front street playhouse today and tomorrow. It is conceded to be a masterpiece of the photographer's art, and with Wilton Lackaye in his original role of Curtis Jawdin, the story will lose none of its effectiveness. Gail Kane and Milton Sills are also in the cast. A synopsis of the play is as follows:

Curtis Jawdin, successful real estate dealer, is introduced to the Cressler family. He goes into a bear movement in wheat with Cressler, which is highly successful. Jawdin meets Laura Cressler at a theatre box party and they become friends. In this scene is shown an entire theatre—a stage within a stage.

Sheldon Corthell, an artist is in love with Laura Cressler, but Jawdin is the successful suitor. Laura is affectionate but Jawdin is heart and soul in his wheat speculations and unconsciously neglects Laura. She accidentally meets Corthell and in a fit of pique at her husband renews the old friendship.

While Jawdin is away Corthell spends the evening with Laura. Corthell's ability as an organist appeals to her imagination. They are abruptly interrupted by Jawdin's entrance. He triumphantly announces that he has made five hundred thousand dollars. He greets Corthell cordially and in the midst of the conversation falls asleep. Corthell leaves. Laura compares him with her sleeping husband and pities her neglected self.

Jawdin attempts to control a gigantic bull movement in wheat. He has a powerful adversary in Calvin Crookes.

In the fever and turmoil, Jawdin neglects Laura.

The bull corner is finally attacked by Crookes and the strongest scenes are now enacted in Jawdin and Cressler's office and on the floor of the Pit. Jawdin has pledged every dollar he possesses but cannot stem the overwhelming tide. Cressler, broken down, commits suicide.

In the midst of his losing fight, Jawdin is stunned by the announcement of the suspension of the firm. Crookes, elated at his success, flips a dollar bill in Jawdin's face, saying, "Here's a dollar to buy your breakfast in the morning."

In the meantime, Corthell has persuaded Laura to elope with him and as she is preparing to leave, Jawdin, broken down in spirit, appears, and her better instincts prompt her to stay by the side of her husband, who now needs her. Corthell sees the futility of his case and leaves. At that moment, the newsboys are crying in the street, "Wuxtra! Wuxtra! Curtis Jawdin, Great Failure." The noises arouse him, he says, "Failure? No! Success!" and folds Laura in his arms.

Y. M. FIVE TROUNCED BY NEW YORK TEAM

Washington Heights Association Team Win Easily Over Locals.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. basketball team met defeat at the hands of the strong Washington Heights five on the latter's court, Saturday night, the final score being 57 to 38. The local players were never in the running with their opponents, who, handicapped by the size of the court, passed and shot at will, making 26 points in the initial period and 31 in the last half.

No sooner than the ball was put into play at the start, it was sent under the basket and Gronean, playing center, put it in for the first score. For fully ten minutes the visiting aggregation did not get a look at a shot and Washington had scored nine baskets, when they finally made a field goal. Taylor and Moulton each had a try from the fifteen foot mark during the first few minutes of play, but failed. The score at the end of the half was 26 to 14.

In the second half Ricketts relieved Dunning at center and Brynarski took Burner's place. Swain, playing forward for the home team, starred in this period, scoring seven goals from the field. Several times after the ball had been played at center the home team would carry it down for a goal without interference from their opponents. Taylor made seven field goals and Moulton was credited with five. This team will play the locals a return game on the local court on Saturday, February 27.

N. P. H. S. GIRLS' FIVE WINS BY TWO TALLIES

Perth Amboy Team Puts up Strong Fight on Saengerbund Hall Court.

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball team won a hard fought game from the Perth Amboy combination, in Saengerbund Hall, Saturday afternoon, by the score of 11 to 9. One of the visiting forwards, Miss Conquest, who has played here before, gave the local guards some trouble and she alone almost forced the borough team to defeat. The game was featured by many fouls, but neither team could count for many, the home team getting seven and Miss Conquest scoring five from the fifteen foot mark.

The first half was played with lines and there was very little scoring done from the field, as both teams only totalled eleven points in this half, the count being 6 to 5 in favor of North Plainfield. The last period was played without lines and the visiting aggregation displayed some fine teamwork, but could not obtain the lead. Both Miss Burtis and Miss Spencer made one field goal and the former made four goals, while Miss Spencer dropped in three. Miss Conquest made all the points for her team, getting a pair of the two-point variety and five fouls.

FIRST GIRLS' GAME FOR CITY TITLE THIS WEEK

This week ushers in the first interscholastic match between the city and borough High School girls' teams for the city supremacy. The game will take place in the Plainfield High School gym and present indications are that there is going to be a tight struggle for the initial decision. Both teams will present their strongest lineups for this game.

A slight comparison may be made between the teams as both have met the Cranford High School sextet. The boroughites went to Cranford and brought back a victory with a few points to spare, while Saturday, P. H. S. defeated Cranford on the local court by a score of 20 to 0.

CLINTON AND BRUGGY RANKED HIGH AT FINISH OF LEAGUE

Jimmy Clinton, the baseball star who has performed in this city on several occasions, finished in second place in the individual standings of the New York State Basketball League, which disbanded last week. Clinton has held this position almost all year and had a total of 182 points to his credit, getting 65 field goals and 52 fouls in the 27 games played. Clinton played forward on the Cohoes' team.

Frank Bruggy, who played guard for the Gloversville aggregation, advanced from eleventh to ninth position in the final standing, with 52 of the two-point variety and 33 fouls, for a total of 137 points. He is now playing with a fast Jersey City combination.

TRAVELING WEEK FOR N. P. H. S. AGGREGATION

Manager Duclos VanMate, of the North Plainfield High School basketball team, has arranged for two out of town trips this week and the borough fans will not see the boys' team perform in Saengerbund Hall this week. Wednesday afternoon the team will go to Morristown and play the Morristown School team. Last year these two teams met for the first time on the Morristown court and the home team scored a six-point win, so the North Plainfield boys are looking for revenge. Coach Collier will accompany the team.

A new team on the borough list will be taken on Friday night, when the team will go to West Orange and meet the High School team of that place. This school has never before been on a borough schedule, but has a good reputation for turning out basketball teams.

HOPE CHAPEL BOYS WON OVER MT. PLEASANT FIVE

The Hope Chapel Boys' Club basketball team defeated the Mt. Pleasant five on the Fourth street court, Saturday night, by a score of 37 to 23. FINE TENNIS BUILDING.

Payne Whitney formally opened yesterday a $250,000 court tennis building on his estate at Manhasset, L. I. It is the most costly and elaborately appointed structure of its kind in the world. In addition to a perfect court for indoor sport, a swimming pool, Turkish baths and other comforts for physical training during the cold weather have been added to the luxurious appointments of the building. Under a glass roof with perfect sunlight, the opening of this modern theatre of sport was inaugurated yesterday in the presence of probably the largest aggregation of amateur sportsmen ever assembled.

HOPE CHAPEL SCORES ANOTHER EASY WIN

Milltown Aggregation Not Fast Enough for Fourth Street Combination.

The Hope Chapel basketball team scored another easy victory, Saturday night, on the chapel court, when the M. E. church team, of Milltown, went down to a 45 to 27 defeat. The home players were the victors from the start and the fine shooting of Heron and Walls proved too much for the visitors. Tommy Heron also starred from the fifteen foot mark, dropping in nine free tries.

The home team started off with a rush and played their opponents off their feet. They obtained a big lead from the start which was never overcome. The score at the end of the first half was 21 to 13. Hope scored three more points in the last half than in the first, while the visitors went their score of the initial period one point better.

Walls scored eight baskets which was the highest of the game, while Heron made a half dozen of the two-point variety. For the visitors the Hermann brothers were the main scorers, getting twelve field goals between them.

VAN EMBURGH STILL HIGH LOCAL PINNER

Anchor Player Leads All Plainelders in Masonic League Standing.

The official averages of the Masonic Bowling League, compiled by Secretary W. B. Martin, give Wright, of the Essex team, his position with an average of 175.16 in 21 games played to date. A pair of Tyrian players, who have greatly helped their team to get a tight hold on the top rung, follow the Essex pinner, while Plainfield's highest is VanEmburgh, of the Anchor lodge, who ranks fifth with an average of 172.2. He has played in nine games.

John Cose, who has taken part in eleven games for the Anchor cause, is close behind VanEmburgh with an average of 171. Captain V. W. Nash, Sr., is the first Jerusalem player, with a mark of 157.1. The official averages follow:

LOCALS WERE EASY FOR LEAGUE LEADERS

Passaic Routed P. H. S. Five By a Score of 62 to 18.

Passaic, Jan. 11—Spectacular team work and invulnerable defence gave Passaic, leader of the Northern New Jersey Interscholastic League, an easy victory over Plainfield High School's basketball team, Saturday afternoon, on the Passaic court, 61 points to 18.

Plainfield proved a speedy combination and handled the ball well when in possession, but because of the fine defense perfected by Passaic, had to resort to long distance shooting, and missed many tries at the basket. Passaic's offensive bewildered the visitors. Captain McLean and Charles Prescott scored from all angles.

MOVIE SHOW FOR HOLY CROSS TEAM

Gridiron Notables Will Conduct a Benefit Performance in the Astor.

Following the example set by diamond notables, who annually obtain their winter sustenance from footlight rooters, football warriors bearing the red and white of the Holy Cross club, Saturday night, decided to "take to the spotlight" to make up a deficiency in the treasury. Secretary Joe Green read his annual report at the meeting, which was the yearly session of the organization and, although he acquainted the members with the sorrowful news as easy as possible, those present were aroused to sudden activity and ways and means were discussed to raise the decrepancy.

The idea of holding a benefit performance of some nature in a local playhouse was "put on the carpet," and after some lengthy deliberation the members finally decided to run a "movie" show in the Astor Theatre, January 21, that theatre having been turned over to the club for both afternoon and evening performances by Manager Joseph M. Coven. Among the features to be shown for the benefit of motion picture devotees and those inclined to help pull the club out of "a hole," will be a screenic reproduction of the Holy Cross-U. S. S. Wyoming gridiron contest played on Cricket Field in the fall. Tickets have been printed for the event and the athletes expect to entertain full 2,000 of their friends at the theatre on that date. Another meeting will be held next Saturday night in Manager "Doc" Doyle's studio, when further plans will be discussed.

The following members were present at the meeting: Manager "Doc" Doyle, Assistant Managers Joseph J. Green, C. N. Amerman, L. R. Harding, Robert Hamilton, and players Coyle, Bremble, Mair, Carty, Howarth, Cumming, L. Manning, Webster, T. Ricketts, J. Caulfield and Coffey.

UMPIRES GET SALARY CUT.

Umpires in the major and minor leagues are very much alarmed over the crushing news that has been sent out that their salaries next year will be cut almost to nothing. The National and American Leagues, it is said, will trim as much as $400 off each man's yearly stipend, and the minor magnates are going to use the pruning knife to such an extent that the capable men are preparing to look for other jobs. Said a well-known official last night: "I can't see why the players should get all the money. We are worth the amount paid us, and more, too. Instead of getting a rise in salary, they want to cut us. I, for one, will not stand for it."

FRED HALL WINNER OF BLIND CONTEST

Scores 69 out of Possible 90 and Gets a Little Pig as Reward.

Fred Hall won the pig in the Elks' blind bowling contest Saturday night, with a score of 69 out of a possible 90. The contest was very interesting as some of the best pinners of the club could not find the centre of the alleys and put the ball into the gutter time after time. Henry Vosseler was the best at "guttering" the ball, sending it off the alley fifteen times in succession.

A curtain was hung across the drives at the foul line and the pinners shot the ball at random under the curtain. Each player bowled three frames. Banks and Townley tied for second place, each having a score of 59, while Jack Todd received a box for the consolation prize. His score was 14 and Elmer Cutting went him one point higher. There were 124 entries.

BUSY SWIRL FOR BOWLING CIRCUITS

Plenty of Alley Competition for Local Teams This Week.

Another busy week is in store for local pinners in the several leagues that are now in full swing and there are games booked in all the circuits that will keep the teams going all week. One postponement has occurred in the Elks' Senior League, that one being between Plainfield and Rutherford at the latter place. The game will not be played this week, which leaves the local team idle. Rahway and Jersey City Seniors will start the week off tomorrow night at Jersey City and they will be followed by Newark and New Brunswick, Wednesday night, and the last matches of the week will be played Thursday night with Paterson at Elizabeth and New York at Hoboken.

Plainfield Junior Elks will entertain Jersey City, Thursday night, and a match between Paterson and New Brunswick at the latter place will be played tonight. Wednesday night will see Newark at Elizabeth for three games.

The local Eagles' quintet is due to play two matches this week, after a long period of idleness. Tonight a postponed match will be played at Elizabeth and next Friday, Newark will play on the Second street drives. Somerville will go to Elizabeth for three games Wednesday night and on the following night Rahway will play Progress at Newark.

Two matches are scheduled for the Columbus Club tournament this week, the Robins meeting the Peacocks tonight, and the Doves and Crows will meet Thursday night.

At the Park Club, the weekly competition will be held, Thursday night the handicap five-back and Friday the handicap ten-pin.

QUEEN CITY HOCKEYISTS WHITEWASH WESTFIELDERS

The Queen City hockey team defeated a Westfield aggregation on Lambert pond, Westfield, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 4 to 0. The game was an easy victory for the local players, the ball being in their opponents' territory all of the time, while the Plainfield goal tenders were idle the greater part of the time.

Two points were made in each half, Coughlin getting one goal and Wallie Southard, playing rover, scoring three times. Next Saturday afternoon the Queen City seven will meet Marsh's team on Debele's pond.

The teams lined up as follows:

Plainfield	Westfield

HARD GAMES FOR P. H. S.

The Plainfield High School basketball team is booked to play two hard games this week, one being at home and the other out of town. Tomorrow afternoon the Woodbridge five will be seen in the local gym and Saturday, Manager Zelmas has arranged to play in Easton, against the High School team of that place. Both of these games are hard ones and barring accidents, should put the team in good shape for its first interscholastic encounter one week from next Saturday.

W. H. WIEGAND'S FUNERAL.

A large number of relatives and friends attended the funeral services of William H. Wiegand, held this afternoon from his late home, 352 Sumner avenue. Rev. Edward S. Ralston, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, officiated. Burial was made at Basking Ridge.

DRAWN ON PETIT JURY.

TO ELECT OFFICERS.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein Society is to be held tomorrow evening at Saengerbund Hall, the borough. Reports will be received, officers elected, and several amendments to the constitution and by-laws considered.

BOROUGH COUNCIL TO MEET.

The borough Common Council will meet in a special meeting this evening, at which time several matters of importance will be discussed. Several of the items of business left over from the meeting of last Monday will be disposed of at this time.

PARENT-TEACHER MEETING.

The Parent-Teacher Association of the Irving and Jefferson Schools will meet in the auditorium of the latter institution tomorrow afternoon at 3:30.

Miss Mabel M. Conover, of Jackson avenue, the borough, has returned home after a week spent at Whitestone, L. I.

"GROH, GROH, I WANT HIM SOH—OH, DON'T SAY NOH!" SINGS BRESNAHAN TO GARRY

Roger Bresnahan, after a brave but futile attempt last week to soften Garry Hermann's heart, returned to Chicago for another little rest. As soon as he gets his breath back he will return to the attack, the burden of his song being, "Groh, Groh, I want him soh—oh, don't say noh!" Just to show that he is fearless, Roj. has also asked Garry for Rube Benton, and got the same stony stare.

STEAM LOCOMOTIVE READY FOR DISCARD?

Is the steam locomotive soon to be in the discard?

Electricity already is displacing steam for motive power over a great stretch of 440 main line miles of the St. Paul system, the greatest electrification in the world, costing $13,000,000. Moreover officials of the St. Paul say: "It is possible that a few years hence will see the entire line from Chicago to the Pacific coast electrically operated."

Enormous development of electric energy from the mountain torrents has been necessary for the electrification of the St. Paul's main line from Avery to Harlowtown, in Montana. The main power plant is Great Falls, Montana, one of several owned by the Montana Power Company, with which the St. Paul has made long term contracts for power.

The trains will be hauled by giant electric locomotives now being built. The passenger locomotives will be able to whisk a train weighing 650 tons up a two per cent grade at a speed of 32 miles an hour without slow-up near the summit.

WE do not take this space to tell you how cheaply we print. We do not want that kind of printing.

The kind of printing we do, however, cannot be bought for less, anywhere.

LOCAL MAN WILL SPEAK AT STATE CONVENTION

J. Phillip Bird, of this city, will be one of the speakers at the banquet to be held in connection with the annual convention of the Manufacturers of New Jersey at the Washington House, Newark, tomorrow. More than 700 manufacturers from all parts of the State will attend and among the questions to be discussed are the effects of the recently enacted Federal legislation regulating business, the establishment of a Federal trade commission and the policies which are likely to be followed by that body; the Committee on Industrial Relations and the effect of its work on manufacturing interests.

Mr. Bird is president of the New Jersey association and many other Plainfielders interested in this branch of the nation's commerce will probably be among those who are present at the convention.

RECREATION NOTES

The Dressmaking and Needlecraft Clubs will meet this evening at the Stillman School. Anyone interested in embroidery or any department of needlecraft will be welcome.

The meeting of the Hebrew Social Club will be held in the auditorium of Stillman School this evening. The first part of the evening will be given over to a rehearsal of "The Revolt," a play to be presented by the club later in the season.

The Italian Club will meet at Lincoln School. There will be a rehearsal of "The Charms of Music." Plans for a checker tournament to be held Friday evening will be discussed.

Tomorrow evening the young men's gymnasium class will meet at the High School gymnasium. Mr. Patch is in charge. An enjoyable hour is spent in the gymnasium with apparatus and basketball. Later in the evening the swimming pool is opened and all may enjoy a swim.

The Cosmos Club for the colored young men of Plainfield, will meet tomorrow night at the Stillman School.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The High School boys' Friday night Bible class and suppers were resumed last Friday night, and Edward Glaentzer, the new boys' secretary, was in charge. There were forty-four presents from the city and borough schools and after the supper, which began at 6 o'clock, the usual three classes were held. The teachers are J. Henry Crane, James McClymont and Edward Glaentzer, who is taking Mr. Bingeman's old class.

At Friday night's meeting the officers for 1915 were elected, Herbert Peacock being selected president. Warren Townley, of North Plainfield, was chosen vice president, and Sheldon Coudray, secretary-treasurer. The meetings will be held every Friday night and supper will be served promptly at 6 o'clock. Bible study begins about 6:30 and classes dismissed at 7 o'clock.

G. A. Reeder, army and navy secretary of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., will speak at the annual meeting and banquet of the local association, which will be held Thursday night, January 21. Mr. Reeder will take for his subject, "Y. M. C. A. Work Among Sailors and Soldiers at Home and Abroad." He is thoroughly familiar with the work in the army camps in Europe at the present time and tells an interesting story concerning the conditions and the work of the association on the firing line.

SAURER SHOP BUSY.

The recent heavy orders received at the local plant of the Saurer Motor Truck Company have been supplemented by a number of others and the shop is now running on an overtime schedule. It was stated at the office of the company, today, that the present force would be moderately increased in the very near future. An order accepted last week called for the delivery of ten 5-ton trucks in ten days and these are now being shipped.

SAYS UNION COUNTY JAIL IS A "HOTEL DE LUXE"

Elizabeth, Jan. 11—The reference of Charles L. Stonaker, secretary of the State Charities Aid and Prison Reform Association, to the Union county jail as a "hotel de luxe," seems destined to provoke a lively discussion. Mr. Stonaker criticized the system employed in handling the county prisoners in an interview in which he scored the proposed jail educational plan of Sheriff George C. Otto, and declared that inmates do not want instruction, but should have work.

Sheriff Otto's plan was referred to a special committee of the Board of Freeholders and turned down because it was found that there was no law giving the Freeholders power to engage and pay an instructor a salary. It is now proposed that an enabling act be passed at the present session of the Legislature.

CHAPTER VII.

The Man on the Other Bank.

SMOKE BELLEW and Shorty parted company on the upper Klondike. Shorty's task was to return down the Klondike to Dawson to record some claims they had staked.

Smoke, with the dog team, turned south. His quest was Surprise lake and the mythical Two Cabins. His traverse was to cut and cross the unknown region over the mountains to the Stewart river. Here somewhere, rumor persisted, was Surprise lake, surrounded by jagged mountain and glaciers, its bottom paved with gold.

Old timers, it was said, whose very names were forgotten in the frosts of earlier years, had dived into the icy waters of Surprise lake and fetched lump gold to the surface in both hands. But the water was too cold. Some died in the water, being pulled up dead. Others died later of consumption. And one who had gone down never did come up.

All survivors had planned to return and drain the lake, yet none had ever gone back. Disaster always smote them. One man fell into an air hole below Forty Mile; another was killed and eaten by his dogs; a third was crushed by a falling tree. And so the tale ran. Surprise lake was a hoodoo; its location was unremembered, and the gold still paved its undrained bottom.

Two Cabins, no less mythical, was more definitely located. "Five sleeps" up the McQuestion river from the Stewart stood two ancient cabins. So ancient were they that they must have been built before ever the first known gold hunter had entered the Yukon basin. Wandering moose hunters, whom even Smoke had met and talked with, claimed to have found the two cabins in the old days, but to have sought vainly for the mine which those early adventurers must have worked.

"I wish you was goin' with me," Shorty said wistfully at parting. "Just because you got the Indian bug ain't no reason for to go pokin' into trouble. They's no gettin' away from it, that's loco country you're bound for. The hoodoo's sure on it, from the first flip to the last call."

"It's all right, Shorty," replied Smoke. "I'll make the round trip and be back in Dawson in six weeks."

A week later Smoke found himself among the jumbled ranges south of Indian river. On the divide from the Klondike he had abandoned the sled and packed his wolf dogs. The six big huskies each carried fifty pounds, and on his own back was an equal burden. Through the soft snow he led the way, packing it down under his snowshoes, and behind, in single file, toiled the dogs.

For days he wandered through a chaos of canyons and divides which did not yield themselves to any rational topographical plan.

Then came a mountain storm that blew a blizzard across the riffraff of high and shallow divides. Above timber line, fireless, for two days he struggled blindly to find lower levels. On the second day he came out upon the rim of an enormous palisade. So thickly drove the snow that he could not see the base of the wall, nor dared he attempt the descent. He rolled himself in his robes and huddled the dogs about him in the depths of a snowdrift, but did not permit himself to sleep.

In the morning, the storm spent, he crawled out to investigate. A quarter of a mile beneath him, beyond all mistake, lay a frozen, snow covered lake. About it, on every side, rose jagged peaks. It answered the description. Blindly he had found Surprise lake.

"Well named," he muttered an hour later as he came out upon its margin. A clump of aged spruce was the only woods. In his way to it he stumbled upon three graves, snow buried, but marked by hand hewn headposts and undecipherable writing.

On the edge of the woods was a small, ramshackle cabin. He pulled the latch and entered. In a corner, on what had once been a bed of spruce bough, still wrapped in mangy furs that had rotted to fragments, lay a skeleton. The last visitor to Surprise lake, was Smoke's conclusion as he picked up a lump of gold as large as his doubled fist. Beside the lump was a pepper can filled with nuggets of the size of walnuts, rough surfaced, showing no sign of wash.

So true had the tale run that Smoke accepted without question that the source of the gold was the lake's bottom. Under many feet of ice and inaccessible, there was nothing to be done, and at midday, from the rim of the palisade, he took a farewell look back and down at his find.

"It's all right, Mr. Lake," he said. "You just keep right on staying there. I'm coming back to drain you—if that hoodoo doesn't catch me. I don't know how I got here, but I'll know by the way I go out."

In a little valley beside a frozen stream and under benificent spruce trees he built a fire four days later. Somewhere in that white smudge he had left behind him was Surprise lake—somewhere, he knew not where, for a hundred hours of drifting and struggle through blinding, driving snow had concealed his course from him, and he knew not in what direction lay behind.

The storm had passed, and it had turned clear and cold. The creek he was on was natural in appearance and trended, as it should, toward the southwest. Half a day's journey down the creek brought him to the valley of a larger stream, which he decided was the McQuestion. Here he shot a moose, and once again each wolfdog carried a full fifty pound pack of meat.

As he turned down the McQuestion he came upon a sled trail. The late snows had drifted over, but underneath it was well packed by travel. His conclusion was that two camps had been established on the McQuestion and that this was the connecting trail. Evidently Two Cabins had been found, and it was the lower camp, so he headed down the stream.

It was 40 below zero when he camped that night, and he fell asleep wondering who were the men who had rediscovered the Two Cabins and if he would fetch it next day. At the first hint of dawn he was under way, easily following the half obliterated trail.

And then it came, the unexpected, leaping out upon him on a bend of the river. It seemed to him that he heard and felt simultaneously. The crack of the rifle came from the right, and the bullet, tearing through and across the shoulders of his drill parka and woolen coat, pivoted him half around with the shock of its impact. He staggered on his twisted snowshoes to recover balance and heard a second crack of the rifle. This time it was a clean miss. He did not wait for more, but plunged across the snow for the sheltering trees of the bank a hundred feet away.

He climbed the bank, the dogs floundering behind, and dodged in among the trees and brush. Slipping out of his snowshoes, he wallowed forward at full length and peered cautiously out. Nothing was to be seen. Whoever had shot at him was lying quiet among the trees of the opposite bank.

"If something doesn't happen pretty soon," he muttered at the end of half an hour, "I'll have to sneak away and build a fire or freeze my feet."

He crawled back a few yards, packed down the snow, danced a jig that sent the blood back into his feet and managed to endure another half hour. Then from down the river he heard the unmistakable jingle of dog bells. Peering out, he saw a sled round the bend. Only one man was in it, straining at the gee pole and urging the dogs along.

The effect on Smoke was one of shock, for it was the first human he had seen since he parted from Shorty three weeks before. His next thought was of the potential murderer concealed on the opposite bank.

Without exposing himself Smoke whistled warningly. The man did not hear and came on rapidly. Again and more sharply Smoke whistled. The man whoaed his dogs, stopped and had turned and faced Smoke when the rifle cracked. The instant afterward Smoke fired into the woods in the direction of the sound.

The man on the river had been struck by the first shot. The shock of the high velocity bullet staggered him. He stumbled awkwardly to the sled, half falling, and pulled a rifle out from under the lashings. As he strove to raise it to his shoulder he crumpled at the waist and sank down slowly to a sitting posture on the sled. Then abruptly, as the gun went off aimlessly, he pitched backward and across the corner of the sled load, so that Smoke could see only his legs and stomach.

From below came more jingling bells. The man did not move. Around the bend swung three sleds, accompanied by half a dozen men. Smoke cried warningly, but they had seen the condition of the first sled, and they dashed on to it.

No shots came from the other bank, and Smoke, calling his dogs to follow, emerged into the open. There were exclamations from the men, and two of them, flinging off the mittens of their right hands, leveled their rifles at him.

"Come on, you red handed murderer, you," one of them, a black bearded man, commanded. "An' jest pitch that gun of yourn in the snow."

Smoke hesitated, then dropped his rifle and came up to them.

"Go through him, Louis, an' take his weapons," the black bearded man ordered.

Louis was a French Canadian voyageur, Smoke decided, as were four of the others. His search revealed only Smoke's hunting knife, which was appropriated.

"Now, what have you got to say for yourself, stranger, before I shoot you dead?" the black bearded man demanded.

"That you're making a mistake if you think I killed that man," Smoke answered.

A cry came from one of the voyageurs. He had quested along the trail and found Smoke's tracks where he had left it to take refuge on the bank. The man explained the nature of his find.

"What'd you kill Joe Kinade for?" he of the black beard asked.

"I tell you I didn't," Smoke began.

"Aw, what's the good of talkin'? We got you red handed. Right up there's where you left the trail when you heard him comin'. You laid among the trees an' bushwhacked him. Pierre, go an' get that gun he dropped."

"You might let me tell what happened," Smoke objected.

"You shut up," the man snarled at him. "I reckon your gun'll tell the story."

All the men examined Smoke's rifle. "One shot," Blackbeard concluded.

Pierre, with nostrils that quivered and distended like a deer's, sniffed at the breech. "Him one fresh shot," he said.

"The bullet entered his back," Smoke said. "He was facing me when he was shot. You see, it came from the other bank."

Blackbeard considered this proposition for a scant second and shook his head. "Nope. It won't do. Turn him around to face the other bank, that's how you whopped him in the back. Some of you boys run up an' down the trail an' see if you can see any tracks makin' for the other bank."

Their report was that on that side the snow was unbroken. Blackbeard, bending over the dead man, straightened up with a woolly, furry wad in his hand. Shredding this, he found imbedded in the center the bullet which had perforated the body. Its nose was spread to the size of a half dollar; its butt end, steel jacketed, was undamaged. He compared it with a cartridge from Smoke's belt.

"That's plain enough evidence, stranger, to satisfy a blind man. It's soft nosed an' steel jacketed; yourn is soft nosed and steel jacketed. It's a 30-30; yourn is 30-30. It's manufactured by the J. & T. Arms company; yourn is manufactured by the J. & T. Arms company. Now, you come along, an' we'll go over to the bank an' see jest how you done it."

"I was bushwhacked myself," Smoke said. "Look at the hole in my parka."

While Blackbeard examined it one of the voyagers threw open the breech of the dead man's gun. It was patent to all that it had been fired once. The empty cartridge was still in the chamber.

"A d—— shame poor Joe didn't get you," Blackbeard said bitterly. "But he did pretty well with a hole like that in him. Come on, you."

"Search the other bank first," Smoke urged.

"You shut up an' come on, an' let the facts do the talkin'."

They left the trail at the same spot he had and followed it on up the bank and in among the trees.

"Him dance that place keep him feet warm," Louis pointed out. "That place him crawl on belly. That place him put one elbow w'en him shoot."

"And there's the empty cartridge he done it with!" was Blackbeard's discovery. "Boys, there's only one thing to do. We're decent and law abidin', an' we got to handle this right an' regular. We'll cache the outfit an' run him an' poor Joe back to Two Cabins. I reckon we've seen an' can testify to what'll stretch his neck."

It was three hours after dark when the dead man, Smoke and his captors arrived at Two Cabins. By the starlight Smoke could make out a dozen or more recently built cabins snuggling about a larger and older cabin on a flat by the river bank. Thrust inside this older cabin, he found it tenanted by a young giant of a man, his wife and an old blind man.

The woman, whom her husband called Lucy, was herself a strapping creature of the frontier type. The old man, as Smoke learned afterward, had been a trapper on the Stewart for years and had gone finally blind the winter before. The camp of Two Cabins, he was also to learn, had been made the previous fall by a dozen men who arrived in half as many poling boats loaded with provisions. Here they had found the blind trapper on the site of Two Cabins, and about his cabin they had built their own.

In five minutes all the men of Two Cabins were jammed into the room. Smoke, shoved off into a corner, ignored and scowled at, his hands and feet tied with thongs of moose hide, looked on. Thirty-eight men he counted, a wild and husky crew. His captors told the tale over and over, each the center of an excited and wrathful group.

It was while counting the men that Smoke caught sight of a familiar face. It was Breck, the man whose boat Smoke had run through the rapids on the way to Dawson. He wondered why the other did not come and speak to him, but himself gave no sign of recognition. Later, when, with shielded face, Breck passed him a wink, Smoke understood.

Blackbeard, whom Smoke heard called Eli Harding, ended the discussion as to whether or not the prisoner should be immediately lynched. "Hold on!" he roared. "Keep your shirts on. That man belongs to me. I caught him, an' I brought him here. I brought him here for a fair an' impartial trial, an', by ——, a fair an' impartial trial he's goin' to get! Chuck him in a bunk till mornin', an' we'll hold the trial right here."

Of Interest to Women and the Home

She Saw a Little Man Sitting at the Foot of Her Bed.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

What Dolly Dimple Saw In Sleepyland.

"GO to sleep, now, Dolly, and the king of Sleepyland will come and show you all about,' said Dolly's mother as she tucked Dolly Dimple into bed."

Daddy was beginning his usual evening story.

"Dolly Dimple had her dolly, called Rose, in bed with her, so she snuggled down in the pillow with Rose in her arms, and almost before mother had kissed her and left the room Dolly Dimple saw a funny little man sitting upon the foot of her bed.

"He was dressed in red and white, but the red and white wasn't mixed up at all. One side of his cap was red and the other side was white, and the same was true of his coat and his long tight trousers, and, of course, to match the rest of his attire he must have on one long pointed red shoe and one white one.

"He sat there on the bed and waggled his long pointed toes and shook his betassled cap merrily at Dolly Dimple, who sat up in bed and clapped her hands and shouted,

"'I know who you are! I know who you are! You are the king of Sleepyland, because mother said you were coming.'

"The little fat fellow laughed and shook until the buttons on his funny little jacket that was buttoned up over his round, fat, jolly tummy threatened to burst off.

"'That's right, Dolly Dimple, and if you will come with me I will show you a heap of things that are wonderful in my realm of Sleepyland.'

"So Dolly Dimple took her doll Rose in her arms and put her hand in that of the king of Sleepyland, and they started off.

"They traveled very fast along a dark road until they came to the Crystal palace, which they entered. And then such a sight greeted their eyes! There were oceans of candy, cream and cake and snow white horses upon which little girls and boys were riding, and there were toys of every description. But Dolly Dimple wanted to ride one of the beautiful white horses.

"So the king of Sleepyland put Dolly Dimple, still clasping her doll Rose in her arms, upon the back of a snow white steed, the music began to play, and the horse started off.

"But the doll Rose needed one of Dolly's arms, so Dolly couldn't hang on very tightly. Bump, thump, bang! went Dolly Dimple down on the hard floor.

"But she didn't cry, for as she sat up she wakened, and she was on the nursery floor. She had fallen out of bed in her dream."

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

The rain had poured down all day and showed no signs of abating. Mrs. Stover vibrated between the living room, where she watched a pan that caught the drippings from the ceiling, to prevent its running over onto the carpet, and the kitchen window. The barn and outbuildings were flooded and she was anxious about the hens, that waded dejectedly about in an inch of water. Even the ducks were disconsolately quacking and had neglected to keep their shirt bosoms as clean as usual.

"He's come at last," she sighed with relief as a wagon came rattling into the yard and her husband, in a huge rubber coat and sou'wester hat, jumped from the seat and lifted a box of groceries covered with oilcloth and started for the house.

Mrs. Stover opened the door and he stepped inside, dripping like a fountain, while he placed the box on the table.

"I engaged Jones to come out and fix that roof as soon as the rain is over," he announced cheerfully, while his wife dashed after the mop to make an end to the numerous rivulets that had trickled down his ample person.

"I have never seen a storm like this in the ten years I've lived here," he remarked, wiping the rain from his face.

"Its unusualness will not save my wallpaper," said his wife dismally.

"I never had a patent for having things as I want them, so I am not complaining of infringement," said Mr. Stover in a hearty voice. "I must go and get the horses' backs under cover, even if they do have their feet in water," and he closed the door behind him.

Mrs. Stover put the groceries in the pantry, then sat down in the gray light to read a letter her husband had brought.

"Well, I never!" she ejaculated.

"My letter was from Molly Jordan," she announced, as her husband stood in the kitchen door and gave his coat a shake preparatory to hanging it on the peg behind the door.

"That so?" he asked, taking a chair and bringing it over to the stove. He reached into a pocket on the wall for some carpet slippers, and, removing his rubber boots, put his slippered feet in the oven and stretched out his hands to the fire.

"What does Molly have to say?" he asked when he had sufficiently thawed to be interested in affairs outside himself.

"She writes the strangest news. You know we have wondered what she would do to support those three children, as her husband did not leave her much of anything. She has passed the examination and has been appointed rural mail carrier on the route that starts from her home town," and Mrs. Stover put the teakettle over the fire, and sat down with a pan of potatoes to peel for supper.

"I don't envy her the job a day like this," said her husband.

"No, not in cold winter weather," added his wife, resting her knife and potato on the sides of the pan. "Well, she's plucky anyway, and that will provide for them. I wonder if the one horse she owns will do the work."

"She takes good care of it and that will make a difference," rejoined her husband.

"She says she will take hot soapstones for her feet and heavy wraps and can stand it all right," and Mrs. Stover resumed the paring of the potatoes.

"How long before supper will be ready?" asked her husband. "It makes a fellow fearfully hungry riding in the cold."

"Not long now," replied his wife, pouring the boiling water over the potatoes and bustling away to the pantry.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Do not throw away the old salt or sugar sacks. Split them all open and sew them together. They make excellent dish cloths and towels.

Removing Cocoa Stains From Table Linen—Many have difficulty in removing "cocoa stains" from table linen and napkins. This can be easily overcome by first washing the article stained in clear cold water without the use of soap, before putting with the clothes to be laundered.

THE TABLE

Mock Venison—Place leg of lamb in deep crock and cover with a marinade of two parts vinegar to one of water, one teaspoon cinnamon, half teaspoon cloves and allspice and the same of ginger, two bay leaves, two large sliced onions and three strips of lemon peel. Add paprika and salt liberally. Keep in this marinade five days, turning twice each day and keeping closely covered. Remove with all the ingredients and put in pot or large vessel to be simmered. Cut two strips of bacon into small pieces and insert in lamb. Make slits with sharp knife. Keep two cups of liquid to simmer lamb, add one teaspoon extract beef (not necessary), two small gingersnaps and all the ingredients. Brown one tablespoon sugar in a sauce pan, brown two tablespoons flour in butter, add to stew and let all simmer five hours, adding one tablespoon of fruit juice at last. Venison is in season now.

Eggs au Gratin—Arrange poached eggs on shallow buttered baking dish; sprinkle with grated cheese, and pour over all a bechamel sauce. Cover with stale buttered crumbs and sprinkle again with cheese. Brown in oven. Bechamel sauce: One cup milk, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter (rounded), three-fourths tablespoon flour (rounded), dash white pepper. Put butter in sauce pan; melt until it bubbles, add flour and seasoning; stir until well blended. Pour on milk slowly, first drawing the sauce pan to a cool part of the range. Should you pour milk all in at once you will probably have a lumpy sauce that you will have to strain. A wire whisk is best for stirring a sauce. Just as you send it to the table, infuse with half cup thick cream.

Parker House Rolls—Bring to boiling point one pint milk, and into this melt piece of butter size of an egg. Let milk cool, then mix with it one tablespoon sugar, one pinch salt, one-half cup fresh yeast. Then add enough flour to make a soft dough and let rise over night. In the morning add one-half teaspoon baking soda dissolved in a little warm water. Add flour enough to make about as for biscuit. Let rise again until double in bulk, turn out on floured breadboard and roll out to half inch thick. Cut into rounds, butter tops and fold one half over the other; place in bread pan, leaving room enough for rising. Cover and put near fire for 15 minutes, then bake in quick oven, rubbing sweet milk or cream over the tops to glaze just before putting them in the oven.

Mincemeat—Boil gently until tender three pounds lean beef; let it get perfectly cold, and chop fine. Add next four pounds apples peeled and chopped, one pound shredded citron, two pounds seeded raisins, two pounds sultana raisins, one pound currants, two pounds sugar, juice and rinds of two lemons and two oranges, one nutmeg grated, one-half ounce each of cloves and cinamon, one teaspoon salt, one quart boiled cider and spiced vinegar. Mix all together and pack in stone jars; will keep for months. More fruit juice may be added as needed. May be heated slowly and canned if desired.

SCOOP, THE CUB REPORTER — YOU COULD HEAR 'EM RATTLING FOR FIVE MILES — BY "HOP"

TRAPPED BY FIRE.

Driving Elephants to Their Death In the Dry Season In Africa.

In the heart of the African elephant country, from which comes the bulk of the world's ivory supply, I once saw the destruction of these huge beasts performed in a novel yet barbarous manner. It was a process that played upon the fear all animals have for fire.

When the Niam-Niam hunters—whose name, by the way, means "great eaters"—discover a herd of elephants they set out and beat the country for miles around, throwing a cordon about the herd and gradually closing in. Although the hunters are armed with old muzzle loading elephant rifles and carry a plentiful supply of ammunition, they always use the fire trap during the dry season.

As the herd is gradually driven together by the hundreds of hunters torches are passed around by the women and at a shrill blast from the war horns they are lighted. Another blast from the horns is the signal for the torches to be applied to the tall, dry grass, and a writhing sea of flame soon encircles the doomed herd. Half a mile in diameter is not an uncommon measure of the fire trap.

Roaring and crackling like volleys of musketry, the flames leap up and tend to burn inward upon the circle, and the poor elephants, who dare not face the flames, die from suffocation.

Then, when the fire has burned itself out, the Niam-Niam enter the trap of death, gorge themselves upon elephant meat and collect the ivory, which they bear to the trading stations. In exchange for their booty they receive the trinkets and gayly colored cloths that delight their hearts and after a time start once more off on the never ending ivory hunt.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

DOES HEREDITY EXIST?

It Does It Has Never Been Proved. It Is Claimed.

Is there such a thing as heredity? A father has blue eyes, and so has his son. Is there a special energy or force that did this? Suppose his son has brown eyes. Did heredity stop acting? Was it, so to speak, turned off? That is absurd. The forces which caused the boy's eyes in one case to be like the father's and in the next case unlike were the same. No one doubts that. No new force or energy had been introduced.

Heredity, therefore, is not a thing in itself. It has no existence, in fact. It denotes no constant actual living force. It is simply a noun derived from the adjective hereditary. Hereditary means handed down from parent to child, simply that and nothing more. An estate is hereditary. The brown eyes were as truly hereditary as the blue, no more, no less. As all life proceeds from life, all life in every detail is hereditary. Try to realize and be certain of this. It will prevent you from falling into errors. It is commonly said, for instance, that certain qualities are hereditary and others not. For instance, a genius suddenly appearing of commonplace progenitors is said not to be hereditary. But a genius is born, so he must be hereditary in the true sense; genius is not acquired.

Thus in common usage the word hereditary is abused and twisted into meaning something it does not mean—namely, a tendency in children to reproduce the more or less unusual qualities of parents. It is assumed that there is such a general tendency, but it has never been proved.—Atlantic.

Describing the Grand Canyon.

As for the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, it affects those who behold it with a kind of literary asthma. They desire to describe it; some try passionately, but they only wheeze and look as though they might explode. Since it is generally admitted that no one who has seen it can describe it the task would manifestly devolve upon some one who has not seen it and that requirement is filled by me. I have not seen it. I am not impressed by it at all. I am able to speak of it with coherence and restraint. But even that I shall not do.—Julian Street in Collier's Weekly.

MILITARY STRATEGY.

Why More Is Gained by Wounding Than by Killing an Enemy.

In a letter to the Army and Navy Journal a retired army officer says that no intelligent soldier will fire a dumdum or an explosive bullet at the enemy, for they both kill.

The object of the rifleman is not to kill an enemy, but to wound him. "A dead man is simply one soldier lost from his army. He is not a burden to any one. A wounded soldier must be taken care of. Four wounded soldiers must have an ambulance with two horses and an ablebodied soldier driver.

"Thirty wounded soldiers must have a surgeon, a hospital steward and ten or a dozen able bodied soldiers to aid the doctor and wait upon and nurse the wounded men. The ambulances block the roads and delay the troops, especially the artillery and the supply wagons.

"When a man is hurt every one is anxious to get him at once to a doctor. If the troops on the firing line are not well disciplined and a soldier is wounded there will be three or four soldiers who are willing and anxious to carry him to the rear.

"For every soldier wounded the firing line loses four soldiers, and a hundred men wounded means that 400 men are lost to the firing line, for they never rejoin their regiments until the battle is over."

His Bad Handwriting.

Dean Farrar in his "Reminiscences" says that the first proofs of Dean Stanley's "Sinai and Palestine" informed the reader that from the monastery of Sinai was visible "the horn of the burning beast!" This was a fearfully apocalyptic nightmare of the printer's devil for "the horizon of the burning bush." The original proof sheets also stated that on turning the shoulder of Mount Olivet in the walk from Bethany "there suddenly burst upon the spectator a magnificent view of—Jones!" In this startling sentence "Jones" was the transmogrification of "Jerus," the dean's abbreviated way of writing "Jerusalem." When the dean answered an invitation to dinner his hostess has been known to write back and inquire whether his note was an acceptance or a refusal.

Cheese Toast.

Allow as many thin slices of stale bread as will be used at the meal. For six slices allow half a cupful of grated dry cheese (not too dry). In a saucepan melt and mix together one large tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Stir in gradually one pint of hot milk, making a smooth paste. Keep hot at the side of the fire. Toast the bread nicely. Stir the cheese into the sauce and as soon as melted pour over the buttered toast. Cover a moment that it may soak; then serve.—Boston Post.

Webster's Father.

Daniel Webster's father's name was Ebenezer Webster. He was born in Kingston, N. H., in 1739, served in the French war under Sir Jeffrey Amherst and was one of the first settlers of what is now Franklin, N. H., in 1761. He died in 1805, when Daniel was twenty-four years of age.

The Devil's Wall.

Between England and Scotland stand the ruins of the old Roman wall known as the devil's wall, owing to the belief of the peasantry that on account of the firmness of the mortar and the imperishability of the stones Satan had a hand in its construction.—Argonaut.

No Wonder.

"My wife's never satisfied with what I give her," said Mr. Cowbunker.

"Has she always been that way?"

"Yes. It started when I gave her my name."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Her Style.

"That singer has a remarkably thin voice."

"Yes; suggests she ought to sing in a skeleton key."—Baltimore American.

CITY SWEPT BY WIND AND RAIN

ROOF IS BLOWN OFF

Lighting System of the Borough Put Out of Commission—Community Christmas Tree Torn up—Sixty Mile Gale.

Wind sweeping across the central part of the State at a sixty-mile an hour clip, last night and early this morning did hundreds of dollars worth of destruction in this section, tearing up trees and damaging dwellings. Carried on the wings of the gale was a driving rain that fell in torrents all day yesterday and last night, the miniature hurricane abating late this morning. One powerful blast of wind overturned the seventy foot evergreen recently transferred to a resting place in the City Park for the Community Christmas celebration. Although firmly rooted in the frozen terra firma of the park the huge tree was turned completely over and a large hole was left in the ground freeing the entire mass of roots.

Small shrubs and hedges in all parts of the city and borough were torn up and strewn about the premises on which they were located. Several chimneys in the city and borough were ripped from their moorings and large limbs of trees were torn off. The street lighting system of North Plainfield was put entirely out of commission at midnight and in Plainfield the lights were out on West Second street, between New street and Plainfield avenue; on East Front street, from Washington to Richmond streets; on Sandford and Westervelt avenues and on Elm and Orange places.

The cyclonic wind accompanying last night's storm raised the roof from a frame dwelling occupied by Mrs. E. Caulfield, at 415 East Sixth street. Mrs. Caulfield telephoned to police headquarters and Captain Flynn in turn notified the fire department. The firemen went to the place and put the roof back on in a temporary manner.

Electric light and telephone wires were reported down in several parts of the city and employes of the New York Telephone Company were kept busy all night answering emergency calls. The torrents of rain filled the culverts and in many places the streets were impassable. Few pedestrians ventured out and the local motion picture houses enjoyed only slim audiences.

When James L. Lambert, of Alton, rural carrier for the local postoffice, awoke this morning, he found that his barns had been completely overturned by the terrific wind that raged.

DUCLOS VAN MATER CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF PHI PI PSI

The monthly meeting and election of officers of the Phi Pi Psi, a North Plainfield Greek Letter Fraternity, was held last night at the home of E. Franklin Lowe, of Fairview avenue. The majority of members were present, with President Charles Beckman presiding. The first business was the election of officers for the coming year and Duclos Van Mater was chosen president. The other offices were filled as follows: Vice president, F. O. Dunning, Jr.; secretary, Ashley Burner; treasurer, Charles Beckman.

Plans for the year were discussed and several changes made in the constitution. After the business meeting a social time was held and the monthly "feed" was served by the host's mother, Mrs. E. A. Lowe. Red carnations were presented to each guest as favors.

TRINITY'S BUSY PASTOR.

During the year 1914, Rev. J. Y. Brook of Trinity Reformed church, preached 97 sermons, administered 6 communions, 4 private communions, delivered 20 special addresses in and outside the city, conducted 38 prayer meetings, officiated at 11 weddings, conducted 34 funerals, received 34 into church fellowship, of which number 17 came on confession and 17 by letter, baptized 13 children and 8 adults, made 690 pastoral calls and attended 204 church and committee meetings not counted in any of the above items.

INFANT SON DEAD.

John J., the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. MacDonald, of West 8th street, died this morning. The funeral will be held from the parents' home tomorrow afternoon, and interment will be made in St. Mary's cemetery.

GREAT NEED FOR ADDITIONAL FUNDS

Commission for Relief of Unemployed Makes Another Earnest Appeal.

Strangely enough, howling winds and driving rains do not seem to be good incentives to charitable deeds. One would suppose certainly that a few days like yesterday would make a lot of people stop and think for a moment of the unfortunates who didn't have protection from the weather, and then perhaps make them want to do something to relieve such distress. Nearly everybody who sat last night in a tight, comfortable, well-heated house thanked his stars that he didn't have to be out in the storm.

Did it occur to you what last night would have been if you hadn't had any coal in the cellar, and no food in the pantry? Possibly not, and yet there were a good many people in Plainfield who had just that experience and through no fault of their own. We mean the people who are out of employment because business is dull and work everywhere is slack. There are some of them here, just as there are in every city of the country this winter.

For some reason, as the weather gets worse, the contributions to the Commission for the Relief of the Unemployed are falling off. Of course, it ought to be just the reverse. When the first appeal was made a month ago, there was a generous response, but the amount raised so far is nowhere near the total estimated requirement. And the number of contributions is very disappointing. Those who have given, have given bountifully, but a work of this kind, headed by the leading citizens of the community, deserves a more widespread support. Hundreds of people can and should do something, if only a little.

During the week ending Monday, January 11, only $170 was received by A. M. Harris, treasurer of the Commission. There were only eleven contributors. Surely Plainfield will do better than this. The Commission has done exceedingly efficient work. It must have the backing of the whole city and borough.

Contributions to date are as follows: Previously acknowledged, $2,220; J. Herbert Case, A. B. Jones, E. E. Parvin, Howard C. Tracy, Leighton Calkins, Samuel T. Cather, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Iredell, William R. Townsend, Mrs. J. K. Myers, Harry L. Terry, Miss Deklyn. Total, $2,390.

MISS RICHARDS WILL DISCUSS LIVE TOPICS

Miss Janet E. Richards' fifth talk in her series on public questions will be given tomorrow afternoon at the Hartridge Auditorium, at 3:30 o'clock. This will be Miss Richards' first appearance in Plainfield since December 17, and she promises to take her audience from the great prohibition debate in Congress, of December 22, which will be illustrated by an interesting drink chart, through the latest complications growing out of our recent troubles with England concerning contraband of war and with Germany about the sale of fraudulent passports. The latest questions of public interest will also be explained.

The doors of the Hartridge Auditorium will be open at 2 o'clock and the lecture will begin promptly at 3:30. Single admission tickets will be on sale at the door.

Y. M. C. A. PICTURES.

At the Y. M. C. A. motion picture entertainment on Saturday, two films of the highest educational value will be shown. The first of them, entitled "The Evolution of a Ship," shows the progress made in ship building during the past three hundred years. The other continues the pictorial history of the European war, showing the Belgian army and its manoeuvers. Three comedy films will complete the program. The regular admission will be charged.

MONTHLY MEETING.

The monthly meeting of the Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel will be held in the chapel Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. There will be an executive meeting at 2 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

CIRCLE WILL MEET.

The Brightside Circle, of Kings Daughters, will meet at the home of Mrs. Emily Cory, 45 Jackson avenue, tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

—Edward E. Cooper, assignee, will sell the valuable store property situated at 212 Lee place, Plainfield, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Friday, January 15. For particulars, apply E. E. Cooper, R. F. D. No. 3, Plainfield.—Adv. 1 12 3

PROPERTY OWNERS DO NOT WANT GONG

Netherwood Residents Protest Against Installation at Tygard Plant.

Property-owners in Netherwood's residential section are very much exercised over the announcement that J. B. Tygard, inventor of the Tygard engine and owner of a small factory on South avenue near Woodland avenue, is endeavoring to get possession of the discarded fire whistle, which he intends to install on his Netherwood plant. Mr. Tygard has approached Chief Doane on the subject and it is understood that the fire chief has turned the matter over to the Common Council, the latter body having power to grant or refuse Mr Tygard's request.

According to the applicant it is his intention to use the relic as a factory whistle and until this morning it was the consensus of opinion among those interested that the request would be granted. The residents of Netherwood, however, have come to the fore with a strenuous protest and Mayor Leighton Calkins was consulted about the matter this morning.

The objecting parties claim they are ready to go the limit in order to prevent the installation of the gong in the East End. They maintain that they do not need a timepiece of so loud a volume and that it would be a nuisance rather than a convenient asset. It has been said that the whistle could be heard as far off as Red Bank, but the Netherwood petitioners maintain that it failed to bother them when it was located at the Spicer plant and that they would be satisfied if it was left in the West End.

SAYS BUS ORDINANCE WOULD BE HARDSHIP

Manager Campbell, of the Plainfield Transit Company, to Protest.

Following the renewed action that came to light in the City Council at the meeting Monday, regarding the ordinance to license and regulate auto bus traffic in Plainfield, the Plainfield Transit Company, a firm that will be affected by such an ordinance, is preparing to take the matter up with the city fathers before it is taken under consideration for the third reading, it having passed on two readings to date. Thomas Hylan is sponsor for the ordinance and among its provisions is a tax of fifteen dollars per car. It also has a phrase giving the Mayor authority to designate the streets over which the traffic may be conducted. Manager R. W. Campbell, of the Plainfield Transit Company, is planning to take the matter up with Mayor Calkins.

In a statement made to a Daily Press reporter, this afternoon, Manager Campbell said:

"There is no reason why we should pay this tax to Plainfield any more than to North Plainfield, Stirling, South Plainfield, or any other municipality through which we operate. At the present time we are paying $107.50 a year to the State for the privilege of operating five cars over its roads and we also pay $85 corporation tax annually.

"Levying an extra charge of $15 a car on the company, which the city proposes to do, will mean a great hardship and it is possible that the present transit line will have to be discontinued. Taxation has driven other firms and individuals out of Plainfield and it may drive us out.

"Furthermore, we do not carry on a business that would be subject to the hack ordinance as we do not pick up and deposit passengers within the city limits."

NON-SUIT ALLOWED IN CASE AGAINST LOCAL THEATRE

Elizabeth, Jan. 13.—A non-suit was allowed yesterday afternoon, in the suit of Mrs. Rachel C. Richards and her husband, William F. Richards, against Frederick E. Proctor and Harry S. Sanderson, of the Plainfield Theatre, for damages for injuries Mrs. Richards sustained to her head December 23, 1913, when she fell down the balcony stairway of the theatre.

Mrs. Richards offered testimony to the effect that the carpet was torn and that tacks protruding from it tripped her. There was no corroboration of this, however, nor was it shown that there was an immediate investigation of the scene of the accident. For this reason the court granted defendants' counsel's motion for a non-suit and the jury was dismissed. There were many witnesses for the defendants to be heard.

CLAIM HE FAILED TO FILE A BOND

AFFECTING PATENTS

Complainant Company Declares That Defendant Agreed to Protect it Against Suits for a Period of Two Years After Sale of Property.

Newark, Jan. 13—The Bosch Magneto Company, which last year purchased the Rushmore Dynamo Works at Plainfield, owned by Samuel W. Rushmore, has instituted a suit in the Chancery Court to compel Mr. Rushmore to fulfil his part of an agreement, that of filing an indemnity bond for $100,000 to protect the company against any patent suit for a period of two years following the purchase of the plant. According to the complainant company, when it purchased Mr. Rushmore's property in Plainfield it also acquired all rights on five automobile starters and seven dynamos, not only in this country, but in Great Britain, France, Italy and other countries.

As a part of the agreement of the sale, Mr. Rushmore, it is claimed was to furnish a $100,000 bond protecting the Bosch Magneto Company. This, it is alleged, has not been done. On May 8 last, a short time before the Bosch Magneto Company made its first payment of $250,000 to Mr. Rushmore toward the total purchase price of $750,000, the company was notified by the Bijur Motor Lighting Company that it was infringing on one of its patents and, according to the declaration of the Bosch Magneto Company, Mr. Rushmore should defend any action that this company or any other concern might bring against the former company.

The Bosch Magneto Company gave $750,000 for Mr. Rushmore's plant, equipment and several patents, the first $250,000 being paid to the latter on May 20, 1914; the second $250,000, on July 2, and the third and last $250,000 on July 10. The company is represented by McCarter & English, of this city, who, set forth in the complaint of the company that Mr. Rushmore has failed to furnish the $100,000 bond as he agreed to do when the sale for the property was made.

DISCUSS THE VALUE OF PARENT-TEACHER WORK

The Irving-Jefferson Parent-Teacher Association held its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon, at the Jefferson School. Mrs. J. A. Babcock, president of the association, presided, and reports were read from the secretary, Mrs. I. C. Pierson, and the treasurer, Mrs. A. E. Force. The subject of work for the new year was discussed, and it was decided that some definite object for which to work be chosen, and thus stimulate interest. A number of things were suggested and discussed, some of which will be taken up at a later meeting.

A committee on program was appointed by the president, of which Miss White is chairman. A paper on "The Value of Parent-Teacher Associations" was read, after which a social time was enjoyed, which included musical selections on a phonograph. A number of new members were enrolled and the association begins the new year with bright prospects of doing a good work.

ALLEGED SECOND STORY MAN HELD IN $500 BAIL

Alleged to have committed a robbery at the home of Ernest K. Morse, 745 Berkeley avenue, on August 30 last, Simon R. Jones, colored, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court, this morning, and held in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Jones was apprehended in East Orange at the request of the local police and brought to this city Monday by Sergeant Maurice Higgins.

It is charged that Jones stole $400 worth of jewelry from the Morse home after gaining entrance through a second story window. He had been a fugitive from justice up to the time of his arrest Sunday.

NATIONAL OFFICERS COMING.

Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, president, and Mrs. H. W. Peabody, vice president, of the National Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, will be the guests of the Women's Missionary Circle, of the First Baptist church, on Wednesday, February 17, at which time all of the women of the local churches will be invited to be present and hear addresses by the national officers.

COUNTY FEDERATION MEETS IN CRANFORD

Percy S. Brown is Chosen President of Patriotic Organizations.

Garwood, Jan. 13.—With over fifty delegates from every part of the county an enthusiastic meeting of the Union County Federation of Patriotic Societies was held here Monday night in the Jeqerson School. The following officers were re-elected: President, Percy S. Brown, of Plainfield; vice president, George Hermes, of Cranford; W. H. I. Cubberley, secretary; sergeant-at-arms, I. N. Wyckoff, also of Plainfield.

The delegates to the convention of the New Jersey Federation of Patriotic Fraternities reported on the progress of the patriotic movement throughout the State in opposing the enemies of the free press who have been announcing themselves in the public press the last few days.

In reply to the request to debate on the Immigration Bill, Senator Martine replied that he was too busy with his legislative duties and that it would not be necessary as his views were well known, having had wide publicity.

The letter requesting President Wilson to sign the Immigration Bill was referred to the Department of Labor, Secretary Wilson replying the request would be given due consideration.

Several fine addresses were made before the federation, after which the meeting was adjourned until Wednesday, February 3, at Jr. O. U. A. M. Hall, 206 Broad street, Elizabeth.

COURT PLAINFIELD INSTALLS OFFICERS

Somerville High Vice Chief and Staff Present at Local Ceremony.

High Vice-Chief Ranger W. D. Bauer and staff from Somerville, had charge of the installation ceremonies at last night's meeting of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, the event being an impressive one attended by a large number of members. The following officers were installed: Court deputy, Edward J. McCann; chief ranger, Edward J. McCue; vice chief ranger, Thomas S. Flatley; recording secretary, Henry Hansen; financial secretary, James J. McCarthy; treasurer, John R. Cline; orator, Joseph J. McCue; organist, Thomas Monsell; senior woodward, Jahes Hanehan; junior woodward, Martin J. Regan; senior beadle, T. C. Thomson; junior beadle, Thomas Fitzgerald.

The trustees of the local lodge include John F. Casey, Sr., and Martin N. Whelan. The following committees were named: Finance, John F. Casey, Sr., and T. C. Thomson; medical, Dr. H. H. Lowrie, Dr. A. K. Brennan and Dr. R. Yood.

Following the installation services and the disposition of of routne business matters the good and welfare committee supplied refreshments and a smoker was enjoyed

RUNYON'S RECEPTION MOST ENTHUSIASTIC IN YEARS

When Asemblyman William N Runyon offered his first resolution as Republican leader, at the opening of the Legislature, yesterday, he was accorded one of the most enthusiastic receptions the Assembly chamber has witnessed in years. Delegations of the popular Plainfielder's friends from Union and Morris counties were in the galleries and applauded vociferously as his name was called. The local contingent numbered thirty-two in all, most of the members being Elks. The Plainfield lodge had previously placed on Mr. Runyon's desk a magnificent bunch of seventy-seven American Beauty roses, arranged in a basket and standing eight feet over all. Purple ribbons and silk American flags embellished the floral mass.

The success of the ovation to Leader Runyon was largely due to the efforts of Counselor Vincent W. Nash, Jr., who acted as a committee of arrangements for the Elks. Mr. Nash has had adjoining offices to Assemblyman Runyon for the past ten years and was active in the latter's campaign last fall. It required no small amount of work to complete all the details of yesterday's trip to Trenton and Counselor Nash was warmly complimented for the manner in which it was accomplished.

LOCAL COUPLE WED AT HOME CEREMONY

William A. DeLong, Jr., Takes Miss Helen Campbell as His Bride.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. W Campbell, of 746 Kensington avenue, was the scene of a quiet wedding at 8 o'clock last night, when their daughter, Miss Helen Campbell, became the wife of William A. DeLong, Jr., of East Second street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E church, and was witnessed only by a small gathering of relatives and intimate friends. Miss Marion Pell, of Brooklyn, was maid of honor, and Benjamin Hassellman, of Bay Ridge acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and after a wedding supper had been served, Mr. and Mrs. DeLong took their departure for a Southern trip. It will include Baltimore, Washington and other points, lasting about two weeks in all. On returning they will make their home on Gresham road, where a completely furnished residence awaits them.

Both Mr. DeLong and his bride are well-known locally and are popular in the younger set of the city and borough. The former was graduated from the Plainfield High School in the class of 1898. He is at present engaged in the insurance business in New York. Both he and his bride were the recipients of numerous appropriate gifts.

E. R. ACKERMAN RETURNS TO TRUST COMPANY BOARD

The Plainfield Trust Company, at its annual meeting yesterday afternoon, elected directors for the year, there being an addition in the return of former State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman to the board. He was on the original board of the company and served from 1902 to 1908, when the many demands upon his time made it necessary for him to resign. His presence at ths tme is but another assurance of the wise and efficient management which has been the basis of the company's remarkable progress.

The gentlemen whose names appear in the list of directors, constitute a board of exceptional strength. While all but one make their home in Plainfield and keep in close touch with local affairs, their connection with important business interests is of great benefit to The Plainfield Trust Company whose policy they dictate. The directors are as follows:

E. R. Ackerman, president Lawrence Portland Cement Co., New York; J. Herbert Case, vice-president The Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., New York; Frederick Geller, attorney and counselor-at-law, New York; Augustus V. Heely, vice-president The Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., New York; James W. Jackson, executor of the Jesse Hoyt Estate, New York; Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Ladd & Wood bankers, New York; Charles W. McCutchen, Holt & Co., commission merchants, New York; Harry H. Pond, vice-president The Mechanics and Metals National Bank, New York; Charles A. Reed, attorney and counselor-at-law, Plainfield; Isaac W. Rushmore, dairy products, New York; Frank H. Smith, register of Union county, Elizabeth; Samuel Townsend, president People's National Bank, Westfield; Cornelius B. Tyler, Tyler & Tyler, atorneys, New York; Lewis E. Waring, Edward Sweet & Co., bankers, New York; Orville T. Waring, Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, New York.

SCHOOL CHILDREN WILL GIVE "THE HALL OF FAME"

The entertainment committee of the North Plainfield Parent-Teacher Association is planning to give an entertainment in Saengerbund Hall on the evening of Friday, March 12. The title of the entertainment is "The Hall of Fame," and every class in the school will have a part in the program. The children must be up in their studies in order to take part in the entertainment and the teachers of the various classes have already started to drill the children.

There will be a meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, in the Somerset School when arrangements will be discussed. Several of the teachers of the school are on the committee to assist in arranging the program. The committee in charge consists of Mrs. E. D. Hutchinson, chairman; Mrs. M. H. Ewart, president of the association, and Miss Helen K. Ray, Miss A. Margaret Speidel, Miss Edna French, Miss Hendrickson and Miss Whitall.

Visit of Minister to King George Today Thought to Be Significant.

FRENCH PLAN INVASION

Said to Be Assembling Army of 400,000 in Alsace to Attack Upper Rhenish Provinces—Weather Interferes With Operations.

London, Jan. 13.—Two German submarines were sighted off Dover early this morning. The shore batteries opened fire upon them and they disappeared. A despatch to the Evening News from Dover declares that the two "Unterseeboote" were sunk by shells from shore batteries. It is impossible, however, to obtain any official details of the attempted attack. The appearance of the two submarines in the channel is considered significant in view of the presence of the Zeppelins and airships over the channel during the last few days. That a squadron of six or seven Zeppelins were sighted last night is persistently rumored.

London, Jan. 13.—King George granted an audience to the Roumanian ministers at Buckingham Palace, this morning. While no statement was forthcoming regarding the audience, it is considered as particularly significant, as Roumania is expected to enter the war on the side of the Allies within a short period of time.

The "Times" Sofia correspondent says he believes Roumania will start a campaign in the Transylvania probably about the middle of February. The Roumanian minister to Bulgaria, who is now in Bucharest, the correspondent adds, is expected to return soon to Bulgaria, taking with him proposals to facilitate an understanding between Bulgaria and Roumania.

The correspondent declares restitution of the towns of Baltchik and Teobritch (in that portion of northeastern Bulgaria awarded to Roumania at the end of the Balkan War) will be offered. Roumania formerly had hesitated owing to her doubts concerning Italy's policy, but she is now convinced Italy will join the Allies.

Reports reaching here say that the French are assembling in Alsace a new army of 400,000 men under command of General Gallieni, former military governor of Paris and a brilliant tactician, for an invasion of the upper Rhenish provinces.

The German army in Alsace has been heavily reinforced and it is now known the Kaiser's commanders have 120,000 men massed near Metz ready to strike either straight across the frontier against the French or to move quickly southward to Cernay

HOME OF JAMES HARRIS BADLY DAMAGED BY FIRE

A fire, the origin of which is a mystery, was discovered about 10:30 o'clock this morning in the basement of the residence of James Harris, 96 Manning avenue, the borough. An alarm was sent in from box 132 and the borough department responded quickly. The blaze was extinguished with the aid of one line of hose and chemicals. The damage, amounting to about $600, was covered by insurance.

The firemen, under the direction of the new fire chief, Walter Chandler, did good work, confining the flames to the lower part of the dwelling, although the whole house was affected by the dense smoke which arose from the basement.

PAST CHIEF BECKER PRESENTED WITH JEWEL

Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagle, held a meeting in the lodge rooms, last night, and initiated one member into the first degree. After the initiation ceremonies Past Chief John Becker was presented with a past chief jewel. The presentation speech was made by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Mr. Becker made a fitting response. First steps were taken toward the formation of a uniform rank. All of those present were strongly in favor of this plan.

PARENT-TEACHER MEETING.

The borough Parent-Teacher Association will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Somerset Street School. The half hour usually devoted to a lecture will be utilized in conducting a question box such as has featured a number of previous meetings. Several questions of interest to the mothers will be presented to the gathering by the various committees.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Weiner, of Prospect avenue, entertained Mrs. Mary Motley, of Raritan, on Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Dayton, of New Market road, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harris and family, of Plainfield, on Sunday.

Mrs. Edward Kelly, of Raritan, spent Monday in the borough as the guest of Mrs. George Meyers, of Prospect avenue.

Mrs. Albert Giddes, Mrs. Raymond Hamley and Mrs. L. T. Churchill were entertained today by Mrs. A. L. Barton, of this place, who is spending the winter in New York.

The Samuel Titus house on Whittier avenue, formerly tenanted by Mr. and Mrs. William Van Dusen, has been rented through the C. E. Tinsman agency to L. G. Bishop, of New Market, who has taken possession with his family.

Doris Schenck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Schenck, of Centre street, is confined to her bed with rheumatism.

Mrs. J. H. Schneidler, of Washington avenue, continues to improve nicely.

214 W. FRONT ST.

Borough Engineer Churchill has been reappointed engineer of the borough of Garwood.

David Mundy and daughter, Mildred, of Front street, spent Sunday at Morristown, where they visited Mr. Mundy's sister, Mrs. A. Smith, who is convalescing from an operation.

Leslie Apps, one of the able clerks in the employ of the D. T. Heaume grocery, has moved from Harmony Village to the borough and is boarding with Mrs. E. J. Haynes, of Dunellen avenue.

ENTERTAINS CHOIR.

Miss Rita Brokaw, of Centre street, entertained the members of the choir of Holy Innocents' church and their friends at her home, Saturday evening. There were about thirty present. The entertaining features of the evening were music, singing and games. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Nathan Guyre, of Washington avenue, who was taken ill the Sunday after Christmas with heart trouble, is now able to be up and about his home.

THOMAS PLATT.

Thomas Platt, of Bridgeton, aged 65, father of Dr. Platt, of the borough, died very suddenly on Saturday morning from heart failure. Besides Dr. Platt the deceased leaves a widow, a daughter and another son. The funeral was held yesterday at the late home.

The board of trustees of the Methodist Episcopal church met on Monday evening at the home of George T. Schenck, on Front street.

The Baraca Class, of the Presbyterian Sunday-school, will hold a meeting in its class room tomorrow evening, at which time important business will be transacted. A full attendance is desired. Refreshments will be served.

CANCEL MAP CONTRACT.

The Mayor and Council of Bound Brook, which awarded F. A. Dunham, of Plainfield, the contract for making an assessment map for their borough despite the fact that Lewis T. Churchill, of this place, had entered a bid $500 lower, has cancelled the contract for the map with Mr. Dunham and have notified Mr. Churchill that he will be given a hearing on the matter, which, according to law, they are compelled to do. Mr. Churchill has accordingly stopped all legal proceedings.

INJURED HER FOOT.

Miss Hattie Case, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Case, of Grove street, who is employed in Plainfield, is at present confined to the home of her parents, as a result of a flat-iron falling on her foot and smashing a toe.

Mrs. Belle Tunison, who has been spending two weeks in the borough as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. John P. Fenner, of Washington avenue, has returned to her home in Glen Gardner.

CONTRACT AWARDED.

Real Estate Operator John P. Fenner has awarded Contractor Samuel M. Titus the contract of erecting a new house in the borough. The house will be erected for speculative purposes. Mr. Fenner has not quite made up his mind as to the location of the house. This may be wondered at by some but not by those who are acquainted with the numerous properties owned by Mr. Fenner in the borough. The names of those who would like to have just such a question to decide are legion.

SOME CHECKER PLAYER.

Are you fond of the game of checkers? Do you consider that you are a good player and if so have you ever had a desire to try conclusions with a real expert at the game? If such is the case you can have your wish gratified at almost any hour of the day and in Dunellen at that. All that you will have to do is to walk in the North avenue fruit and confectionary store of Paul Ratti, and mention the word checkers to Mr. Ratti, and no matter how busy he may happen to be he will ask you in a casual enough manner whether you would like to play a game or so and you will shortly find yourself at a glass topped table debating as to what move to make next. And what is more, the more your initial game with Mr. Ratti gets, the more apparent will it become to you that you must consider your moves well before you make them, because Mr. Ratti is "some player." He has defeated decisively all the local players of repute that the writer has knowledge of. Among those whom he met during the past couple of weeks or so are: W. B. LaRue, Owen Mohan, Sr., W. G. Smith Abram Hebard, Owen Mohan, Jr., Edwin LaRue and J. W. Moynihan.

Mrs. W. H. Snyder, of Penfield place, who fell a week ago Saturday while in the act of boarding a trolley car and whom it was feared at one time might have pneumonia as a result, is now improving nicely.

3½ PER CENT. INTEREST.

The money received by the borough for its $55,000 of collecting sewerage bonds is drawing 3½ per cent. interest in a checking account in the local bank. The borough could have received 4 per cent. interest on this money by placing it in a saving account, but interest would have then been lost on all sums drawn out before the first of June.

LIGHT CONTRACT EXPIRES.

The borough's five-year street light contract with the Public Service Light Company expires shortly. The new contract will be read over very carefully by the Mayor and Councilman Jones, who are experienced men in the lighting business. Before making another contract the borough will ask that the old hood reflectors be replaced with new and that the lights be placed higher up on the poles. The borough also will endeavor to secure better terms as it is said that we are paying a higher rate for our service than Plainfield is.

KEEPING TABS ON LIGHTS.

Close tabs are being kept by Night Marshal Patrick Tarpey on the lights that go out. When a particular light goes out it is reported by the marshal to Chairman Ryan, of the lighting committee of the Council, and a record is kept of the length of time that it remains out. The borough collected $9.16 in rebates in this manner during the past quarter.

E. Washington Green, manager of the Dunellen Lumber and Stone Company, has just added a newly pointed wagon, of rich color, to the rolling stock of the company and another wagon or two are soon to follow.

PAST COUNCILORS TO MEET.

The annual meeting of the Past Councilors' Association, of Middlesex County, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be held with Riverside Council, No. 33, at South River, tomorrow evening. Officers for the year will be elected and installed. George William Dunn, of Good Intent Council, No. 234, will be elected to succeed William P. Compton, as county councilor. Other important matters will be discussed and a full attendance of the members is requested.

'Plains & Fanwood.

Funeral services for Elmer Carter son of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Carter, residents of the "Big Woods" section, were held from his late home yesterday afternoon and later from Mt. Olive church. Interment was made in the Methodist cemetery. Carter attended school at Plainfield High School, on Thursday, as usual and was feeling all right until he reached home, when he was taken suddenly ill and expired shortly after. He is survived by several brothers and sisters.

The members of the Fanwood Tuesday Afternoon Literary Club met at the home of Mrs. A. D. Beeken, on Martine avenue, yesterday afternoon, and spent several hours discussing English of the Victorian period. Several papers and articles dealing with Thackeray's works were read. An hour was spent discussing current events after which tea was served. The next meeting will be in two weeks.

The All Saints' branch of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Episcopal church, attended a union of a number of societies in the Grace Episcopal church parish house, yesterday afternoon, and listened to a very interesting lecture on "Oriental Missions and the New International Hospital at Tokio," by Mrs. Charles R. Pancoast, of Philadelphia.

George H. Johnston, of Scotch Plains, who has held several other offices in the State, has been appointed journal clerk of the State Assembly.

A meeting of the Belgian Society will be held at the home of the Misses Kyte, on Martine avenue, tomorrow afternoon. The society has grown considerably in the two months it has been organized and now numbers about forty ladies from Fanwood and Scotch Plains. One lot of socks, gloves and other wearing apparel has been sent to the headquarters in New York and another is nearly ready to go.

At the last meeting of the Altar Guild of All Saints' Episcopal church it was decided to hold a benefit sale and the coming Saturday was chosen. The sale will be in progress at the residence of Mrs. R. Sherwood, on Martine avenue, between the hours of 2 and 5, when cake and pies will be on sale and tea will be served throughout.

Henry Jesperson, Sr., of Martine avenue, has left on a business trip which will take him through New York State and Pennsylvania.

A meeting of the Lepers, composed of the few remaining faithful of the C. R. Society, will be held Friday evening in an endeavor to hatch a scheme which will stop the onrush of the Pedaraotos. The latter club is composed of a few dissatisfied with the C. R. Society and has succeeded in weaning away most of the old members. With Everett Marston to lead them the "faithful" ones will start life anew.

The weekly meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of All Saints' Episcopal church is being held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ernest Keib, on North avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Pence and children, have returned to their home in Brooklyn after visiting the Misses Kyte, of Martine avenue.

MAY TAKE TESTS OF GAS METERS IN THE FUTURE

Trenton, Jan. 13—State Superintendent of Weights and Measures William L. Waldron and the county superintendents met in conference here yesterday, to discuss legislation affecting their departments.

The question of whether or not the State department should undertake the testing of meters of gas, electric and water companies brought forth considerable discussion. In view of the action of the Legislature to act on the proposed net weight container law, which will increase the duties of the superintendents considerably, it was decided not to attempt too much 'r the line of regulation.

Superintendent Waldron will gather data on the advisability of his department taking over the examination of utility meters and report at a subsequent meeting. One of the difficulties advanced in the question of taking over the meter examinations was the necessity of obtaining an appropriation from the Legislature sufficient to equip the department with the necessary inspection force.

AROUSING INTEREST IN BIG TRADE CONVENTION

Amos Stote, writer on business topics generally and who has been devoting much of his time during the past three years to foreign trade investigation, is spending this week in the State in the interest of the National Foreign Trade Council. He carries credentials from James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, and William L. Saunders, chairman of the board, and president of the Ingersoll-Rand Company.

Mr. Stote is calling in many New Jersey cities this week to tell the business men some of the details of the National Foreign Trade Convention to be held in St. Louis, January 21-22. A special train will leave New York, January 19, for the New Jersey delegates.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

ON LIMITING HOURS OF NURSES

California's efforts to limit the working day of pupil nurses to eight hours naturally evoke sympathy from those who have benefitted by the gentle ministrations of this class of young women.

To a patient a nurse is often the one link that connects him with life, and convalescence in a hospital will probably convince any one that self-sacrifice and over-fatigue are the daily portion of those in attendance.

Devotion of duty and fortgetfulness of physical weakness are two things, of course, which must be taught a nurse, but the lessons are hard, so hard sometimes that the tears they exact in privacy are a pathetic tribute to the thoroughness of the system.

From the hospitals' standpoint the problem is a difficult one. They have a tremendous amount of work to do, and it is imperative that it be done. Demands upon them are often in excess of their financial resources. It is certain, too, that the rule that he who needs help shall be aided is not one that should be revised, and the nurses themselves would be the first to oppose any change in that ideal.

Perhaps after all a solution lies not in legislation, but in a better understanding by the public of the problems nurse and hospital must face. A little more co-operation outside might go a long way in aiding those who work so faithfully inside with the sick. In health let us not forget those who aid us in illness.—Newark Evening News.

The appointment of a Board of Unemployment by Mayor Raymond is perhaps the finest thing that has been done under the new administration. Unemployment is a problem which Newark must face, not under the guise of charity, but by helping, where possible, men to help themselves. The saddest effects of the conditions which have increased the ranks of the jobless is found among men who are too proud—or self-respecting—to accept charity, and rather than do so would face the utmost suffering, themselves and for those dependent upon them. How will the board's plans work out? In what way will citizens and the city help?—Newark Evening News.

FIGHT LAND GRANT TO R. R.

Macon, Ga., Jan. 13—Members of the Board of Aldermen will protest the agreement between the city of Macon and the Central of Georgia Railway, which provides for the transfer of valuable city land to the railroad for the site of the new $1,000,000 railroad station. The Railroad Commission will be asked to investigate the provision giving absolute title to the railroad of the city land involved.

RACE TRACK CASE TO JURY.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 13—Today is set for a jury trial of the suit of R. J. Allison against Governor Lee Cruce and officers of the State militia, for interfering with the Tusla running races last spring. Judge George W. Clark, of the District Court, heard the case in December and ordered a jury trial for January 13, on an issue of facts.

SECOND ANNUAL MEETING HELD BY MANUFACTURERS

A resolution urging the appointment of Col. Lewis T. Bryant, present Commissioner of Labor, as the head of the new Bureau of Industry and Labor, which will be created from the now existing departments of labor and the bureau of labor statistics, was passed at the second annual convention of the Manufacturers' Association of New Jersey, held in Newark, yesterday. J. Phillip Bird, of this city, is president of the association and was one of the speakers at yesterday's session.

The resolution, copies of which were sent to the Governor and members of the State Legislature, recited that Col. Bryant's work as Commissioner of Labor had been highly satisfactory to the manufacturers of the State, and that his personal equipment and ten years' devotion to the study of labor questions in New Jersey eminently qualified him to head the new department.

SHERIFF OTTO DEFENDS SCHOOL IN COUNTY JAIL

Elizabeth, Jan. 13—Sheriff George C. Otto's reply to an attack by C. B. Stonaker, of the State Charities Aid and Prison Reform Association, who criticized his "school jail" plan, is causing much comment. Mr. Stonaker said that he favored putting the prisoners to work, but that educating them is out of the question because the average jail term is too short. Sheriff Otto says his plan is practical enough and that Stonaker is unfamiliar with jail conditions.

The "school plan" is being held in abeyance at present because of legal obstacles, which the sheriff hopes to overcome by legislative aid. There are more inmates in the jail at present than at any period in its history.

Sheriff Otto says that Mr. Stonaker has not visited the jail for more than a year.

OPPOSITION TO PROJECT TO INCORPORATE BASKING RIDGE

Bernardsville, Jan. 13.—A hitch has developed in the plan of the Basking Ridge Improvement Society to have that community constituted a borough and set apart from Bernards township, Somerset county, of which this place is a part. The improvement association's committee met informally with prominent citizens of this place at the Old Stone Hotel here. The local men objected to so large an amount as $750,000 in tax valuations being withdrawn from the township.

The Basking Ridge delegation was for having the boundary of the proposed borough at the election district lines. The local men thought this would bring it too close to Bernardsville and suggested that property reducing the valuation by $100,000 be left for the township.

This reduction would so severely cripple the proposed borough that the Basking Ridge committee was of the opinion that under such a condition the formation of a borough would be impossible at present, but it may be that a compromise will be effected.

Assemblyman Ogden H. Hammond has agreed to submit a bill to the Legislature authorizing the move to make Basking Ridge a borough.

REDFIELD AT NEW YORK; MAYOR STANDS QUIZ

New York, Jan. 13—Secretary of Commerce Redfield will be the guest of honor tonight of the Chamber of Commerce of the Borough of Queens. W. Morgan Shuster, former treasurer general of Persia, will also attend. "Optimism and Prosperity" will be the subject of the meeting.

The public will have a chance to quiz Mayor Mitchell on his administration, at an "accounting" meeting tomorrow night. The president of the Board of Alrermen, the police commissioner and comptroller will also be "on the carpet" before the people. This is a radical departure for New York officials, and is an attempt to bring the administration face to face with the public it serves.

42D ANNUAL MEETING.

Trenton, Jan. 13.—The forty-second annual meeting of the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture will be held at the State House, Trenton, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, January 27, 28 and 29. Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerville, who is president of the Board, will preside. A number of lectures, several of which are illustrated, as well as interesting demonstrations, will feature the gatherings.

FRISCO GETS WAR RELICS.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 13.—When the navy collier Caesar arrives here today, the exposition will be presented with government exhibits sent from Washington, including old army wagons used by Gen. Sherman on his march to the sea and others used by General Thomas as a field traveling office.

RE-ORGANIZATION NEEDED.

State Road Commissioner Edwin A. Stevens, in his annual report to the Governor, says that his department is weak because there is entirely too much work for the office force allowed him. He regrets that the Legislature failed to legalize a system of inviting bids which would give a choice of paving materials to be suggested by the bidders, thus creating the widest possible competition.

The report shows that to keep the State roads in reasonably good condition it will entail expenditures of from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 annually by the State, and from $3,000,000 to $3,500,000 on the part of the counties and municipalities, a total of at least $5,000,000.

The Trenton Times makes a timely suggestion that before discussing the means by which such fortunes are to be raised, it will be well to consider how they are to be distributed. Commissioner Stevens has practically admitted in his report and to the Hennessy investigating committee that the department has not been efficient, and that in some of the counties the supervision has been incompetent, neglectful and corrupt. To continue to send out public moneys through such agencies is not to be thought of.

There must be a complete reorganization of administrative and supervisory agencies, beginning with the State Road Department and continuing down through the Boards of Freeholders, county engineers and road committees. If there is any one duty that rests upon the Road Department it is to see that the contracts for roads are awarded under honest, open specifications, that the roads be well built of the best materials and that the money be honestly spent.

If this is not to be done the department may as well be abolished, and the distribution of the motor vehicle moneys left with the State Comptroller and Treasurer. The suggestion that county engineers—the honest and competent ones, of course—be given longer terms or placed under civil service protection is a good one. Then they will not be so likely to fall under the temptation of crooked contractors and material men.

Assemblyman Carlton Godfrey, in his address accepting the speakership at Trenton yesterday took occasion to ramble through a long dissertation on the tariff, the sale of munitions of war to foreign nations, the increase in freight rates, and a few other kindred evils (?) which he feels have resulted from the Democratic administration. Just what this has to do with the needed reforms in New Jersey is hard to understand. The remarks sounded suspiciously like some of the talks which are printed in the Congressional Record, and they certainly concerned nothing which the New Jersey Legislature can correct. If the legislators take up a corresponding share of the time during the session for as silly a lot of buncombe as that displayed by the Speaker of the House yesterday, there is little prospect for anything of value being accomplished in the way of needed reforms. Most of the Speaker's remarks were decidedly out of place.

That the directors of the Plainfield Exchange for Woman's Work have found it will be necessary to discontinue that splendid institution because of lack of support is much to be regretted. The organization has been of untold benefit to hundreds of worthy women, and if it goes out of existence it will mean a hardship to many families. Plainfield people have come forward so nobly this winter when appeals have been made for help for the many charitable causes in the city, that it seems a shame to have this one suffer. It is certainly to be hoped that some way will be found to continue the work between now and the time which has been set for the final dissolution meeting of all the members.

The decision of the City Council to grant no more retail licenses this year is timely. It will show those who might seek them that their effort will be futile, and do away with a lot of unnecessary wasting of time on the part of the city fathers for hearings. The general impression is that another wholesale license will be granted, and we cannot see how this can do any great harm in this city, for with the strict regulation of the traffic any person who received such a license would be compelled to live strictly up to the letter of the law.

The new auto bus ordinance which was passed on first and second readings by the City Council on Monday night will meet with the approval of many who were opposed to a former one, which was presented with the idea of driving the busses off certain streets of the city. It is a reasonable plan to permit the Mayor to forbid the use of certain streets, if in his judgment it is thought best, and there never has been any objection to licensing the busses, even from the owners of the line at which the ordinance is aimed.

The reception given Assemblyman William N. Runyon when he was sworn in at Trenton yesterday was extremely pleasing to the two score or more of friends who journeyed to the capital to see Plainfield's favorite son take the oath. There is a splendid opportunity for Judge Runyon to make a mark in the legislative history of the State, and we have no doubt that he will measure up to that mark.

Let's take an optimistic view of yesterday's rain storm. Suppose there had been the same precipitation of snow. We'd all be wallowing around in two and three foot drifts today.

BOROUGH STUDENTS ENTER INTERSCHOLASTIC DEBATE

The subjects which will be used in connection with the interscholastic debates under the auspices of Rutgers College were discussed and approved of by the representatives of the different schools which will take part, at a meeting at Rutgers, Saturday.

The first debate will be held February 17. All the schools will debate at this time on the subject, "Resolved, that an Educational Qualification for Immigration, is Expedient, Condusive to the Welfare of the United States."

This topic will also be used for the next two debates. In the final debate, which will be held at Rutgers, the topic, "Resolved, that a Federal Law Prohibiting the Importation, Manufacture or Sale of Spirituous Liquors, Should be Enacted, Constitutionality Conceded."

North Plainfield High School will meet Bernardsville first, and the debate will probably be held at that place, as Bernardsville won the toss-up, which gave them the choice of places. The winner of this debate will meet Bound Brook or Somerville.

NEW PROGRAM FOR G. O. P. COMMITTEE

Chairman Newcorn to Introduce Novel Feature at Next Meeting.

Informal discussion of various topics pertinent to the work of the organization will be an innovation introduced by Chairman William Newcorn, of the Union County Republican Committee, at the next meeting of the committee. The idea is to have a recognized authority on the subject under consideration outline his views on the subject and then to entertain a round-table discussion among members. No effort will be made to pick sides as in a debate, but those interested will be allowed to say just what they think of the proposition.

The program as mapped out includes the consideration of woman suffrage at one meeting and an address by an anti at the next. The questions expected to arise during the session of the Legislature will also be taken up, probably several of them at the same meeting, and this same plan will also include proposed national legislation while Congress is in session.

The public will be invited to attend all of these meetings and it is proposed to have the question to be considered and the speaker announced in advance, so that all who desire information on the subject will be able to avail themselves of the opportunity.

It is proposed to name a committee to arrange for the speakers and the questions to be taken up, providing the project meets with favor by the committeemen and sufficient encouragement can be obtained to indicate that the experiment will be supported. If this can be done, it will mean that the committee will benefit greatly through being kept actively together throughout the year and, at the same time, the legislators will be kept informed as to the views of their constituency.

GRAND CHAPTER TO MEET IN NEWARK

Order Eastern Star Lodge Will Convene January 20-21.

Arrangements are now being made for the forty-fifth annual meeting of the Grand Chapter of New Jersey, Order of the Eastern Star, to be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, in Newark, on January 20 and 21. The session will begin at 10 a. m. on the first day and will end with the election and installation of officers on the second day.

The members of the Grand Chapter, most of whom will attend the meeting this month, are the matrons, patrons, assistant matrons and past matrons and patrons of the various individual chapters. In Elizabeth there are three chapters, Eureka No. 2, Lucinda No. 15, and Augusta No. 16. Of these, the officers have not all been installed for the coming year, so that the local delegates to the Grand Chapter are not yet known.

The business of the Grand Chapter will be to hear annual reports, elect officers and transact what business has come up during the year which awaits the attention of the chapter.

The present grand officers, whose terms will end on January 21, are as follows:

Most worthy grand matron, Mrs. Catherine Handy; most worthy grand patron, James Bridges; right worthy assistant grand matron, Mrs. Lilly White; right worthy grand secretary, Mrs. Margaret J. Burns; right worthy grand treasurer, Mrs. Elizabeth Winter; right worthy grand conductress, Mrs. Lydia Oliver; right worthy grand assistant conductress, Mrs. Jennie Bolton; right worthy grand attorney, Arthur A. de Bonneville; worthy grand marshal, Mrs. Bertha Schinzel; worthy grand chaplain, Mrs. Laura Buttle; worthy grand organist, Mrs. Kate Sealy; worthy grand Adah, Mrs. Minnie Reed; worthy grand Ruth, Mrs. Cora Titus; worthy grand Esther, Mrs. Ada Klinghoffer; worthy grand Martha, Mrs. Emma E. Geissler; worthy grand Electa, Mrs. Catherine Haney; worthy grand warder, Mrs. Anna V. Snyder, and worthy grand sentinel, Richard H. Handy.

The highly talented and popular Harrison-Armstrong players will head the bill at Proctor's Theatre opening tomorrow. They will present their latest comedy drama success, "Clearing Accounts," a vehicle that has brought them great success during the present season. Other numbers on the bill will be the Four Readings, in a marvelous acrobatic offering; The Romanys, comedy instrumentalists; Evans & Wilson, in a comedy sketch, and Jennie Dresden, comedienne. The sixth installment of the serial film "Zudora" will be shown this afternoon and tonight. The second installment of "The Exploits of Elaine" will be shown Friday. Several films are in preparation for next week, one of which will be another serial, making three in all to be shown at the Proctor house.

"THE WICKEDEST MAN IN PLAINFIELD," SERMON THEME

The special services which have been held at the Monroe Avenue Methodist church for the past ten days, are being continued this week. Rev. Albert J. Schatzman, of Linden who was prevented from preaching last evening by the inclement weather, will preach tonight. The pastor Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, will preach tomorrow evening on the topic, "The Wickedest Man in Plainfield." The Sunday-school officers and teachers will be in charge of the Friday evening service. Rev. Frederic J. Hubach, district superintendent, will occupy the pulpit at the Sunday morning service.

PRESENT A PROGRAM OF INDIAN SONGS AND STORIES

The home study class of the Women's Missionary Circle of the First Baptist church, met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, on Rockview avenue, and enjoyed an unusually attractive program entitled, "The Indian in Song and Story." The program was arranged and in charge of Miss Marguerite McCutchen and Mrs. Robert Lowry, and followed the devotional exercises led by Mrs. B. J. Shreve and Mrs. Reuben Knox.

"The Indian in Song and Story" was based on Alice Fletcher's book of stories and songs. The stories were read by Mrs. Lowry and the songs were sung by Mrs. Robert Giddes, accompanied on the piano by Miss Alice Drake.

This part of the program was greatly enjoyed by all present as was also the reading of extracts from "Ramona," by Mrs. Lowry. Following the program there was a social hour.

JEPPE ERICKSEN, WELL KNOWN R. R. AGENT, DEAD

Jeppe Eriksen, aged sixty-two years, a native of Scandinavia, and for many years a resident of the Netherwood section of this city, died at his home, 1001 South avenue, yesterday, after a lingering illness. Mr. Eriksen had lived in this city for the past twenty years, and for a long time was the ticket agent at the Netherwood staton of the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

Mr. Eriksen had a wide circle of friends among the commuters of the eastern end of the city, being well-liked because of his genial disposition. A wife, two daughters and two sons survive. The funeral services, which are to be held at his home Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, will be in charge of Rev. Henry Mesier, rector of St. Stepheh's church. Burial will be made at Hillside cemetery.

PROMINENT ELIZABETH MAN DROPPED DEAD AT HIS HOME

Edward J. Coleman, one of the best known political leaders in Elizabeth, dropped dead at his home on Marshal avenue, Elizabeth, last night, death being assigned to apoplexy. He attended a Board of Works meeting at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and was apparently in the best of health when he left his business associates before returning to his home.

Mr. Coleman was about forty-eight years of age and at one time was city clerk of Elizabeth. He had been a recognized authority in municipal affairs at the county seat for the past fifteen years and was a staunch Republican.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE IN HONOR OF MISS RYAN

A birthday surprise party was tendered to Miss Anna Ryan at her home on East Third street, last evening. Part of the evening was devoted to the playing of "500," the prizes for those gaining the highest number of points being awarded to Miss Ria Carty and Miss May Day. Consolation prizes were given to the Misses Burke.

The guests were delightfully entertained by solos readered by Miss T. McGinley and Miss K. Flynn, accompanied on the piano by Miss E. Casey. Recitations were given by Miss K. M. Roche and Miss A. Ryan. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

PLAINFIELD INVESTMENT AND LOAN ASSOCIATION ELECTS

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Investment and Loan Association was held in the club rooms of the Y. M. H. A., 202 West Front street, last night, and the election of officers was held. Jacob Sklarew was chosen president; Victor Drelick, vice president; J. A. Fass, treasurer, and Morris B. Block, secretary. There were also six directors elected, they being Morris Abrams, H. S. Schwartz, S. Schwartz, Irving Kunzman, Albert Shiff and Harry Dreier.

The secretary gave a very satisfactory report of the year's work, which was very encouraging. The association at present has a membership of one hundred and seventy-five, which is more than a two and a half per cent increase over last year, when it was organized with sixty on the roll.

WAR NEWS

and Steinbach if the pressure there becomes too great for the present forces.

It is said the recent French advance into Alsace was merely for the purpose of feeling out the Germans, discovering their strength, the kind of fortifications they had constructed and the location of the troops.

Now it is stated General Gallieni will shortly send his ten army corps on a tremendous drive to the Rhine.

General Gallieni left Paris on New Year's eve to assume his new command. He is sixty-six years old and a great friend of General Joffre, who has long recognized his qualities of leadership.

Amsterdam, Jan. 13.—A Catholic priest who saw Cardinal Mercier last Saturday, told the Central News correspondent this morning that the cardinal has at no time been held prisoner, but has been subjected to interrogation by the Germans in his palace.

The Vienna Volksblatt declares that the total losses of the Russians in their seige of the fortress of Przemysl have been formidable. The sallies by the garrison have always resulted in a great number of killed and wounded among the besiegers. A number of Russian army divisions recently left Przemysl for positions on the Dunajec River, and in the Carpathians, leaving but a minor force to continue the investiment.

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 13.—An attack upon Egypt from Syria cannot be long deferred, says an official statement made by Sir Arthur McMahon, the new British high commissioner. The Germans continue to collect large forces for the army in Syria, but it is foredoomed to failure.

Paris, Jan. 13.—The French war office gave out the following statement at 3 o'clock this afternoon:

"The bad weather which continues almost all along the entire front renders operations very difficult, especially in Belgium, where great sand storms in the Dunes, near the sea, are occurring. In the region of Nieuport and of Ypres our artillery has been very successful against the works of the enemy.

"On the Aisne, to the northeast of Soissons, the fighting around hill No 132 has been very severe and lasted during the whole of the day. The Germans employed in these engagements large bodies of troops.

"We have maintained our positions on the heights of Perthes. To the west of the hill toward the east, our troops have been compelled to relinquish some ground. The fighting continues.

"In the region of Champagne, from Rheims to the Argonne, very violent artillery duels have taken place. In the Argonne rain and wind have interefered with infantry action. In the Vosges fog and heavy snowfalls have hampered operation."

Berlin, Jan. 13 (By wireless).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"Western theatre of war—Fierce artillery duels have occurred in the neighborhood of Nieuport, resulting in the evacuation of the enemy's trenches at Paijsburg, a suburb of Nieuport. The enemy's attacks near the canal of La Bassee have been repulsed. French attacks at La Boisselle Hill, and Touvin were repulsed.

"Yesterday unsuccessful attacks on the hills near Crony were followed by German counter attacks, which resulted in complete defeat, clearing the hills to the northeast of Bussle and also north of Crony. We took two French positions, won 700 prisoners, four cannon and several machine guns. French sappers attacked in the neighborhood of St. Mihiel, but their attacks were successfully repulsed.

"Eastern theatre of War—The situation is unchanged."

KENNEL CLUB MEETING.

An important meeting of the Plainfield Kennel Club will be held in the Queen City Hotel tomorrow night. It is requested that all members be present at this time as the proposed dog shows to be held under the local club's auspices will be discussed in detail.

FINAL PLANS FOR BIG CELEBRATION

Boy Scouts to Fittingly Observe Fifth Anniversary of Movement.

ALL PATROLS TO RALLY

Week of Festivities Will Be Universal—Local Council Met Last Night to Arrange Details—George T. Leighs Elected to Council.

At 8:15 Monday evening, February 8, 300,000 Boy Scouts of America will stand at attention, make the officers' salute and either silently or audibly repeat the scout oath. It will mark the fifth anniversary of the incorporation of the Boy Scouts of America and this feature is only one of a number that will serve to emphasize the significance of Scout Anniversary Week beginning Sunday, February 7.

The local Boy Scout Council at its meeting in the Y. M. C. A. parlors Monday, the largest meeting so far held since organization, decided to have Plainfield take part in this nation-wide observance and so the ministers of the various churches are going to be asked to at least refer to the Boy Scout movement in their sermons or preludes on the morning of Sunday, February 7.

It was the idea of council that perhaps some of the ministers would be in favor of making that day "Boy Sunday," when everybody in the city, whether a scout or not, would be urged to attend that church service, at which he would hear a strong sermon particularly applicable to him. All Boy Scouts are expected to attend service that morning in uniform, each in the church of his own denomination.

On Monday, February 8, it is planned to have each troop execute a "good turn," that is, to perform some kind gratuitous act for somebody or something sometime during the day. In the evening there will be a big Boy Scout union rally, to which scouts from everywhere in the vicinity will be invited. A prominent speaker, who has a special appeal to boys, will be here and Engineers' Patrol, Troop No. 5, now holders of the Paul R. Collier championship pennant, will be invited to erect a 30-foot bridge in 30 seconds, the time made at the last field day. Red Cross Patrol of the same troop will also be invited to give a demonstration of ambulance drilling, and Troop 9 will be asked to demonstrate tent pitching. The parents of all Boy Scouts and friends of the movement will be asked to be guests of the council, which will be present in a body.

George T. Leighs, of 714 West Fourth street, was elected a member of the council, last night, as representative of Hope chapel. Dr. George F. Moore, the secretary, announced that the council's charter had arrived and Second Deputy Scout Commissioners E. A. Sprowl, J. W. Aughiltree, F. M. Genung, F. E. Bach and the commissioner were selected as the committee of plans for the Boy Scout anniversary observances. The anniversary falls on the next regular council meeting night, so council decided to hold an open informal meeting that night in conjunction with the scout rally.

A communication was received from Miss Bowman, librarian of the Plainfield Public Library, calling the attention of scouts to the fact that a space has been set aside in the juvenile department for the complete Boy Scout library, approved by headquarters and endorsed by parents and boys' workers everywhere as embodyfng the best reading for boys ever compiled. Scout masters will be formally notified. Alexander D. Doig was endorsed as assistant scoutmaster of Troop 12 in Hope chapel.

Several contributions were received from members of the council and of the Crescent Avenue church toward the Big Brother fund, and the following scouts made application for merit badges in the subjects named:

Thomas P. Fitch, Troop 5, first aid to animals, craftsmanship, carpentry, art, electricity, surveying, cooking, machinery, pioneering and conservation.

Harold McKay, Troop 5, art, first aid to animals, pioneering and machinery.

Caryl Dunavan, Troop 9, machinery, electricity, carpentry and camping.

There are now about fifty merit badge applications before the court of honor. The number will increase as scout work progresses in the city. It was necessary, in order that the ambitious scouts may progress without discouraging delay, that the court be enlarged to include the council as a whole. It is planned to have fifteen members present at scout headquarters in the First Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening, January 19, at which time many boys may be examined in merit badge tests simultaneously.

The examining board for that night has been selected by the commissioner as follows: John Leal, William Abbe, the Rev. Mr. Ralston, N. W. Smith, F. E. Bach, F. M. Genung, J. W. Aughiltree, Leslie R. Fort, Paul R. Collier, C. E. Bond, C. L. Bond, H. W. Satterfield, J. E. Davis, Dr. George T. Moore, David Dunavan and the commissioner.

WAR PARTS TORONTO FACULTY.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 13—When the board of governors of the University of Toronto meets tomorrow, the resignation of Professor H. Benzinger, of the department of oriental languages, will be acted upon. It is believed that the resignation of the eminent German professor will be accepted, and that this will end the university controversy. Bonno Tapper, another member of the faculty, resigned a short time ago, and Prof. Mueller became a British citizen by taking out naturalization papers. The University of Toronto faculty has been seriously upset by the war, and President Falconer keenly feels the loss of two of his most eminent professors.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Plainfield's victory over Woodbridge was shrouded in brilliancy and the local rooters thought of little else but the wonderful showing of their representatives. Few who attended the big contest, however, were conscious of the regrettable piece of poor sportsmanship exhibitied by a few rattle-headed red and blue schoolboys who attempted to make little of the presence of a squad of rival athletes, but friendly rooters, who attended the game. North Plainfield High School was represented in the P. H. S. cheering section by round numbers and it may be said to the boroughites' credit that they certainly did their part in cheering the Plainfielders on during the first half. Between the two periods, however, some poor representatives of schoolboy spirit undertook to slur the North Plainfield High School representatives because of their presence at the game. It cut the feelings of the boroughites, but they failed to retaliate. It was only natural for them to stop cheering for the Plainfielders, however, but THEY DID NOTHING to help Woodbridge in the line of lung work.

This contemptible piece of poor sportsmanship which may be laid at the door of a small handful of P. H. S. boys, should not be tolerated in the future and if the Plainfield school knows what is best, it will come across with an apology to the boroughites. It's all right to engage in a little friendly joshing between factions but the boys of the High School are old enough to use a little discretion and hold a little respect for their friendly rivals. It may be said to the credit of North Plainfield that they have never been known to do anything out of the way or to make light of the appearance of Plainfield High School rooters at a borough game, even if the PLAINFIELDERS DID SELECT TO ROOT AGAINST THE BOROUGH PLAYERS.

Special Wuxtra! Roselle High School won a basketball game. Never fear, little schoolboy, it was only a verdict over their fellow townsmen the Roselle Park performers. Somebody's got to get the credit for picking a spot mark, however, for the Roselle players would never annex a victory on playing merits alone.

Secretary Bill Nash was a little late in the presentation of his Junior League averages this last week. Somebody's hide was saved by the fact that the averages were compiled before that Paterson-Brunswick tilt Monday night.

Plainfield and North Plainfield girls open their league schedule Friday afternoon. Remember it's better to be in at the start than to crowd the finish.

"Jay" says in the Elizabeth Journal:

"Originality seems to be part of the make-up of the Plainfield High School sextet, too. Only a few weeks ago one of these Plainfield lassies won a whole lot of attention by caging the ball in sixteen out of eighteen chances from the foul line, somewhat of a record among girls' teams in this vicinity. Last Saturday this same Plainfield team took on the girls from Cranford High School and beat them by a score of 20 to 0. That's somewhat of a record, too."

Drop around the Queen City some day, Jay, old man, and the Queen City maidens will give you the glad hand.

The Robins are leading the Sparrows in the chilly month of January. Those Columbus Club pinners might have selected a few more appropriate names for their leaguers.

PHENOMENAL EXHIBITION GAVE LOCALS DECISION OVER WOODBRIDGE QUINTET

In one of the most phenomenal exhibitions of the court pastime ever seen on a local or borough floor, the Plainfield High School quintet yesterday afternoon, smothered the Woodbridge High School speed artists under a 69 to 15 pile of pointers. Team-work executed with clock-like precision, accurate shooting and clean, close guarding, gained the notable verdict for the Queen City youngsters. Woodbridge High School players, the two-time conquerors of North Plainfield and Rahway High School's chief source of worry in the race for the State championship, were a tinge off-color, but only tinge. The visiting team exhibited a finished article of basketball and their coach, Jesse Neff, who stood bewildered on the side-lines while his charges performed in a dazed manner on the playing floor, averred that their playing was only a slim margin below par.

Plainfield's good playing won the contest. Even the local coach could not account for the superhuman article of the pastime staged by the red and blue youngsters. Their snappy, lightning lateral and criss-cross manipulation of the spheriod held the Woodbridge representatives in a trance. Few penalties were levied on the players during the two twenty-minute chukkers and in that time the Plainfielders managed to cage the pellet for thirty-one double deckers. In the first half two field goals and one foul comprised the visitors' contribution, while the Plainfielders hung up five one-point tosses and fifteen of the two-point variety. The initial period ended with the tally card reading 35 to 9.

Heretofore the P. H. S. players have indulged in the passing game, but have neglected the shooting end. Yesterday afternoon's exhibition was a replica of other engagements as far as the passing was concerned but the locals also managed to inject a little sharp-shooting into their game. Invariably the ball was touched off at centre only to be nestled in the red and blue iron ring without having toughed a single Woodbridge hand.

Scoring was fairly evenly divided on the winning side with Rosenson, Captain McNamee, Wheelan and Peacock leading the way. In the middle of the second half Coudray and Ryder replaced McNamee and Wheelan and toward the end Canter took Rosenson's place. All of the substitutes did good work.

The scores:

Swimming News and Notes

Written for the Daily Press by LEWIS P. HANSEN.

Swimming notes ySabamcS

The twenty-second annual Sportsmen's Show came to a close on Saturday night. The feature of the evening was the high diving from the Garden rafters.

Mae Eccleston, of London, England, gave her usual performance from seventy feet above water. Kearney P. Speedy made his nightly dive from eighty feet above the tank into four foot six inches of water.

Charley Herold won the eighty-yard scratch race for men, with Kneckt, W. S. Y. M. C. A., second, and Z. Tobias, third. The race was closely contested throughout, but Herold got a good lead over his opponents on the last twenty yards, which the others were unable to overcome.

The Annette Kellerman Cup was won by Miss Josephine Bartlett, having scored the largest number of points during the week. Miss Bartlett also won the scratch diving contest, with Miss Agnes Canzer, second, and Miss Daisy Greenhall, third.

It is to be regretted that the New York A. C. swimmers were not allowed to compete, as their appearance would have made the show far more attractive, besides increasing the amount of the competition.

Miss Mae O'Loughlin gave a special diving exhibition which created a great deal of enthusiasm among the spectators. She has proved herself to be one of the most graceful woman divers in the East. Her form was superb throughout and she cut through the water like a knife, with hardly a ripple as she disappeared under the surface of the water.

E. Schrenck, the former star of the Argo Swimming Club, has been selected captain of the water polo team of the University of Pennsylvania in place of F. Lyons, who has left college, and announces the following choice of players for the intercollegiate matches: Russell and Given, forwards; Shryock, centre; Schrenck and Ratner, backs; Swan, goal tender. The team was booked to open the season on Friday against City College, of New York, but a postponement was asked, owing to an important home engagement, and the meet probably will be held on January 22.

The proposed visit to New York of George Hodgson and his teammates of the Montreal Amateur A. A., will not materialize this month, if at all. The Canadian swimmers counted on obtaining sufficient guarantees from clubs and colleges in this country to defray most of their traveling expenses, but now report inability to secure a thing like the necessary financial support. They have not given up hope, and are still negotiating for meets with several organizations, planning to come late in February, but their demands are rather beyond the customary, and it is doubtful that they can be met, for clubs do not make it a practice of charging admission to their water carnivals and colleges hardly have the facilities to accommodate large enough crowds to warrant offering big guarantees.

The metropolitan 100-yard swimming championship will be the feature of the water sports under the direction of the New York A. C., tonight. Among the entrants are Herbert Vollmer, Joe Wheatley, Walter Ramme, Nick Nerich, Jim Reilly and John Zimnock, all good for one minute or under. The best race ever seen at the distance in this district is confidently anticipated. Also on the program are swimming handicaps at 50 and 200 yards, a fancy diving contest from the three foot springboard, and a fifty-yard obstacle race. Women will be admitted to the meet for the first time this season.

Midshipman Deschiels, of the Annapolis swimming team, is developing into an all round performer of remarkable ability. A few days ago he broke three of the Naval Academy records in quick succession, lowering the 40-yard time from 20 to 10 3-5 second; the 100-yard mark from 60 1-5 to 59 3-5 seconds, and the 220-yard standard from 2 minutes and 41 seconds to 2 minutes and 38 seconds. Pretty good work for a single meet. Matthew Mann, of Boston; saw Descheils score the triple victory and said he felt certain the speedy middy would beat the intercollegiate figures for 50 and 100 yards in the near future.

ONE JUNIOR MATCH.

The Newark and Elizabeth bowling teams, of the Elks' Junior League, are scheduled to meet on the latter's alleys tonight.

SOME COACHES VERSIONS OF PLAINFIELD VICTORY.

C. B. Wardlaw, Leal School

Plainfield put up one of the most wonderful exhibitions of basketball I have ever witnessed here. The team's passing and shooting was of high order and if the present gait can be maintained the Interscholastic League race outcome will be decidedly in Plainfield's favor.

Jesse Neff, Woodbridge Coach.

The Plainfield team beat my boys by fast, clean basketball. I never seen a better exhibition. and playing as they did this afternoon the Plainfielders would run away with the famous Rahway contingent. That game was a record breaker in the eyes of basketball critics and Plainfield should be proud of such a representative. The team would defeat us even with Wand and his absence was only felt in the slightest degree.

Ralph S. Patch, P. H. S. Coach.

I am at a loss to account for the team's wonderful showing. 'Nuff sed.

N. P. H. S.-Y. M. C. A. GAME BOOKED FOR BORO COURT

After comparing dates for some time and trying to fix up a game between their respective teams, the managers of the North Plainfield High School and Y. M. C. A. basketball fives have at last agreed on a day for the annual game between these two aggregations. The borough High School five met the association team in the Y. M. C. A. gym last year and a return match has been settled upon to be played on Saengerbund Hall court next month.

The date set for the game is Tuesday night, February 9, and dancing will follow as usual. Because of his heavy schedule, Manager Van Mater could not offer a return date at the Y. M. C. A., having every Saturday and Wednesday filled up to the middle of March, with the exception of the day after the Tuesday set for the Y. M. C. A. game.

This contest will serve as a good practice game for the High School team, as they are booked to meet Plainfield High School in the second game of the city title series three days later.

LUNDSTROM WINNER OF COLOR LEAGUE EVENT

The two standing broad jump event were held for the members of the Y. M. C. A. Color League last night, and was won by Lundstrom, a new member, who recently came here from Springfield, Mass. His distance was 17 feet, 9 inches, and Gus Engler was a close second, falling two inches short of this mark.

The results follow:

THREE NAVY BOYS LEAD RUNNING BROAD JUMP

The Army and Navy teams, of the Y. M. C. A. Color League, took part in the running broad jump event yesterday afternoon, the Navy having eight entrants and their opponents five. Douglas, Jackson and Wilson, all of the Navy, finished in one, two, three order, the highest mark being 12 feet, 3 inches. Snyder was the first Army man to place, his mark being 11 feet, 10 inches.

The results follow:

Name. Team.	Distance.
Douglas, Navy	12- 3
Jackson, Navy	12- 2
Wilson, Navy	12
Snyder, Army	11-10
Blanchard, Navy	11-10

Kellogg, Army	10- 8
Hammann, Navy	10
Tomlinson, Navy	9-11
Seader, Army	8
Condict, Navy	7- 7
Canfield, Army	6

Y. M. C. A. PRACTICE.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will hold a light practice tonight at 8 o'clock. All the members of the squad should be present as there is a hard game in store for the team tomorrow night at New Brunswick.

N. P. H. S. WANTS TENNIS AMONG ITS BIG SPORTS

The North Plainfield High School Athletic Association has taken the first step in the organization of an interscholastic tennis tournament to be held next spring between the city and borough High Schools and Leals. Tennis has become a popular sport in the borough institution during the last four years and three very successful interclass tournaments have been held both in singles and doubles. The agitation for a spring inter-school tourney has been greater this year than ever before, and Hoyt Tomkinson, '15, who holds the singles title of the school, has been appointed to represent North Plainfield in the possible formation of a league.

This interest may lead to something better than interclass competition, that of forming a representative school team to play a regular schedule of matches to be arranged with schools in this vicinity. Plainfield has for years supported a tennis team and the boroughites would undoubtedly be equally successful in running a team. One drawback to this is that the borough school has no courts, but the use of courts in the borough could be secured without doubt.

ONE FIELD GOAL WON A GAME FOR P. H. S. ALLIES

The Allies defeated Yale, of the Junior League of the Plainfield High School, yesterday afternoon, by the close score of 14 to 12.

The lineup and score:

SOME RECORD BOWLING.

Sioux City, Iowa, Jan. 13—Darrell Hamlet created a record here by finishing a thirty-six-hour continuous performance on the bowling alleys. Hamlet began his endurance feat at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, and rolled until 9 o'clock Monday night without stopping for food or sleep, although he ate an occasional sandwich during the period. He rolled a total of 194 games, or an average of 5 7-18 games an hour. His top score was made in his 153d game when a total of 256 points were scored.

SHUGRUE THE FAVORITE.

Joe Shugrue's victories over Freddie Welsh and Charley White have made him a favorite over Leach Cross in their contest tonight at Madison Square Garden, New York, but the tremendous hitting power of the East Sider has established a confidence in his admirers. Cross' reputation as a ring star was on the wane when he fought Shugrue last March in New York, and after that hurricane affair Cross was again back on the map as a drawing card.

LOCAL JUNIORS IN ACTION.

Plainfield Junior Elks will entertain the Jersey City pinners tomorrow night on the local alleys.

P. H. S. NINE VS. PINGRY.

The Plainfield High School baseball team is booked to meet the Ping School nine next season at Elizabeth, according to the schedule just issued by the manager of the Elizabeth aggregation. Saturday, May 1, is the date given for the local team and no return game has been arranged by Manager Stelle, of the local team. The Pingry schedule contains fifteen games, and the season will open on Wednesday, April 14, against the Kearny High School team.

ELKS' LEAGUE POSTPONEMENTS.

The Elks' League bowling match scheduled for last night between the Rahway and Jersey City teams, at Jersey City, was postponed. The Jersey City Elks asked for the postponement, as their members desired to attend a social affair conducted last night by the New York Elks. The Plainfield bowlers were scheduled to perform on the Rutherford alleys, but this affair was also postponed.

N. P. H. S. AT MORRISTOWN.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team left today on the 11:27 train for Morristown, where it will play the Morristown school. Those who took the trip are Captain Hyman Abrams, Coach Paul Collier, Duclos VanMater, Bob Hebert, Warren Townley, Ronald Conray, Elmer French and Edson Day.

FLYNN DEFEATED REICH.

"Fireman" Jim Flynn easily defeated Al Reich at the Broadway A. C., New York, last night, in ten rounds. There were no knock-downs, and the battle was decidedly one-sided. Although Reich had a big advantage in weight, he was outclassed by the cleverness of his opponent.

Y. M. C. A. GAME.

The Y. M. C. A. basketball team will play in New Brunswick tomorrow night against the strong St. John's five. The trip will be made by automobiles and the entire squad with the exception of "Cutey" Glover will go. The team will start from the association building at 7 o'clock.

Corporation Notice

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J. January 11, 1915.

AN ORDINANCE

To License and Regulate Omnibuses, Stages and Other Vehicles Used for the Transportation of Passengers In or Through the City of Plainfield in Connection With Any Omnibus Line or Stage Line.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. No person, persons or corporation shall either as principal or as agent or employe of another, drive, run or operate in or through the City of Plainfield, any omnibus line or stage line for the transportation of passengers without first obtaining a license for each vehicle so used for that purpose, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 2. Any person, persons or corporation may make application, written or printed or partly written and partly printed, to the Mayor of said City for license to drive, run or operate in or through said City, an omnibus or stage line, but every such application shall be signed by the applicant or a duly authorized agent of the applicant and shall designate the particular description of vehicle or vehicles intended to be so used. Whenever any such application is granted as hereinafter provided, the City Clerk shall cause the same to be endorsed with the date of the grant and the number of the license granted, and filed in his office.

Sec. 3. The Mayor shall have the power to grant, and to refuse in his discretion, any such application, but every such license granted by the Mayor shall state the object for which it is given, the number and description of vehicles licensed thereunder, the name or names of the person, persons or corporation to whom the license is granted, the number of the license, the date of its expiration, and it shall be signed by the Mayor attested by the City Clerk and countersigned by the Chief of Police before it shall become operative.

Sec. 4. Every such license shall expire on the first day of March following the date on which it is granted, and no such license shall be granted except upon the payment by the applicant therefor to the City Clerk for the use of the City, of a license fee of Fifteen Dollars ($15.00), for each vehicle to be used thereunder, and no vehicle shall be used thereunder other than a vehicle specified therein.

Sec. 5. The Common Council may, from time to time, by resolution, forbid the use of any particular street or streets, avenue or avenues, highway or highways, or portion or portions thereof, in said City by any vehicle or vehicles licensed under this ordinance and, after the adoption of any such resolution and before the same is rescinded, no vehicle licensed under this ordinance shall use or pass through or along any street, avenue or highway or portion thereof, the use whereof by such vehicle is forbidden by any such resolution.

Sec. 6. Every omnibus, stage or other similar vehicle, the use whereof may be authorized by any license granted under this ordinance, shall at all times have displayed on each side of the outside thereof, in a conspicuous place, the number of the then current license under which it is being used in said city; also another numeral sufficient to distinguish it from every other vehicle used under such license.

Sec. 7. Every vehicle used by virtue of any license granted under this ordinance shall be subject to every ordinance of the City of Plainfield, and every regulation of the Board of Police of the City of Plainfield, touching upon or regulating street traffic or the standing or movement of vehicles in public streets or highways.

Sec. 8. Any license granted under this ordinance may be suspended or revoked by the Mayor or City Judge upon proof to his satisfaction that such licensed person, persons or corporation, or any person acting in his, their or its behalf has violated this ordinance or any other ordinance of the City of Plainfield, or regulation of the Board of Police aforesaid, provided, that no license shall be so suspended or revoked without reasonable opportunity first afforded to the licensed person or corporation to be heard in his or its own behalf; and no person or corporation shall, during the suspension or after the revocation of his or its license, use any vehicle so licensed, in the operation of any such omnibus line or stage line.

Sec. 9. Each and every person or corporation who or which shall violate, and each and every person or corporation who shall direct, assist in or connive at the violation of this ordinance shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine not exceeding Twenty Dollars for each offense.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.—Adv.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic, you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.—Adv.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat Less Meat Also Take Glass of Salts Before Eating Breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water, also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.—Adv.

HERMAN KLINSMAN CHOSEN PRESIDENT OF SAENGERBUNDS

A large number attended the annual meeting of the Gesang and Turn Verein Society, last evening, despite the inclement weather. Reports of the various officers and committees were presented, indicating that the society was in good financial condition at the present time. Preliminary plans for the annual masque ball to be held in Saengerbund Hall, Thursday evening, February 11, were made, the details to be announced later.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Herman Klinsman; vice-president, George Arnett; corresponding secretary, G. Batano; financial secretary, August Wolf; treasurer, Carl Feleber.

LOCAL CHAPTER WILL HOLD LINCOLN DAY CELEBRATION

Preliminary arrangements for a banquet were made by the Abraham Lincoln Chapter, No. 122, I. C. S. Fraternity of the World, at a meeting held in the local headquarters, last night, the following being appointed to serve on the committee for the event: Raymond W. Aldrich, chairman; Harry W. Swivel, C. E. Varian, F. Robert Shaw and J. R Barnes. The affair will be held the night of Lincoln's Birthday in the Kandy Shope, on East Front street.

Newton B. Smalley, former mayor of North Plainfield, will be the leading speaker on the after-dinner list and President A. V. Searing, of the local chapter, will act as master of ceremonies. Invitations have been extended to Supreme Registrar W. S. Gould, Supreme Worthy Patriarch J. D. Jones and Supreme Burzar W. S. Connels, all of Scranton, Pa.

ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS APPEAR IN FORCE AT LEGISLATURE

Exponents of the anti-suffragist movement in Plainfield and other parts of New Jersey were represented in force at the opening of the Legislature in Trenton yesterday contemplating putting up a vigorous fight against the granting of votes to women in this State. While those favoring and opposing the suffrage were on hand, the antis were greatly in the majority.

The antis were early at the State House and they lost not a single opportunity to "buttonhole" legislators and explain their side of the question. Among those at Trenton were Miss Anna Dayton, Miss Anna McHoaine, Mrs. Alexander F. Jamieson, Miss Clara Vegin, Miss Reina A. Lawrence, Mrs. John A. Lambert, Mrs. Ellsworth A. Corbett, Mrs. R. M. Sutcliffe, Mrs. Francis C. Lowthrope, Mrs. James M. Green, Mrs. Lewis Perrine, Mrs. George B. Yard, Mrs. Robert C. Maxwell and Mrs. L. C. Read.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant, this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding that a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

"Young man, what sense is there in you testifyin' that way? You're just takin' up valuable time. Of course you got the right to lie to save your neck, but we ain't goin' to stand for such foolishness. The rifle, the ammunition an' the bullet that killed Joe Kinade is against you. What's that? Open the door, somebody!"

The frost rushed in, taking form and substance in the heat of the room, while through the open door came the whining of dogs that decreased rapidly with distance.

"It's Sorensen an' Peabody," some one cried, "a-throwin' the whip into the dawgs an' headin' down river!"

"Now, what the"— Shunk Wilson paused, with dropped jaw, and glared at Lucy. "I reckon you can explain, Mrs. Peabody."

She tossed her head and compressed her lips, and Shunk Wilson's wrathful and suspicious gaze passed on and rested on Breck.

"An' I reckon that newcomer you've been chinnin' with could explain if he had a mind to."

Breck, now very uncomfortable, found all eyes centered on him.

"Sam was chewin' the rag with him, too, before he lit out," some one said.

"Look here, Mr. Breck," Shunk Wilson continued, "you've been interruptin' proceedin's, and you got to explain the meanin' of it. What was you chinnin' about?"

Breck cleared his throat timidly and replied, "I was just trying to buy some grub."

"What with?"

"Dust, of course."

"Where'd you get it?"

Breck did not answer.

"He's been snoopin' around up the Stewart," a man volunteered. "I run across his camp a week ago when I was huntin'. An' I want to tell you he was almighty secretious about it."

"The dust didn't come from there," Breck said. "That's only a low grade hydraulic proposition."

"Bring your poke here an' let's see your dust," Wilson commanded.

"I tell you it didn't come from there."

"Let's see it, just the same."

Breck made as if to refuse, but all about him were menacing faces. Reluctantly he fumbled in his coat pocket. In the act of drawing forth a pepper can it rattled against what was evidently a hard object.

"Fetch it all out!" Shunk Wilson thundered.

And out came the big nugget, fist size, yellow as no gold any onlooker had ever seen. Shunk Wilson gasped. Half a dozen, catching one glimpse, made a break for the door. They reached it at the same moment and, with cursing and scuffling, jammed and pivoted through. The judge emptied the contents of the pepper can on the table, and the sight of the rough lump gold sent half a dozen more toward the door.

"Where are you goin'?" Eli Harding asked as Shunk started to follow.

"For my dogs, of course."

"Ain't you goin' to hang him?"

"It'd take too much time right now. He'll keep till we get back, so I reckon this court is adjourned. This ain't no place for lingerin'."

Harding hesitated. He glanced savagely at Smoke, saw Pierre beckoning to Louis from the doorway, took one last look at the lump gold on the table and decided.

"No use you tryin' to get away," he flung back over his shoulder. "Besides, I'm goin' to borrow your dogs."

"What is it? Another one of them blamed stampedes?" the old blind trapper asked in a queer and petulant falsetto, as the cries of men and dogs and the grind of the sleds swept the silence of the room.

"It sure is," Lucy answered. "An' I never seen gold like it. Feel that, ole man."

She put the big nugget in his hand.

The door opened, and Breck entered. "Well," he said, "we four are all that are left in camp. It's forty miles to the Stewart by the cutoff I broke, and the fastest of them can't make the round trip in less than five or six days. But it's time you pulled out, Smoke, just the same."

Breck drew his hunting knife across the other's bonds. Smoke stood up, rubbing his wrists where the thongs had impeded the circulation.

"I've got a pack all ready for you," Breck said. "Ten days' grub, blankets, matches, tobacco, an ax and a rifle."

"Go to it," Lucy encouraged. "Hit the high places, stranger. Beat it as fast as God'll let you."

"I'm going to have a square meal before I start," Smoke said. "And when I start it will be up the McQuestion, not down. I'm going to search that other bank for the man that really did the killing."

Half an hour afterward, with a big plate of moose steak before him and a big mug of coffee at his lips, Smoke half started up from his seat. He had heard the sounds first. Lucy threw open the door.

"Hello, Spike! Hello, Methody!" She greeted the two frost rimmed men who were bending over the burden on their sled.

"We just come down from Upper Camp," one said as the pair staggered into the room with a fur wrapped object which they handled with exceeding gentleness. "An' this is what we found by the way. He's all in, I guess."

"Put him in the rear bunk there," Lucy said. She bent over and pulled back the furs, disclosing a face composed principally of large, staring, black eyes and of skin, dark and scabbed by repeated frostbite, tightly stretched across the bones.

"If it ain't Alonzo!" she cried. "You pore, starved devil!"

"That's the man on the other bank," Smoke said in an undertone to Breck.

"We found it raidin' a cache that Harding must 'a' made," one of the men was explaining. "He was eatin' raw flour an' frozen bacon, and when we got 'm he was cryin' an' squealin' like a hawg. Look at him! He's all starved, an' most of him frozen. He'll kick at any moment."

Half an hour later, when the furs had been drawn over the face of the still form in the bunk, Smoke turned to Lucy. "If you don't mind, Mrs. Peabody, I'll have another whack at that steak. Make it thick and not so well done. I'm a meat eater, I am."

CHAPTER IX.

Shorty Dreams.

"FUNNY you don't gamble none," Shorty said to Smoke one night in the Elkhorn. "Ain't it in your blood?"

"It is," Smoke answered. "But the statistics are in my head. I like an even break for my money."

All about them, in the huge barroom, arose the click and rattle and rumble of a dozen games, at which fur clad, moccasined men tried their luck. Smoke waved his hand to include them all.

"Look at them," he said. "It's cold mathematics that they will lose more than they win tonight—that the big proportion are losing right now."

"You're strong on figgers," Shorty murmured admiringly. "An', in the main, you're right. But they's such a thing as facts. An' one fact is streaks of luck. The only way to win at gamblin' is wait for a hunch that you've got a lucky streak comin' an' then play it to the roof."

"It sounds simple," Smoke criticised, "so simple I can't see how men can lose."

"The trouble is," Shorty admitted, "that most men get fooled on their hunches. On occasion I sure get fooled on mine. The thing is to try an' find out."

Smoke shook his head. "That's a statistic, too, Shorty. Most men prove wrong on their hunches."

"But don't you ever get one of them streaky feelin's that all you got to do is put your money down an' pick a winner?"

Smoke laughed. "I'm too scared of the percentage against me. But I'll tell you what, Shorty. I'll throw a dollar on the high card, right now, and see if it will buy us a drink."

Smoke was edging his way in to the faro table when Shorty caught his arm.

"Hold on! I'm gettin' one of them hunches now. You put that dollar on roulette."

They went over to a roulette table near the bar.

"Wait till I give the word," Shorty counseled.

"What number?" Smoke asked.

"Pick it yourself. But wait till I say let her go."

"You don't mean to say I've got an even chance on that table?" Smoke argued.

"As good as the next geezer's."

"But not as good as the bank's."

"Wait an' see," Shorty urged. "Now! Let her go!"

The gamekeeper had just sent the little ivory ball whirling around the smooth rim above the revolving, many slotted wheel. Smoke, at the lower end of the table, reached over a player and blindly tossed the dollar. It slid along the smooth green cloth and stopped fairly in the center of "34."

The ball came to a rest, and the gamekeeper announced, "Thirty-four wins!" He swept the table and alongside of Smoke's dollar stacked $35. Smoke drew the money in, and Shorty slapped him on the shoulder.

"Now, that was the real goods of a hunch, Smoke! How'd I know it? There's no tellin'. I just knew you'd win. Why, if that dollar of yourn'd fell on any other number it'd won just the same. When the hunch is right you just can't help winnin'."

"Suppose it had come double naught?" Smoke queried as they made their way to the bar.

"Then your dollar'd been on double naught," was Shorty's answer. "They's no gettin' away from it. A hunch is a hunch. Here's how. Come on back to the table. I got a hunch, after pickin' you for a winner, that I can pick some few numbers myself."

"Are you playing a system?" Smoke asked at the end of ten minutes, when his partner had dropped $100.

From idly watching Smoke became fascinated, following closely every detail of the game from the whirling of the ball to the making and the paying of the bets. He made no plays, however, merely contenting himself with looking on. Yet so interested was he that Shorty, announcing that he had had enough, with difficulty drew Smoke away from the table.

The gamekeeper returned Shorty the gold sack he had deposited as a credential for playing and with it went a slip of paper on which was scribbled "Out—$350." Shorty carried the sack and the paper across the room and handed them to the weigher, who sat behind a large pair of gold scales. Out of Shorty's sack he weighed $350, which he poured into the coffer of the house.

"That hunch of yours was another one of those statistics," Smoke jeered.

"I had to play it, didn't I, in order to find out?" Shorty retorted.

"Never mind, Shorty," Smoke laughed. "I've got a hunch right now"—

Shorty's eyes sparkled as he cried eagerly: "What is it? Kick in an' play it pronto."

"It's not that kind, Shorty. Now, what I've got is a hunch that some day I'll work out a system that will beat the spots off that table."

"System!" Shorty groaned, then surveyed his partner with a vast pity. "Smoke, listen to your side kicker an' leave system alone. Systems is sure losers. They ain't no hunches in systems."

Discouraged, They Sat Down.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— Please Yourself And Every One Will Be Pleased.

"'WELL, John, we will go to market today,' said Farmer Brown as he hitched up the old gray horse early one fine summer day."

Jack and Evelyn were cuddled up beside daddy upon the great divan intently listening to the evening story.

"So they loaded up the wagon with beautiful fresh vegetables, got up on the seat and started for the village. When they had gone a little way upon the road they met some neighbors. 'Pretty big load for that poor old horse!' they shouted at John and his father as they drove past.

"John looked at his father, and his father looked at John. 'Maybe this is too big a load,' said Mr. Brown. 'Let us get down and walk for awhile.'

"So they got down and walked along by the side of the wagon. It was very hot by this time, and John and his father sweat as they trudged along. Pretty soon they met some men, and one of the men said; 'How silly for you and your son to both walk this hot morning! Why don't you get up in the wagon and ride and let your little boy walk? He is younger than you.'

"So Farmer Brown climbed back into the wagon and rode along until they came to a woman and her daughter. 'How cruel that man is to make his little boy walk in this hot sun,' observed the elderly woman.

"So Farmer Brown climbed out of the wagon and let his little boy get up on the seat.

"Then they met a whole crowd of jolly young people going to the other village. 'What a boob you are, old man, to let that youngster ride.'

"Then Farmer Brown called to his son John to get down from the wagon, and they went and sat beside the road and thought about the differing opinions of the people who had passed them on the way and wondering what advice they had better follow when along came a motorcar and frightened the old gray horse.

"Then she began to run, and she ran and ran, scattering the vegetables as she went. Farmer Brown and his son John ran after her, but she got to the village before they could catch up with her.

"So there they were terribly heated and tired and with no vegetables to sell. Discouraged, they sat down on the horse block of the village inn.

"'After this, son,' said Farmer Brown, 'we will please ourselves. If we had both remained in the wagon and driven into the village the old horse might have been a little tired, but we could have given her a good feed of oats, and she would have been all right, and we would have had our nice fresh vegetables to sell. As it is, we have pleased no one and have lost our vegetables in the bargain.'"

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"I can't bear to think of sending her to the public school," and Mrs. Mellen gazed out of the window at the dainty little girl playing in the front yard.

"You, an American woman, feeling like that about our greatest American institution!" exclaimed her neighbor in surprise.

"I suppose it is not American, but I feel that way just the same. She is too delicate to be herded with a lot of children from all sorts of homes. She is liable to contract disease and—I do not want her to associate with all sorts and conditions of children."

"That's snobbery," replied the neighbor. "Forgive me, but I've no sympathy with that feeling. Do you propose to send her to a private school?"

"I should like to, but I can't afford it. Jack feels just as you do about it and if she goes to private school I must pay the tuition out of my allowance, and I can't manage it." And Mrs. Mellen left her seat by the window and sank into a rocking chair.

"I do not think our schools are perfect by any means, but it is not because they are free to all that I object to them," said her companion. "We need to have classes smaller, so that the teacher can get in close touch with each pupil; then sitting for hours in school rooms is contrary to child nature. Children will learn principally by means of games when the new curriculum is adopted."

"Are they getting out a new method?" asked Mrs. Mellen.

"No, not yet; but it will come some time. I heard a mother say the other day: 'Look at the years I spent in school and not one thing did I learn that is a help to me in training my children. If I had it to do over again I would take kindergarten training instead of Latin. I would take a year's instruction in nursing and a course in domestic science. I would do the whole of it in the time I spent in college, and see how much better fitted for my life work, home-making and motherhood I would be,' and she is right."

"But she would have no culture with such a course," objected Mrs. Mellen.

"I think she would," replied her friend. "One subject is just as cultural as another. Of course she would have to read widely, but the bulk of one's reading is done outside of college, you know."

"Don't you intend to send your girls to college?" asked Mrs. Mellen.

"I may, but I intend to have them trained for home-makers first. If they do not marry they will find it a good means of livelihood," replied the neighbor, collecting her sewing material preparatory to leaving.

"I wish I knew what to do about Elizabeth. This problem of education is a big one to solve," and Mrs. Mellen rose to accompany her friend to the door.

"Send her to kindergarten; that can be no mistake, and decide about the next step later," counseled her friend.

"Bring your work over tomorrow afternoon and we can have a longer talk on the subject. I will show you my scrap book of articles on every phase of the matter."

"All right, I will," answered Mrs. Mellen.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Suffragists Would Like to Have Women Vote on Suffrage.

(From N. Y. Morning Post of Jan. 8.)

In a letter written in answer to statements made by Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge, president of the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, in the papers of Wednesday morning, Mrs. Raymond Brown, president of the New York State Woman Suffrage Association, says:

"My dear Mrs. Dodge:

"In this morning's papers you are quoted as saying that Suffragists are not willing to allow the question of woman suffrage to be submitted to the women of the State for their decision, and that we know the great majority of women are opposed to their own enfranchisement.

"I am sure you could not have known of an open letter sent to Miss Chittenden nearly a year ago, which was widely published, in which we assured our friends on the other side of the question that they were laboring under a misapprehension on two points: First, that instead of being opposed, Suffragists would be very glad to have their question submitted to the women of the State for their decision; second, that a vote of women on the question, as on every other, would be illegal, and would not be permitted without an amendment to the Constitution of the State. This latter very important point—that there is no legal way of taking a vote of women—you have entirely overlooked. To chide Suffragists for not trying to do something that is legally impossible is an absurdity, you will admit.

"As to the majority of women being opposed, our experience is quite the contrary. The majority of women are simply indifferent. Whenever a comprehensive canvass is made amongst them, the large majority admit that it is just and right. We feel this so strongly that we would be very glad indeed if it could legally be left to them for a decision.

"May I also call your attention to the inconsistency of those who fight against the right of women to be allowed to voice their opinions on any other question in the same quiet, unobtrusive way men do, by means of the ballot, yet claim that they should make their decision by ballot on this one most important question."

A Reassurance from Miss Tarbell.

The following is a quotation from Miss Tarbell's editorial in the current number of the Woman's Home Companion. It is as wholesome a bit of "feminist" writing as one could wish to find.

"What Women Are Really Doing."

The truth is, there is no reason whatever for believing that revolutionary changes are going on in those relations and activities which have been regarded as basic in woman's life. She is no larger factor in industrial life than she has always been, but the form of industry has changed. It draws her into great groups, and those groups collect in cities and manufacturing towns. We see her oftener than we did when she canned and wove and sewed in small and isolated groups. She is more obvious. She marries, makes her home, bears her children. That which disconcerts those who observe her, compare her with her predecessor, and conclude she is something new in the world, is mainly that she talks, thinks, and wants things that apparently never interested her before. But this is true of men as of women. She, like him, is reacting to the new vision of the possibilities in human life.

Under the quickening power of this vision women are casting off old forms of restraint which the belief that the mass of human beings could not be trusted to look out for themselves had spun. They are putting their hands to new tasks, their heads to new thoughts. That they may give time to things which are not worth having, may doubt the significance of old things which are essential in all life, is but the human way in periods of change. When you come down to the actual facts in the case as shown in a searching document like the census, you find that whatever the stir on the surface, below, the same great occupation, the woman's profession, claims her as it always has.

Let us not be deceived. The human heart does not change. It demands its mate, always has, always will; and the mated will find a corner to themselves where they can sit by their own fire and rear their own brood.

Their corner may be a flat and not a cottage, their fire may be a gas log and not a bundle of sticks, their dinner may come in from the corner in cans and be heated and not cooked, the wife may vote and the husband may give himself a score of liberties an earlier generation would have frowned on, but what has all that to do with the foundations of life? These are but the fluctuations in ways and expressions which each succeeding generation surely brings. They may give a different setting, add a new color, or a strangely sounding note—but they do not alter the nature, the meaning, the essential character of their undertaking. Of this the Thirteenth Census offers us the proof of figures. Nor can it be doubted that each successive census will show, as this does, an increasing belief in the undertaking and an ambition to develop it to the fullest strength and beauty.

RECEPTION AND BANQUET.

The "boom committee" of the Union County Daughters of Liberty has arranged to hold a reception and banquet in honor of Mrs. Elizabeth J. Holmes, the State council from Union county, at Miller's Hall, East Scott place, Elizabeth, this evening, to which all members in Union county are invited to attend. All members of Old Glory Council wishing to go should be at Watchung avenue trolley station at 6:45 p. m., to take Main Line car to Elizabeth. The committee comprises Mrs. A. Kettering, Mrs. L. Ansen, Mrs. E. Chandler, Mrs. A. Wyckoff.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Snowball Gloves—This is given early, that the mother may use some of her spare moments preparing for the days when the youngsters will be crying because their mittens are wet and they wish to be snowballing with the rest. Take castoff stocking legs, cut in the shape of mittens, overcast and turn; a pair of gloves can be made in five minutes. With only three children in the family, one mother has found it a great satisfaction to have six or eight of these pairs ready for snow time.

An original and very satisfactory way of stiffening the little crochet articles for one's table, so popular a present, such as bonbon baskets, nut cups, etc., is to dip them in melted paraffin and shape as desired. When cold they look like white marble and can be used ever so many times; when soiled can be boiled with little trouble in a good soap suds and made like new.

When Eggs Are Scarce—You do not miss the white of eggs in griddle cakes, muffins, bread pudding, batter for French toast, etc., and it is quite an economy, when making these dishes, to drop the white in a glass and set in the cool till you have enough for a nice cake.

Wash Stockings Every Night — Stockings, silk and cotton both, will last many times as long if they are washed in a good mild soap suds after each wearing. The washing shrinks the fibers together and prevents holes from coming.

THE TABLE.

Bean Soup—Ten cents' worth salt pork in one piece; boil one hour with one small cup navy beans that have soaked two hours in warm water; one onion, pepper, salt to taste. One cup tomatoes may be added or omitted. Tomatoes gives it a nice flavor. Save the pork for baked beans. For baked beans use nearly one pound; boil one and one-half hours, then turn into a bean pot with one teaspoon sugar, one teaspoon sausage drippings or butter, pepper, salt to taste; slice pork on top of beans and bake; keep enough water on that they won't burn.

Graham Nut Bread—Half cup walnuts, half cup raisins, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon baking powder, three cups graham flour, one cup brown sugar, two cups sour milk or buttermilk, one teaspoon baking soda dissolved in the milk. Mix well together and bake about 60 minutes in moderate oven. This is very good.

Devils Food That Never Fails—Two cups brown sugar, half cup butter, two eggs, half cup sour milk, two cups sifted flour. Pour half cup boiling water over half cup grated chocolate; into this stir one teaspoon soda, then add to above mixture and beat well. Bake in three layers and put together with white frosting as follows: Take one cup granulated sugar, moisten with five tablespoons milk; place it on stove in deep dish and stir until it boils, then let it boil without stirring for about five minutes. Remove from stove and let cool a little; put in flavoring to suit and beat until it becomes a thick, creamy frosting.

Fried Whitefish with Hollandaise Sauce—Split a large whitefish and place in dish with salt and pepper; squeeze over it the juice of two lemons and let it stand for an hour. Drain, flour all over, dip in egg and fry to a light brown. Serve with following sauce: Holland sauce: Put two tablespoons butter into frying pan; when melted add two tablespoons flour, stir until smooth, then pour in two cups cold water and stir steadily until it thickens. Add a little salt and pepper, take from fire, add beaten yolks of two eggs and juice of half lemon.

Velvet Cocoa Cake—For this cake mix together and bring to boil one cup milk, yolk of one egg, two and one-half tablespoons cocoa. While this is cooling stir together one-half cup milk, one cup brown sugar, two tablespoons butter. Add first mixture and one and one-half cups sifted flour, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon baking soda dissolved in a little milk, one teaspoon vanilla. Bake in either loaf or layers, and frost with two cups brown sugar, three-fourths cup milk boiled together until it forms a ball when a few drops are tested in cold water.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Notice is hereby given that the Board of Education will meet on Monday, February 5, 1915, at 8 p. m. at the Board room in the High School building, corner Ninth Street and Arlington Avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at which time and place the said Board of Education will receive sealed proposals for furnishing 200 tons, more or less, of the best anthracite Buckwheat coal for steaming and hot-air purposes.

Parties bidding will be required to specify in their bids the name of the coal and shippers of same.

The coal to be non-clinking, thoroughly screened over a sieve fine enough to take out all dust and small particles of coal, and to be of quality acceptable to the Board of Education or their agent.

All coal to be placed in the coal bins in the High School without any extra expense to the Board for handling or trimming the coal in the bins, and to be delivered at such time as the Board my direct.

Bids to specify whether long or short tons are to be delivered.

All proposals to be sealed and endorsed "Proposals for Coal," and addressed to the Secretary of the Board.

No proposals will be opened prior to 8 p. m. Monday, February 1, 1915, and none will be received later than that hour.

Bidders may attend the meeting of the Board on February 1, 1915, and submit their bids in person, but in writing, if desired.

The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

For the Board of Education,
B. VanD. HEDGES,
Secretary.

THE INVESTMENT OF IDLE FUNDS

To persons having idle funds for investment, we offer participations in mortgages on Plainfield property in amounts of $500 or mutiples thereof.

These participations are in mortgages purchased for the investment of our own funds; the loans are made on a basis of 50% of value, the property has been carefully appraised by us, and searches have been made by our Attorney, covering the titles to property mortgaged.

This Company looks after all details involved, such as the renewal of insurance, the collection of interest, etc., and remits the interest to participants promptly on the due dates, June 1st and December 1st, so that the investor is releived of all burdensome details in connection with his investment.

We will be glad to submit further details to anyone interested in this convenient method.

DEATH TOLL MAY REACH 15,000

Official Reports States There Are More Than 50,000 Victims.

ROME SHAKEN AGAIN

Many Small Towns Are Entirely Wiped Out—King Will Visit Stricken Territory—Pope is Deeply Concerned.

Rome, Jan. 14.—Official reports received in Rome from Avezzano today declare that the dead in that city and its vicinity in the earthquake yesterday number more than 15,000 persons.

It is estimated that the total number of dead and injured will reach 50,000.

London, Jan. 14.—A news agency despatch from Rome says that a further distinct earthshock was felt in that city about 3 a. m. today. In several quarters of the city the people fled from their houses into the open air.

Rome, Jan. 14.—What was in all likelihood the worst earthquake in many years, visited Italy yesterday, killing and maiming multitudes of human beings and entailing property damage that will aggregate millions of dollars. The appalling calamity swept the vast area from Rome to the Adriatic and scores of towns were reduced to ruins. An unconfirmed report says that 1,400 lives were lost in Avezzano, a town about sixty miles east of Rome; historic buildings in the capital were destroyed and 20,000 persons were injured.

The thousands of victims, who escaped death in the stricken city of Avezzano, have sought refuge in the streets and among the partially destroyed buildings. The hospitals, many of them wrecks, have been abandoned and squads of physicians have been organized in every locality to take charge of the dying and wounded and to remove them to temporary quarters.

The shock preceded the simultaneous cave-in of thousands of buildings in the affected area, and lasted several seconds. At Avezzano the earth rocked violently, cupolas fell from houses; roofs tumbled in, and outer walls parted. It has been officially announced that the centre of the earthquake was between Campolasso and Sarno, and that it was felt strongly at Perugia and as far north as Ferrari. News is being desperately sought from the ancient city of Aquila, in the Abruzzo. It is reported that several villages near Aquila have been destroyed.

Seismologists say that the shock was the worst in over one hundred years and has resulted in the isolation of many municipalities. Owing to the fact that telegraphic communication has been cut off the exact extent of the disaster cannot be determined at this time.

LOCAL MAN IS RE-ELECTED ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT

J. Phillip Bird, of this city, was re-elected president of the Manufacturers' Association of New Jersey at the annual meeting of the organization held yesterday in Trenton, and Franklin L. Groff, also of Plainfield, was chosen as a member of the board of trustees.

The meeting followed the annual convention of the association which was held in Newark Tuesday and at which time President Bird was a speaker. Mr. Bird was also elected to head the New Jersey Manufacturers' Casualty Insurance Company.

DIES IN HOSPITAL AFTER ILLNESS OF THREE DAYS

Mrs. Jessie Wilson, aged 45 years, widow of James Wilson, died in Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday following a brief illness. Mrs. Wilson was removed to the institution Sunday when her condition grew steadily worse until yesterday, when she passed away.

Mrs. Wilson had lived here for a number of years, her home being at 923 South Second street. The deceased is survived by three sons, John Wilson, Raymond Wilson and Henry Wilson. Arrangements for the funeral services have not as yet been completed.

CREW IS RESCUED.

Washington, Jan. 14.—Life savers today rescued the crew of the schooner Gladys, which was driven on the shoals off Dight, N. C., in a heavy storm. Capt. Gilliken, of the Life Saving Station, says the vessel is doomed.

PREPARING TO OPEN FREE CLINIC HERE

Headquarters to Be on the Third Floor of Frost Building.

The Educational Clinic, conducted by Dr. Maximilian P. E. Groszmann, under the auspices of the National Association for the Study and Education of Exceptional Children, is nearly ready to begin work. It occupies rooms on the third floor of the Frost building. The good services of the Clinic are offered to the public schools, the juvenile courts and the charity organizations (a nominal registration fee of ten cents being charged in these cases). Already a number of cases have been announced for examination.

The opening of the Clinic is being greeted with enthusiasm by educators. The following are a few extracts from letters recently received:

"Your plan is a good one and deserves success. It appeals to me very strongly. It will be a pleasure and a privilege to co-operate with you in any way it may be possible.' From Richard E. Clement, superintendent of public schools, Elizabeth.

"I am in receipt of your letter regarding the services of your institution in helping us to classify exceptional children. I shall present this matter to the principals of Union county and they will undoubtedly avail themselves of the privilege offered." From A. L. Jonnson, superintendent of Union county public schools, Elizabeth.

"I want to assure you that I think your Educational Clinic for the testing of children a most excellent thing, and in the future I shall feel at liberty to call upon you if we have cases upon which we want further light; and I am sure that we have.' From Ralph Decker, superintendent of Sussex county schools, Newton.

"I realize the value of the very important work which you are doing and shall be glad to take advantage of the services which you so generously offer." From Henry Snyder, superintendent of public schools, Jersey City.

SUDDEN DEATH OF STEPHEN BICKNELL

Well Known Citizen Passes Away at His Home in Watchung.

Stephen Bicknell, aged 70 years, father of John G. Bicknell, of South avenue, died suddenly at his home on the Sterling road, Watchung, yesterday afternoon, following a five days' illness with pneumonia. Prior to that time he had been in unusual good health and his death was a shock to his many friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Bicknell was born in England, coming to this country when a young man. He had lived at Watchung for forty-five years and for a long time was engaged in farming and the milk business, his territory being in Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Mr. Bicknell was one of the oldest members of the First Presbyterian church, this city, being a regular attendant at the services. He was highly esteemed by all who knew him. There survives a wife, and three sons, John G. and Ernest Bicknell, of this city, and Alfred Bicknell, and one daughter, Miss Minneola Bicknel, of Watchung. The funeral will be held at the late home Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, will officiate. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

BORO MAN ONE OF THOSE HELD IN SUBWAY INQUEST

Among the directors of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company who were held in $1,000 bail by Coroner Riordan, yesterday, in connection with the investigation being conducted into the accident that occurred in the subway last week, is Horace M. Fisher, of North Plainfield. The men visited the coroner's office in New York, yesterday afternoon, in groups of twos and threes and gave their pedigree and signed the bail bonds. Mr. Fisher gave his age as fifty and said that he was a railroad man.

The men are all prominent in the financial world and were plainly disgruntled at having to go through the ordeal of delivering bail. Among the notables in the list were Theodore P. Shonts, August Belmont and Cornelius Vanderbilt.

BIG STORM DAMAGE ALONG THE RARITAN

Bound Brook and Somerville Property Owners Fear Another Disaster.

Property owners along the bank of the Raritan River are much concerned over the rapid rise of that stream of water, heavy rains of Tuesday night having caused the river to rise to an almost unprecedented height. At Somerville the stream is steadily rising, having increased about fifteen feet since yesterday. Several mills and other places close to the river are already flooded and much damage has been caused.

At Bound Brook, where there was a disastrous flood several years ago, the Raritan is now very close to the high water mark and is still rising. Some of the roads near the river are now under three feet of water and traffic along them has been discontinued. Local bakers and merchants who have made deliveries certain days each week to residents along the roads near the river have been forced to abandon their routes for the present until the tide resumes its normal heighth.

In Netherwood, especially in the low spots, cellars are filled with several inches of water, rain having leaked through window casings Tuesday night and early yesterday morning, and in several instances it was reported that furnace fires were put out, so high did the water in the cellar rise.

Along the Central Railroad local commuters have been greeted with small lakes that grew up in the night. Near Roselle a pond of considerable length has been formed and the Newark meadows are completely covered with a deep layer of water.

PARENT-TEACHERS HEAR LECTURE BY DR. MAXSON

Superintendent of Schools Henry M. Maxson was the speaker at the monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association, of the Washington School, held yesterday afternoon, and he took for his subject, "The Value of the Parent-Teacher Associations." Dr. Maxson spoke of the work being done by the Plainfield organizations and the field that may be covered by meetings of this nature. He dwelt on the vast good that may be wrought from conferences and the scope to be covered.

The meeting was largely attended and was followed by a social hour during which tea was served. Parents present held conferences with the various instructors in regard to work being accomplished by various students and with a view to ascertaining the weak points of each. Much good has been accomplished in the Washington School by this special department of parent-teacher co-operation and many backward students have thus been enabled to catch up with their classes.

BOROUGH FIREMEN ELECT.

The Borough Firemen's Relief Association elected officers at the annual meeting held Tuesday night, as follows: President, Walter Chandler, secretary, David Bodine; treasurer, W. W. Rowley. The relief committee as elected is composed of Charles H. Stahl, Albert Fritz, Harry Schuck, Claude Hann, David Allen, Walter Chandler, David Bodine, James Walker and William Hogan.

FRANK SMITH PRESIDENT.

Frank H. Smith, county register and a resident of this city, was Tuesday afternoon elected president of the Rahway National Bank, when the newly elected board of directors of the institution was organized. Mr. Smith succeeds William Howard, who has been the head of the bank for a long period of years.

CARNEGIE MAY ATTEND.

Washington, Jan. 14—The twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Washington Board of Trade will be observed tonight. Andrew Carnegie and Gen. George H. Harries, the only honorary members of the Board, are expected to be present and address the gathering.

BIBLE READINGS.

Rev. W. W. Newbury, of Newark, will give Bible lessons tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 and in the evening at 7:45 o'clock, at the German Reformed church, at Duer street and Craig place. All Bible students are cordially invited to attend.

BRIGHTSIDE CIRCLE MEETING.

Brightside Circle, of King's Daughters, will hold its monthly meeting this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Emily Cory, 45 Jackson avenue, the borough.

FORMER LOCAL MAN ARRESTED FOR FRAUD

Marvin E. Parrott, Wanted by Local Authorities, is Arrested in New York.

Alleged to have swindled several individuals and firms, Marvin E. Parrott, at one time employed as a reporter by a local newspaper, and who has been wanted for frauds said to have been committed by him in this city, was apprehended by the New York police, yesterday, and held in $2,500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. Parrott is an ex-convict of many aliases and was arrested following a long search conducted by the New York World.

According to the charge he inserted an advertisement in the Metropolitan daily April 9 last, for a collector. Charles J. Wetterau, of No. 5 West One Hundred and Second street, New York, answered the advertisement. He testified yesterday that Parrott hired him, induced him to give up $75 as security, and then disappeared. The World has the names of several other complainants who claim to have been swindled by Parrott.

It was for a similar swindle that Judge Malone, on December 19, 1910, sentenced him to not less than two and a half nor more than four and a half years in Sing Sing Prison.

He is said to have passed worthless checks while a resident of this city.

S. W. RUSHMORE SAYS HE KEPT AGREEMENT

Question Was Raised Over the Form of Bond He Was to Furnish.

Regarding the suit in Chancery in which the Bosch Magneto Company allege that Samuel W. Rushmore failed to keep an agreement made by him to furnish a $100,000 indemnity bond in connection with the sale by him of the Rushmore Dynamo Works in this city to the above-named company, Mr. Rushmore stated today that at the time he sold his plant to the Bosch Magneto Company he fulfilled every agreement, giving the bond as he agreed.

Mr. Rushmore adds that this bond was passed upon by his attorneys as well as those of the company, but that a representative of the company put a different construction on the wording of the bond and sought to secure one that would protect the company from all sorts of damages, including patent suits.

It was further stated by Mr. Rushmore that the relations between himself and the company is harmonious in every way, and that the company was assured that the Bijur Motor Lighting Company had no valid claim against the Bosch Magneto Company and that it had nothing to fear.

The bond which Mr. Rushmore says he furnished the company at the time of the sale, he avers protects the company against patent suits for a period of two years from last May, he agreeing to defend any action brought in connection with patents he sold to the company.

REMAINS OF UNIDENTIFIED TRAIN VICTIM ARE BURIED

Funeral services for an accident victim known to the local morgue keeper as "John Rush" were held at 220 West Second street, this morning, interment being made in Plainfield avenue cemetery.

The man was killed by a Reading "flyer" on the Central Railroad near the Fanwood "cut," December 23 and his body has been at the morgue awaiting identification since that time. By means of notes found in his pocket it was learned that his name was John Rush, but efforts to unearth his family were futile.

FUNERAL OF SAMUEL GILES.

The funeral service of Samuel N Giles was held at his late home on West Front street at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon, being largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, pastor of the First M. E. church, of which Mr. Giles was a member, officiated. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

RETURNS FROM CONVENTION.

Physical Director Robert Meermans, of the local Y. M. C. A., returned home last night, from Perth Amboy, where he attended a two days' session of physical directors of the State.

MRS. MARY A. FAULKNER PASSES AWAY IN FANWOOD

Mrs. Mary A. Faulkner, aged sixty-seven years, widow of the late Frank G. Faulkner, died this morning after a lingering illness, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Norton, in Fanwood. Mrs. Faulkner, who has been a resident of Fanwood during the past twelve years, formerly lived in Brooklyn, where she was a member of the board of directors of the Brooklyn Orphan Asylum for many years. During her residence in Fanwood she was actively associated with the work of the Scotch Plains Baptist church.

Beside her daughter, Mrs. Faulkner is survived by two sisters, Mrs. H. P. Robinson and Mrs. Frank Christopher, both of Fanwood. The funeral services will be held at the late home on Martine avenue, Fanwood, Saturday afternoon at 2:45 o'clock, Rev. J. Madison Hare, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, officiating. The interment will be made Sunday morning at the Cypress Hill cemetery, Brooklyn.

OBSERVED HER BIRTHDAY.

Katherine Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William F. Wilson, of West Front street, was given a birthday party yesterday afternoon, by her parents in honor of her fourth natal anniversary. It was attended by twenty of her little friends, who enjoyed several hours with games and other diversions, followed by a birthday supper. Mrs. Wilson was assisted in entertaining the children by her mother-in-law, Mrs. W. W. Wilson.

BIBLE CLASS FOR WOMEN.

A Bible class for women is to be organized at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in connection with the Sunday-school, at 10 o'clock Sunday morning. The members of the new organization will meet in the body of the church, and will be conducted by Miss Caroline Palmer, of the Bible Teachers' Training School, of New York city.

CHURCH OFFICERS ELECTED.

The congregation of the Netherwood Reformed church held a meeting last evening, when Horace J. Martin and James C. Hansen were elected elders, and I. P. Wahlig, J. R. Woorster and Edward W. Hughes were elected to the board of deacons. The annual meeting of the church body will be held early in April.

LOCAL CLERGYMAN CHOSEN.

Rev. Edward S. Ralston, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, was elected vice chairman of the New York State Conference of Religion, at the annual meeting of the organization, Monday afternoon. Dr. James M. Whiton, brother of John H. Whiton, of this city, was elected chairman.

PUBLIC DEDICATION OF SCHOOL ADDITION

Fitting Ceremonies to Mark Completion of Plainfield High School.

The Board of Education is planning to throw open to the public the completed High School building on the evening of Monday, January 25, when the opening exercises will be held.

The program will be short and informal, consisting of music, and addresses by William S. Tyler, president of the Board, Mayor Calkins, Supt. Henry M. Maxson, State Commissioner of Education C. N. Kendall and W. D. Murray, representing the Alumni Association.

It is expected that the speakers will choose some educational topic for their addresses. Nothing of a formal character will mark the occasion, which the Board wishes to make first of all a sort of public housewarming for the new building in which the community may justly take a great deal of pride, and which houses every day more than 1,100 of the children of the city, besides four hundred evening students of all ages.

One of the chief objects of the Board in holding the exercises is to give every one a chance to see just now fine a chance our young people are given to get the best possible opportunity to develop their minds and bodies in the Plainfield schools.

The exercises will begin about 8 o'clock and both before and after the speeches the public will be shown over the building by the school officials and a volunteer corps of undergraduate guides.

The building itself is very well worth a trip. From the top floor where the labratories and domestic science rooms are located, to the big boiler and fan rooms where the heat and ventilation are provided for it, stands as one of the best examples of efficient and substantial school construction in the State.

Every one is urged to come and see what sort of a building Plainfield has and every effort will be made to make the visitors welcome.

ALLEGE CONSUMER OBTAINED FREE GAS

Public Service Charges Boro Man With Connecting House With Main.

Decision was reserved yesterday by Justice Thomas H. Snape, in the case of the Public Service Gas Company vs. David C. Allen, of 27 Harrison avenue, the borough. The defendant was arraigned on the charge brought against him by the company, alleging that Mr. Allen had connected with the gas main without the consent of the company and had used gas without a meter. The alleged connection was made on or before December 18 of last year. Through his attorney, City Judge William G. DeMeza, Mr. Allen denied the allegations.

Several bookkeepers employed by the corporation, testified that Mr. Allen's name did not appear on the books of the company as one having an account with them. Mr. Allen denied making the connection and the use of gas.

The complaint sworn out by the Public Servce Company was issued before Judge Snape, December 28, while the hearing was scheduled for the following day, but was laid over until yesterday. Judge Snape will render his decision tomorrow.

This is one of two cases of this nature to be tred in this State, and much interest is taken in what may be the ultimate outcome. The other case was heard several months ago in Newark.

WILL ASK SUPREME COURT TO RENEW THE QUESTIONS

Elizabeth, Jan. 14.—Dissatisfied with the result of the suit of Rachel C. Richards and her husband, William E., against Frederick F. Proctor and Harry Sanderson, of the Plainfield Theatre, which was nonsuited, W. S. Angleman, counsel for the Richards, had Judge Speer grant his application yesterday to certify the latter's opinion in the case to the Supreme Court, so that the questions involved can be reviewed. Mrs. Richars sued to recover for injuries sustained at the theatre.

FRESH TROOPS ARRIVE

French Admit They Were Forced to Cede Ground at Vregny—Floods Put Communication of Troops in Precarious Condition.

Paris, Jan. 14.—The French war office gave out the following statement this afternoon:

"Between the Lys and Oise in the region of Lens our artillery has dispersed sappers and trench diggers working in the environs of Angres, and has bombarded effectively the trenches located to the southeast of the Shrine of Notre Dame De Lorette. To the north of Soissons violent combats were fought. The action was localized on the ground between the two ridges located in the northeast and the northwest of Crouy, of which we hold only the first slopes. On the left our counter attacks made some slight progress without having been able nevertheless to make an appreciable advance. At the centre we maintained our position around the village of Crouy despite repeated efforts by the enemy, but to the east before Vregny we have been forced to cede ground. The persistent swelling of the Aisne has carried away several bridges and ferries, which we had thrown across the stream, putting the lines of communication of our troops in a very precarious condition. Under these circumstances we have established ourselves to the south of the river in the section of ground lying between Crouy and Missy with the heads of the bridges upon the north bank. In Champagne the region of Perthes continues to be the theatre of local action for possession of German trenches of the second or third line. There is nothing to report on the rest of the front."

Berlin, Jan. 14 (By wireless via Sayville).—The following statement was given out at German headquarters today:

"In the western theatre of war in the Dunes of Nieuport and southeast of Ypres artillery combats are continuing. The enemy's batteries have directed an extremely strong fire at Westende, which they will soon entirely destroy. The enemy's torpedo boats disappeared as soon as they received our fire. In the continuation of activities on January 8 our troops again attacked the heights of Vregny and cleared the plain of the enemy. In a pouring rain trench after trench was stormed until after dark the enemy had been driven back to the border of the plain. We took fourteen officers, 1,130 men, four cannon, four machine guns and one searchlight. The brilliant feat of arms of our troops was accomplished under the very eyes of the uppermost war lords. Northeast of Chalons the French again attacked morning and afternoon. Strong forces, which at Perthes penetrated our trenches, were repulsed, counter attacked and driven back with heavy losses. We took 160 prisoners in the Argonne.

"In the eastern theatre of war Russian attacks southeast of Gumbiennen and east of Loetzen have been repulsed. We took hundreds of prisoners. The situation in northern Poland is unchanged. Nothing important has happened on the east bank of the Pilica."

Paris, Jan. 14.—The Ministry of Marine today issued an unequivocal denial of the report that the French battleship Courbet was sunk by an Austrian submarine in the straits of Otranto or in the Adriatic Sea. The statement also denied that the Jean Bart was damaged in the least. No French warship has been sunk by a submarine, declares the statement by the ministry and but one has sustained unimportant damage. The Courbet was not in the vicinity of the reported attack by Austrian submarines at that time.

Berne, Jan. 14.—The Roumanian legation in this city has announced that all deserters from the Roumanian army as well as all citizens of Roumania, who left that country without performing their required military service will be pardoned if they return to the country and serve in the army.

New York, Jan. 14.—Broomhall sent the following cable from Liverpool today: "Our agent at Rosario cables there has been a severe cyclone in Argentina and fears are entertained of extensive damage. Interior communications are broken. The situation in Austria is grave. Wheat is being hoarded and the official price as fixed a mskes it practically impossible to obtain the necessary supplies for current needs. Many mills have been closed.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

MINOR DAMAGE BY STORM IN DUNELLEN

Electric Lighting System Out of Commission and Trees Injured.

Considering the damage done by the storm of Tuesday night and Wednesday morning to other places, Dunellen and vicinity got off lucky. The roof rafters of the new house that Contractor A. H. Bardick is erecting for L. W. Treichler on Mountainview terrace, were torn off by the gale. A chimney on the home of Edward Gray on First street was blown over, the bricks thumping down the roof and awakening the entire family.

A tree near the residence of C. H. Holbrook, on Greenbroad road, was pulled out by its roots and in crashing to the ground brought the electric wire which feeds this borough with it. This resulted in the house lights all over town going out early in the evening. The second reel of a six-reel feature was being shown in the local theatre at the time and the audience, after a vain wait of ten minutes or so for the lights to come on, left the house.

The wire was restrung by 3 o'clock in the morning and the current turned on again. A number of residents neglected to turn off the buttons of the lights after they gave out and early pedestrians saw houses that were generally in darkness all aglow.

The deluge resulted in the brooks of the borough overflowing their banks. The waters of the brook that flows through the bridge across New Market road, south of Grove street, backed up half way from the bridge to Washington avenue, forming a miniature lake, to the delight of kids on their way to school.

The waters of Green brook were the highest they have been for years, rising to within four inches of the eye beams of the new truss Washington avenue bridge and flooding across the street at a point north of the second bridge, doing considerable damage to the roadway.

At New Market the new ice house of Dr. W. J. Nelson was blown down and the top torn off of a silo on the J. M. Evans farm.

LIVELY RUNAWAY CAUSES EXCITEMENT IN THE BORO

A sorrel horse belonging to the Park Hotel stable tore itself loose from the shafts of a cab yesterday, when a bolt holding the whiffle-tree worked loose. Paul Rabouin was in charge of the cab and in it at the time were two fares, Miss Katrine Crouss and her brother, John, of William street, New Market. They had just gotten in to be taken to Dunellen and Rabouin had no more than plied his whip when the whiffle-tree came loose, scaring the animal. The horse was not long in tearing loose and the momentum of the horseless cab was quickly stopped by the shafts as they scraped over the ground. Outside of a possible nervous shock, the rsults of which may follow, none of the occupants were the worse for their experience.

The horse in its wild flight turned from William street into Prospect avenue and down that thoroughfare to North avenue, this place, where it turned east. A number made a futile effort to stop the animal as it sped along North avenue endangering traffic and life. The flight of the animal continued along North avenue until Rock avenue had been reached, when it turned south. The animal, completely played out by fright and the pace that it had maintained, stopped at the gates of the Rock avenue railroad crossing, which had been lowered to allow a train to pass, and meekly submitted to being caught by a pedestrian who happened to be near.

Miss Frances Campbell, who has been visiting at the home of C. L. Wahl, Jr., on Washington avenue, since Saturday, returned to her home at Scranton, Pa., today.

After the installation of officers, J. H. L. Peters, who has been treasurer of the court for the past twenty years, was presented with a badge beautifully engraved with the emblem of the court. The presentation speech was made by Editor George W. Day, of the Weekly Call, who spoke of Mr. Peters as a man steadfast in his home and whatever he undertakes. Magnus Johnson, the retiring chief ranger, was presented with a solid gold watch. The presentation speech was made by L. T. Titsworth, who called attention to the fact that Mr. Johnson has been a member of the court for twenty-one years during which time he has been through the chairs three times and has only missed four meeting nights. The program of the evening was concluded by departing for Trewin's restaurant, where an oyster supper topped with fragrant Havanas, was enjoyed by all.

MAY ABOLISH COMPULSORY CHAPEL RULE AT PRINCETON

Princeton, Jan. 14.—Compulsory chapel at Princeton University may see its doom at the midwinter meeting of the university board of trustees today. Students now are compelled to attend chapel twice weekly and half the Sundays of the month.

During the past year and a half strenuous objection among the student body has arisen on the ground that the attitude of mind with which the average undergraduate attends week-day chapel is far from a worshipful one and amounts to nothing more than a fostering by the university authorities of a spirit of hypocrisy.

In order that the question of compulsory chapel might receive the attention of the university board of trustees the senior council, the representative body of the students, is bringing it before them by means of a letter to the secretary of the board.

The student body is backed up in its opinion by the faculty of the university. The opinion of the faculty has already been shown in that they have voted twice against the system that now prevails. The undergraduate body has declared itself strongly opposed to compulsory chapel through the secret ballots on the question which have been taken this fall.

Andrew Saffron, of the police department, has removed from 215 Spooner avenue to 681 West Third street.

Miss Frances Newman, of Duer street, the borough, is spending a few days visiting relatives at East Rutherford and Garfield.

—At Westfield, C. F. Wittke has the Daily Press on sale each day.

Do YOUR part for a better and bigger Plainfield.

Interesting to Men--But to Women

The question of cultivation of good taste in a home means the purchase of whatever improves the appearance, comfort and welfare of every one connected with it. The woman is the purchasing agent of the American home; keenly interested in high grade merchandise and table goodies; the kind presented by Plainfield merchants, backed by prompt courteous attention, a stock of large variety to select from, and prices that are no higher than the stores of other cities.

Trading in Plainfield is the easiest, safest, and most profitable, and when you purchase an article that is not entirely satisfactory you experience no difficulty in having it exchanged or your money refunded. On the other hand, can an article purchased in stores in these other cities afford you the same protection as our Plainfield merchants? Sometimes an article can be exchanged, but then it is necessary to have it travel 20 or 25 miles back to the store where you purchased it, and the second selection forwarded to you, and if you wern't fortunate enough to make a second selection on the day you did your shopping you are either obliged to make it from a catalog or take another trip yourself to straighten the matter out. Do your shopping in your home town and avoid any unnecessary risks or delays. Help your city to grow.

WALDRON DECLARES HE IS INNOCENT

Tells Court That He Did Not Assault Mrs. Carrie Francis.

Clarence Waldron, the Dunellen youth who is held in jail in default of $2,000 bail on a serious charge made by Mrs. Carrie Francis, of North avenue, Dunellen, is hopeful that he will secure his release from jail before night. He had a conference with his counsel, former Assistant Prosecutor Joseph E. Stricker, at the jail and declared his innocence.

Mr. Stricker afterward said that he had not looked into the case sufficiently to discuss it, but he was convinced that his client was not guilty of the charge. He commented upon the unreasonableness of the charge, an assault by a boy of twenty upon a woman of thirty-five, alleged to have been committed on a public highway of Dunellen on New Year's Eve, when people were up and about welcoming the new year.

The boy's uncle, former Sheriff Sebring, of Union county, was bondsman for the boy since his arrest on New Year's day. When Waldron was arraigned Tuesday, and Justice Lay fixed a bail bond at $2,000 the uncle got the impression that that would mean $4,000 bail in all and he declined to go on such a bond. The boy believes that when it is explained to him that the total bond is only $2,000 that his uncle will execute the bond.

Mrs. Francis, who is an attractive looking woman, had alighted from a trolley car near the Dunellen borough hall New Year's Eve, according to the story, and was on her way home, on North avenue, nearly oposite Lincoln, when Waldron sprang from a shadow of a tree and seized her, throwing her to the ground.

She screamed and Marshal Patrick J. Tarpy, who was nearby guarding the borough fire bell from New Year's frolickers, ran to her rescue. Waldron, it is alleged, took to his heels and it was only after a long chase that he was caught. The State has an affidavit from a witness who is alleged to have witnessed the assault, to corroborate the woman's evidence.

REPORT UNCONFIRMED.

Washington, Jan. 14.—At the Department of Agriculture today no information could be obtained as to the truth of a report from Chicago that officials of the Government had recommended the closing of the Chicago stock yards Saturday night, for cleaning purposes.

RIFLE CLUBS TO BE FORMED IN CITY AND BORO SCHOOLS

As a result of a agitation started by several members of the city and borough High Schools, a rifle club for members of these two institutions will be formed next week at the Company K armory. There are about forty boys who will join the club with the object of learning thoroughly the parts and use of a gun.

Company K has decided to take this matter up and will supply the firearms and ammunition as well as the instruction. One of the officers of the company will have charge of the club at the start and then if any of the members show efficiency enough to handle it, other arrangements will probably be made.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

Sixteen representatives of the association attended the convention held in New York, Tuesday and Wednesday. Several of those who intended to go could not. All of the addresses of the convention were very interesting and dwelt on the work of the work of the association in the northeastern field.

The annual meeting of the membership will be held next Monday night at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is desired as it is an important meeting. The election of officers will be held.

There will be no more Tuesday night Bible class suppers until further notice.

The regular vesper service will be held Sunday, January 24. At that time Miss Mabelle Phillips, of the Plainfield Charity Organization, will give a talk on "Child Labor."

Because of the annual meeting which will be held Monday night, the first meeting of the new swimming class has been postponed one week and will meet January 25.

NO OFFICIAL ASSURANCES.

New York, Jan. 14.—There is high authority for the statement that no official assurances have been received here that the Villa and Zapata groups will soon turn back to the directors and officers of the Mexican National Railways the operation of the property. Rumors to this effect have been in circulation for some time, but they have not been credited by local representatives of the company, nor by others vitally interested in its securities and the future of the property.

FAVORS INCREASE OF AUTOMOBILE SPEED LIMIT

Trenton, Jan. 14.—In his annual report to the Legislature, reviewing the work of his department for the past year, State Motor Vehicle Commissioner Job H. Lippincott discusses speed regulation for automobiles and favors an increase in the maximum speed limit. Commission Lippincott expresses the belief that New Jersey might follow the lead of New York and several other States by increasing the maximum speed of motor vehicles to 30 miles an hour in the open country and to 15 miles an hour in the city.

The speed permitted by the present law is 12 miles per hour in built-up portions of cities and towns where the houses are an average of less than 100 feet apart and 25 miles per hour in the open country, with a special proviso that no drivers shall be permitted to operate a car at any speed greater than is reasonable for safety to travellers on the highway.

FOURTH ENTERTAINMENT IN ELKS' WINTER SERIES TONIGHT

Members of the local Elks' Club will entertain their friends in the Watchung avenue clubhouse tonight, the affair being the fourth of a series arranged for the winter months. The committee in charge has prepared an excellent program and Van Epps' orchestra, of this city, will furnish the music. Accompanying the orchestra will be the famous Victor drummer, who will render several instrumental selections.

Dancing will be the chief attraction tonight, and during the intermissions refreshments will be provided. The Plainfield Elks will bowl a match series in the Elks' Senior tourney on the Watchung avenue alleys and this will be an added feature of the event tonight, the guests being allowed to witness the struggle.

The fifth of the series will be held the 26th of this month. Individual numbers will be rendered by talented members of the club.

MISS VERDI TO PLAY.

An added feature on the program that has been arranged by Temple Sholem for its annual entertainment at Columbus Club next Wednesday night, is Miss Verno Verdi, a talented violinist of New York, who will entertain with solo selections. Arrangements have been completed by the committee in charge and dancing will follow the program. The entertainment will begin at 8 o'clock.

PIONEER RESIDENT DIES AT 103 YEARS

Nelson Peterson, One of Plainfield's First Settlers, Passes Away.

Plainfield's oldest resident, Nelson Peterson, colored, died at the home of his daughter, 666 South Second street, at 6:30 o'clock this morning, at the age of 103. Mr. Peterson was born in this city during the War of 1812 and never strayed far from the confines of the Queen City. He is the only individual in this section who has passed the century mark in age and during his long regime here gained a wide circle of acquaintances.

He has been employed on several different occasions by well-known families in Plainfield and only recently gave up his active duties and entered the Industrial Home. He left that institution a short time ago, however, and went to live with his daughter.

Octogenarians will remember the old man's cabin on the banks of Green brook near West End avenue when it was one of the only structures in that section. He was known for his ability to play the violin and gatherings of young people outside his cabin door on summer nights were frequent scenes.

Funeral services will be held from 200 West Second street, Saturday afternoon, and burial will be made in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

CHARGES AGAINST ROAD DEPARTMENT

Thomas J. McGovern, Contractor, Files Statement at Trenton.

Trenton, Jan. 14—Thomas J. McGovern, a Trenton road constructor, has filed a statement with the joint appropriations committee of the Legislature of 1914, making charges against the State Road Department. Mr. McGovern has been anxious to testify ever since this committee began its investigation into the State Road Department and road building methods, but was not called by Chairman Charles O'Connor Hennessy, of Bergen county.

It will be remembered that Mr. McGovern attempted to make a statement at a recent sitting of the committee, but as the attempt was an informal one unofficially made, Chairman Hennessy refused to permit him to be heard.

The charges now made by McGovern relate to the paving of the Trenton-Lawrenceville road in Mercer county, for which he was an unsuccessful bidder. He alleges that the specifications were "doctored;" that favoritism was displayed by the State Road Department officials as to the materials to be used for the work.

SEEKS INFORMATION ABOUT RANGE OF SEACOAST GUNS

Washington, Jan. 14—The House today passed a resolution introduced by Representative Gardner, of Massachusetts, calling upon Secretary of War Garrison for information as to the comparative strength and range of fire of the American seacoast guns as compared with the modern naval guns now mounted on foreign war vessels.

MAKE YOURS A PUBLIC SERVICE STORE

This is the age of service. The rewards of today go to the men who give the most in return.

Translated for you, Mr. Merchant,* this means that the customers are certain to patronize the store that will give them what they want when they want it.

Cut prices may bring some trade, but better service will bring more.

This is the age when people are reading the advertising in their daily newspapers because they are finding it a distinct part of the service they expect their newspapers to give.

When a nationally distributed article of merit is advertised in the newspapers a demand for it sets in right away.

People want to see it and, if satisfied, want to buy it.

They are going to turn to the store that lets them know it has the article. That store will be giving them the service they want at that particular moment.

If it is a good article they are going to remember the store where they got it and will come back to that store again.

Co-operate with the manufacturers who come into the newspapers of your town to exploit their goods and you will be building business for yourself.

—DETERMINED classified advertisers always win; and, sometimes, even the timid, try it once people win, too.

—Write a better "To Let" advertisement than is printed today, and see how quickly you'll find a tenant.

PUT BACK THE WHISTLE.

There is nothing which the people of Plainfield have been deprived of in late years that is so much missed as the blowing of the fire whistle, not only for alarms but at noon and five o'clock. It played a part in the everyday life of every resident of the city, more especially those who are here during the day time, and no one would criticize the continuation of the expenditure of $550 a year to keep it going, were the fire board able to find a place to put it.

It would seem that the absence of the whistle might cause serious trouble in case of a bad fire. Chief Doane, as building inspector, is required to be away from headquarters a good part of the time, and he frequently has to use his auto in going about the city because of the distances he has to travel. That means that one piece of apparatus is frequently where it will be of no service to the department. Morning, noon and night the crews at the fire houses are cut in half for periods of two hours each, while the men go for their meals. Were the whistle used they could easily be called back in case of need, but under the present method the department would have to tackle a blaze at those hours with a depleted force.

If Plainfield had a big fire department, such as is to be found in the large cities, the absence of a general alarm call would not be noticeable but since the call men have been dropped the number of men in the department is none too great, even when all are in the houses. If a manufacturing plant can be found where steam is kept up day and night, it is to be hoped that the whistle will be placed in operation again.

GAME, STOCK AND CITIZENS.

The epidemic of foot-and-mouth disease and its effect on the packing industry and the stock yards of Chicago have been commented on widely. The Chicago Journal recently took the best available estimates of the amount of live stock contained in the State and figuring on an average value of horses at $140 a head, milk cows at $65, other cows at $50, swine at $15, sheep at $6 and mules at $150, the Journal says the total value of live stock in Illinois would be $435,276,000, for the protection of which the State Legislature appropriated for the current year a total of $37,340. By way of comparison, it is shown that the appropriation for the protection of fish and game for the same period amounts to $151,600.

The Journal properly characterizes such a situation as "intolerable." It says, "To spend four times as much money protecting quail, ducks and prairie chickens as we spend in caring for one of the basic industries of the State is sheer communal lunacy." This is true. The farmers and business men of Illinois, and every other State where like conditions exist, should see to it that every cent that is necessary to protect the live stock of the State is provided, no matter what economies may be necessary in other directions.

The Journal of the American Medical Association asks if such appropriations are justified for the protection of the lives and health of animals, how much should be appropriated to protect the lives and health of the men, women and children of the State? Certainly more than for fish, game and live stock. Yet the appropriation for the protection of the 5,638,591 men, women and children in the State was for 1914 only $120,000, $30,000 less than was appropriated for the protection of fish and game. Are the lives of the citizens of any State of any less value than the preservation of quail and bass?

RED FIRE RELIGION.

Billy Sunday has been asked by some of his Philadelphia supporters to tone down his manner of expounding religion. His method of appealing to sinners in the cities he has visited has been criticised, but we doubt whether he will make a change when he can attract 50,000 Philadelphians to a building which holds but 20,000. That some people were hurt in the mad rush to hear Sunday's unique handling of the gospel is to be regretted, but the scenes can only be taken as evidence that the masses like that method of teaching Bible truths.

Some church people have branded Sunday's methods as "coarse talk," "vulgar anathema," "oddity of manner," "slang," and "wild exhortations," but whatever they are called they seem to bring repentant crowds to the sinner's bench wherever he appears.

Different revivalists and different preachers interpret the Bible and religion in different ways. The Sunday way is unconventional and unique. From what has been the experience in this and other cities there are thousands and thousands of people who are willing to listen to exhortations upon their religious obligations in the Sunday style, and there is the indisputable fact that the evangelist's manner of doing his work has in every instance resulted in a spiritual awakening among many, many thousands. So it must be conceded that Mr. Sunday is a force for good.

Our suffrage friends take exception to statements which appeared in these columns a few days ago, which were quoted from Gordon's History of New Jersey, published in 1834. Mrs. E. F. Feickert, in a letter which appears in the Forum column today, says that Mr. Gordon's facts were at variance with the truth, and really were not facts at all.

The West End avenue sage rises to remark that a good use for the discarded fire whistle would be to blow it to announce the arrival and departure of the Arlington avenue trolley cars. Judging from the service recently it would not have to be put into use any oftener than it was for fires.

The contributed editorial for Saturday has been written by a man who has reached the top notch in his chosen profession. He will discuss a topic which is receiving more and more attention from the American people as time progresses.

"The Wickedest Man in Plainfield" is to be the subject of a sermon by a local minister tonight. If there was any assurance that names would be mentioned there would not be a building in the city big enough to hold the crowd.

Two feet of water covered the main street of Seabright yesterday morning. During the last two years it has just been one flood after another in that well known resort. Arks should make popular abodes there.
